

NOTES

ON THE

WEST INDIES.

VOL. II.

Strahan and Preston, Printers-Street, London.

2

NOTES.

WEST INDIES.

NOTES

ON THE

WEST INDIES:

WRITTEN DURING THE EXPEDITION UNDER THE COMMAND OF THE LATE GENERAL SIR RALPH ABERCROMBY :

INCLUDING OBSERVATIONS ON THE ISLAND OF BARBADOES, AND THE SETTLEMENTS CAPTURED BY THE BRITISH TROOPS, UPON THE COAST OF GUIANA:

LIKEWISE REMARKS RELATING TO THE CREOLES AND SLAVES OF THE WESTERN COLONIES, AND THE INDIANS OF SOUTH AMERICA:

WITH OCCASIONAL HINTS, REGARDING

The Seatoning, or yellow Feber

OF HOT CLIMATES.

By GEORGE PINCKARD, M. D.

OF THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS, BEPUTY INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF HOSPITALS TO HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES, AND PHYSICIAN TO THE BLOOMSBURY DISPENSARY.

IN THREE VOLUMES.

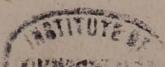

VOL. II.

It is a firange thing that in fea-voyages, where there is nothing to be feene, but fky and fea, men fhould make diaries; but in land-trauaile, wherin fo much is to bee obferued, for the most part they omit it; as if chance were fitter to be registered than obferuation. LORD VERULAMA

London :

PRINTED FOR LONGMAN, HURST, REES, AND ORME, PATERNOSTER-ROW.

1806.

CONTENTS

THE SECOND VOLUME.

OF

LETTER I.

AUTHOR and his friends wait for General Whyte, and the Cork convoy. Friendly altercation between the author and his comrades. Cork fleet driven back to Cove. The Hindostan and Abergavenny arrive from Ireland. The Mary Ifabella, from England, after a passage of fifteen weeks. Author and his comrades ordered upon duty. Troops arrive unhealthy. Two-deck ships bad transports. State of negroes in flave ships, contrasted with foldiers in transports. Degree of heat March 23d. Remarks upon a French paper, complaining of the professional practice of the British medical officers in St. Domingo, - Page 1

LETTER II.

Author apprehensive of fatiguing his friend with tales of delay and disappointment. A fleet of merchantmen arrives at Barbadoes after a short passage. The heavens and the seas exclusively opposed to the convoys of the expedition. Supply of provisions and stock at Barbadoes. Single ships of the convoys still continue to arrive. George and Bridget reaches Carlisle bay. This ship singularly the seat of incident and disaster. Character of Mac- : His adventures and vexations concerning a cow, - Page 15

LETTER III.

A Common fignal of alarm converted into an enfign of joy. Acutenefs of failors in difcovering the nature and extent of a fleet at fea. Convoy from Cork arrives on the 1 ft of April. Its entrance into Carlifle bay an interesting scene. Author and his comrades expect to proceed to St. Domingo. Voyage thither from Barbadoes only a pleasant run, down the trades, - 51

LETTER IV.

Creole languor from heat of climate—favorable to the Brunonian doctrine. Effect of climate upon a Dutch failor. Lord Sheffield hailed by a man in the fea. An intoxicated failor overawed by the prefence of a fuperior, - 56

LETTER V.

A furgical operation performed with great dexterity by a negro. Progrefs of chigoes in the foot. Negroes expert in finding them. Mode of extracting them. Indolent toil of flaves. Inconvenient method of labour. Severity used towards a party of flaves. Brigands defeated at Grenada. Officers lost, of the name of Edwards. Single soft for arrive in Carlisle bay. Reports respecting the St. Domingo division. Sir John La Forey arrives at Barbadoes, 62

LETTER VI.

vii

General Remarks concerning Barbadoes. Different appearance of the West India Islands, and the opposite coast. Situation and extent of Barbadoes. Period of fettlement. General face of the Island :-- called aged and decrepit. Inhabitants proud of its antiquity. Early commerce and population of Barbadoes. Its decline from its former prosperity. Middle class of Inhabitants. Temperature and falubrity of the atmosphere. Exemption from important ills. Endemial malady. Carlifle bay. Whence fo named. Towns, houfes, buts, cottages and other buildings. Varied and intereffing scenery. Hospitality of the Inhabitants. Remarks concerning the distinctive appellation of the two divisions of the armament. Difficulty of afcertaining which the windward, and which the leeward islands, according to the common acceptation. Soil of Barbadoes. Remarks on tillage and cul-Small cattle kept for the purpose of supplying mativation. nure. Wet and dry feafons. Sea and land breeze. Equal length of the days. Absence of twilight. Perpetual summer compared with the delighting novelty of an English Spring. Remarks upon Spring. An English scene in the month of May, - Page 72

Regularity observed at Barbadoes in regard to rising and going to rest. Land and sea breeze. Diet and mode of serving the table. Planters and merchants sometimes grow sat: clerks, book-keepers, &c. very thin. Condiments much used. Plenty deemed a greater excellence than delicacy of assortiment at a Barbadoes feast. A West India dinner. English habit of driving ladies from the dinner table practifed also at Barbadoes. Bad arrangement of dinner parties. Attend. ants of the table numerous. Odour of the negroes offenfive Stock and provisions abundant at Barbadoes. Perfonal clothing of the inhabitants—Bed clothing. Languid pronunciation of Barbadoes creoles. Concerning the flate of the flaves. Old and decrepit negroes allowed to beg, and to lie about the streets. First example of flaves feen by the author and his comrades. The negroes of the poorer owners distinguished from those of the more opulent. Clothing of flaves. Construction of their dwellings. Negroes chilly, and hover round a fire in the evening ;—are fond of smoking tobacco. Food iffued to the flaves. Pepper-pot. Hours of toil. Deficiency of moral principle among flaves, Page 95

Concerning the elephantiasis, or endemial malady of Barbadoes, - - - - 119

Farms in Barbadoes termed plantations or eflates. Poor cottagers. Native Barbadians. Their extravagant opinion concerning the importance of the ifland. Examples in proof that the negro form and colour are not the mere confequence of climate and locality, - - - I3I

No accurate tidings at Barbadoes of the approach of the Portfmouth Convoy. Symptoms of the troops moving. Drs. Henderfon and Cave ordered to remain in charge of the fick of the St. Domingo division. Author cautions his friend not to listen to the alarming rumours of sickness, and death. Great numbers in hospital :- their maladies mild, and European-not endemic. Author witness a case of yellow fever in company with Dr. Jackson, - 140

LETTER VII.

Further hope—and further difappointment. Another division of the Portsmouth convoy reaches Barbadoes. Rumour of a secret expedition. Concerning the probable separation of the author and his comrades. Expertness of negroes in the water. One of their modes of Bathing. Negroes attentive to their teeth. Mode of cleaning them with sand and sea water, - Page 145

LETTER VIII.

Author feparated from his long affociated comrades. Embarks on board the Grenada, on a fecret expedition. Conjectures regarding its destination. Embarkation of troops on board the Grenada. Accommodation of the officers and feldiers. Rapid accumulation of filth on board. Troops preferved from sickness by bathing, and by keeping a great proportion of them always in the open air. Force employed in the expedition. A fleet arrives at Barbadoes at the time the expedition fails. Author addresses his friend from the opposite fide of the sun, LETTER IX.

LETTER X.

Author again upon terra firma. Capture of the united colony of Estequibo, and Demarara. An accident occurs during the night. Troops sent on sore in small vessels. They run aground. Grenada and other ships anchor at the mouth of the river Demarara. Flag of truce returns, and is dispatched again on shore. Capitulation of Fort William Frederic. Soldiers fall sick on the passage. Effect produced on the sick by the idea of going into action. Landing in Demarara. Appearance of the town of Stabrock, and of the country. Hospitality of an English settler. Author proceeds upon duty. Fortune throws him into good quarters, without a billet. Surgeon Carrol attacked with an alarming malady, - Page 164

LETTER XI.

A detachment of the expedition proceeds to Berbische. Scarcity of fresh provisions. Author forestals the market. Purchases a basket of pines. Conduct of the Captain of a French privateer-of another republican citizen. Healthy appearance of the colonifis. Demarara not lefs falubrious than the islands. Country flat, and like Holland. Author visits a coffee plantation. Alluring groves and avenues of fruit trees. Author Severely attacked by their keepers. Welcomed by a kind nymph of the grove, and prefented with the garden's golden fruit. Meets a flave with a load of oranges. Obtains leave from Mynheer Meertens to gather fruit for the fick foldiers. Events favorable to the gratification of European curiosity. A sale of slaves. Parties of Indians. Author has a flave placed at his elbow during dinner. Is complimented with one at his bedchamber door. Commencement of the wet feafon. Western hospitality not confined to Barbadoes. Author solicited to purchase a female slave. Remarks of a lady on hearing the cries of a slave under punishment. Prize money, - Page 176

LETTER XII.

Barbadoes the metropolis of the West Indies. News, letters, and tidings of the army reach Guiana, via Barbadoes. Great body of the armament fails from Carlisle bay. Sir Hugh Christian arrives at Barbadoes. Colony of Berbische surrenders to the English. Roads of mud and clay. Dutch cuisine better than the English. Dutch devoted to the pleasures of the table. Slaves sent to cut grass for fale. Punishment of a flave. Author and a party make an excursion to Mr. Osborn's. Visit to Mr. Dougan's. Happy condition of Mr. Dougan's flaves: — of Mr. Osborn's. Negroes in the West Indies sit round a fire in the evening. Musquitoes and fire flies, — 196

LETTER XIII.

Terms of capitulation of the colonies on the coast of Guiana. Dutch foldiers enter into the British fervice. South American Rangers. Situation of the captured colonies. Beef brought from the Spanish woods. Generosity of some of the planters towards the sick soldiers. Troops on board ship a great annoyance to the captain and his crew. The Grenada returns to England. Mr. Porter and family, passengers. A sale of slaves. Scarcity of mechanics. Extravagant wages of labour. Case of yellow fever. Impropriety of the term "yellow fever," - 212

LETTER XIV.

The author is left in the colonies of Guiana, instead of proceeding to St. Domingo. Regimental medical staff employed in general hospital. General Whyte attentive to the sick. The hospital and quarters for the medical officers established at La Bourgade. Author annoyed by insects. Tenderness of a Gentleman towards a musquito. Author makes a sauntering ramble to "the bush." His contemplations on being arrested by deep and impenetrable woods. A lady solicits the author to make a complaint against her slaves, Page 228

LETTER XV.

Bush Negroes in the woods of Guiana. Fate of Dutch foldiers fent into the forest against them. Corps of slaves accompanied by a party of Indians subdue them. Punishment of a Bush Negro, named Amsterdam, - 240

LETTER XVI. -

Description of house and furniture occupied by the medical staff at La Bourgade. Entertainment given to some gentlemen of the navy. Provision-excursions. Arrangements concerning prize-money. Benefit and importance of musquite curtains. Stability of temperature, and of the breeze in Guiana. Singular application made to the author for an appointment in the medical department, - 252

LETTER XVII.

Author's duties lead him to the colony of Berbische. Establishes a comparative inquiry respecting the diseased appearances after different disorders, with a view to ascertain what are the changes produced by yellow sever. The more robust most liable to be destroyed by the sever of the climate. An example in the superintending cook at the hospital. Execution of a Bush Negro. 'Public punishment of a party of blacks. Unjust punishment of a negro carpenter, - - - Page 262

LETTER XVIII.

Author embarks on board a Commissioni flori at floop to proceed from Demarara to Berbische. Expects to complete the passage in a few hours, but is detained at sea four days and nights, deprived of almost every necessary and every comfort. Description of the Voltigeur and its accommodations. The cabin a wretched hole of filth and vermin. Its furniture. The library. Expedition of passers in the boat. Various and tormenting delays. The coptain enraged and intemperate. View at the opening of the Berbische river. Happy sensations on arriving at Fort St. Andrew, 273

LETTER XIX.

Situation of Fort St. Andrew. Indians, tigers, monkies, and parrots inhabit the furrounding woods. A town, to be called New Amflerdam, building upon the banks of the rivers Berbifche and Kannye. Dutch garrifon-hofpital at Berbifche fitted up by the author. Ninety-third regiment in garrifon at Fort St. Andrew. Excellent difcipline of this regiment under Lieutenant-Colonel Gammell. Author afflicted with a complaint in his legs. A foldier drowned in bathing. Remarks occafioned by the forrowful effect of the accident upon his comrades. Examination after a cafe of yellow fever. Author intends to purfue his inquiries refpecting the difeafed appearances. Written opinions regarding the yellow fever very difcordant, - 313

LETTER XX.

A Dutch "vendue" of flaves. Attended by the colonifis like a public fair. Quite a holyday or gala-meeting. Manner of exposing the flaves by auction. Method of examining them. Their average value. Conduct of a negro who was put up to the hammer without his wife. Author conducts his friend from African flaves to free Indians. Joins a party of Indians near the river Kannye. Indifference of these people concerning the whites. Another party pack up their furniture and utenfils, and return into the woods. The women bear the burden. Indians engage to cut wood, but cannot be relied on. They have no industry—nor any defire to emulate the colonists. A party from the woods come down the river in a canoe to Fort St. Andrew, Page 325

LETTER XXI.

Politeness and hospitality of Governor Van Battenburg towards the author. The Government-house. Its situation and consiruction. Excursion up the creek or river Kannye. Estate of Mynheer Ongre. Its produce in coffee—in cocoa. Number and value of the slaves. Mode of preparing cocoa and chocolate. Food, drink, plates, dishes, medicine, and clothing all grow in the fields. Berbische widely remote from headquarters. Uncertainty of receiving news from the army. Route by which it commonly reaches Berbische. Brave conduct of a black corps at St. Lucie. The gallant Colonel Malcolm falls at their head. Uncertain of remaining in Guiana, the author directs his letters to be fent to St. Domingo. Garrison not unmindful of the 4th of june. Enchanting echo through the heavy forests, - 337

LETTER XXII.

News reaches Berbische of the capture of the island of St. Lucie. A sentinelon guard destroyed by the "Coup de So-Marked case of yellow fever in a grenadier, leil." named Llewellyn. The Savanna near fort St. Andrew inhabited by alligators. A fentinel, frightened by the approach of one of these amphibia in the night, fires and alarms the garrifon. The alligator an animal of great strength and bideous form : is frongly protected against external injury : is peculiarly susceptible of life. His flesh used by the negroes as food. Visit of a party to the governor's and Mr. Blair's. Fete given to the flaves at the government-house. Author's reflections on the scene. The dance interrupted by a party of the fons of Bacchus. Humoreus remarks of the governor indicative of his correct knowledge of the English' language. Politeness of the governor and Madame Van Battenburg, to the officers. Sumptuous entertainment at Mr. Blair's. Author visits the "Yaw-house." Wretched appearance of the objects afflicted with this hideous malady. A distant exsurfion projected, in which the author hopes to join, Page 345

LETTER XXIII.

Indolence and visionary difficulties often the bane of our gratification. Author engages with a party in a marooning excursion up the river Berbische. No fixed plan, but the journey regulated by the information and treatment met with en route. Difficulties and obstacles suggested by gentlemen of the colony. Ignorance of the Dutch language the greatest impediment. Stores and neceffary refources collected in the boat. Departure from New Amsterdam. Mode of completing the boat's crew a little unwarrantable. Plantation Het Pleytanker the first place of call. The party well received by Mr. Deen : meet Mynheer Abbenfets : proceed with him to Esfendam to pass the night. Friendly attention of Mynheer Wohler a Hanoverian Surgeon. Author and Mynheer Wohler make a promenade round the plantations Effendam, and Sans Souci, 368

1.

Author and his comrades leave Effendam. Generous and friendly hospitality of Mynheer Abbensets. The party obtain much useful information from Mynheer Schneider respecting their journey. Mynheer Abbensets and Mynheer Schneider contribute additional supplies to the boat. A long journey to the effate Vigilantie. Heavy toil for the flaves. They flop occasionally and plunge into the river to refresh themselves. A friendly welcome by Mynheer Malsted. Author vifits the negro yard at Vigilantie. Is presented by a negro to his fifter. An example of the effect of flavery. A fingular mode of punishment. The party leave Vigilantie - arrive at the old town of Amsterdam. Visit Mynheer - le vieu Fiscal, and Mynheer Scholten. Le vieu Fiscal converses in Latin - professes great esteem for the English - is violently Page 378 inimical to the Stadtholder,

The party adopt a new mode of travelling suggested by Mynheer Fenner. A Dutch mountain. Alarm excited by the author and his comrades respecting the Bush Negroes in the woods. A West Indian ride across the forest and wild favannas. European scene on approaching the estate Arends. Fragrant path leading to the house. The party meet a polite reception from Mynheer Paùels :-- dine at Arends :-- proceed in the evening to Myhneer Heynemann's accompanied by Mynheer Paùels and Mynheer Fenner. Visit a Dutch military post at an angle of the river near Arends. Mynheer Heynemann's household, -- Page 396

Author obtains an early conversation with M. Heynemann. Examines his collection. Messer. Heynemann, Paúels, and Fenner plan, for the party, the remainder of the excursion. Interessing day at Mr. Heynemann's. Indians called Bucks —the women Buckeen. Common bow and arrow of the Indians. Their accuracy in using them. Fine attitude in pulling the bow. The poisoned arrow and its tube. Author and two of his comrades proceed to Savonette. One of the party suddenly afflicted with a malady, which detains him at M. Heynemann's. Visit to an Indian hut, at two o'clock in the morning. Indian method of sleeping. Surprize of Vandyke, an old Dutch foldier. His remark concerning the indisposition of an Indian wife. Night accommodation at Savonette, ______ 404

Anticipated gratification robs the author of reft. Senfations on looking out at the door of Savonette early in the morning. Vifit to an Indian willage in the woods. Scenery on entering the foreft. Reflections on approaching the village. Vandyke enfures the party a civil reception. No ceremony observed. Author and his comrades minutely examine all around them. Bucks absent. Buckeen employed preparing casfada. Curiosity not reciprocal. The party procure specimens of animals, implements and utenfils. The laba. An VOL. II.

example of natural affection in the wild woods. A further example of the fame. Food used by the Indians. Manner of preparing it. Indolence of the inhabitants of the woods. Caffada their " Aaff of life." Pepper-pot of crabs, and laba. The Armadillo. Structure of the Indian huts. Author expresses a hope of shewing the model of one to his friend fome day in England. Temple of incantation. Superstition of the Indians respecting disease. Hot or wapour bath. Scenery round the forest village. An immense tree of the Tonquin bean. Concerning other trees in the woods of Guiana. A Kiwihi, and other specimens prefented by Vandyke : Water-lemons, -by the Indians. Military bonors. Echo through the deep forest. Author and his comrades return to Mynheer Heynemann's, and to Page 417 Arends,

Feelings of fatisfaction evinced by Mynheer Heynemann. His attention to the author. Connecting link between the Indians and the colonifts. Policy of the Dutch government respecting the Indians. Opportunities posseffed by Mynbeer Heynemann of observing the character and habits of the people of the woods :- peculiarly qualified for the appointment of post holder :-elected a chief among the Indians. Propofal to affemble a body of them in military array. On the remarks and observations of Mynheer Heynemann. Indian tribes in Guiana. The Charibs most warlike. Prominent features distinguishing the Indians from Europeans from Africans. Clothing of the Indians. Kway ufed by the Buckeen. Conduct of a mother and daughter on prefenting the apparel of a young Buckeen to the author, 436

Form and general appearance of the Indians. Custom of pulling the hair from different parts of their bodies. Remarks concerning the indolent habits of the people of the woods. Labour not a natural impulse. Indians fond of spirituous liquors. A degree of method obtains in their intoxication. Polygamy practifed among them. Despotic towards their wives. The women toil at home, and bear the burden when they move abroad. The Buckeen sombre and referved in presence of the men-are fond of drinking rum. Some observations respecting obesity-also concerning gout, - Page 445

The party are conducted from Arends to Johanna by Mynheer Fenner. Journey across the Savanna and forest. Chase of a mule. Visit to an Indian Village. A wretched object of difease. A plantation of reeds for making arrows Trees of wild cinnamon. The party dine at Johanna :-fleep at Helvetia. Cordially welcomed by Mynheer Freinde. Honored with peculiar marks of attention by Mynheer Fenner. A comfortles night. Unhappy feelings concerning an ebon nymph. Visit to Mynheer Scholten at the old tozon. Apologies of M. - le vieu Fiscal. His excesses attributed to " levelling bumpers." A purchase from a handsome Indian woman. River current. Visit to the plantation Daargradt -a colonial estate-perhaps " prize property." Alarm of an old Hollander on seeing a party of British officers. A wretched night in consequence of musquitoes, 452

The party leave Daargradt with the morning tide, intending to proceed to Mynheer Robolofki's. Call at Essendam. Kindly detained by M. Abbensets. Make a visit of acknowledgment to Mynheer Schneider. Cards introduced after dinner at Essendam. Evening promenade to Sans Souci. Wretched annoyance of musquitces. Afflicted ap-ber

125

q.

17

7×.

Įn.

-

1 đ

1

.

.

ŕ

ŀ

.

ħ.

pearance of the party. Departure from Esfendam. Conclusion of the expedition. General remarks. Novelty and hospitality. Civility an inadequate term. Mode of travelling highly commodious. Sameness of scenery relieved. Pellucid water of the river. Novel appearance of the forest, the boat, Sc. A floating island. Difficulties ideal. Insects not troublesome in the woods. A peculiar mark of politeness. - Page 463

This of Hickory, Conclude contenand by Mandary alterestine handress - Again all some a think of an old Philloudie on James a water of Br. All which the hard of a state - particular she which a LETTER I

Author and his friends wait for General Whyte, and the Cork convoy. Friendly altercation between the Author and his comrades. Cork Fleet driven back to Cove. The Hindoftan and Abergavenny arrive from Ireland. The Mary Ifabella, from England, after a paffage of fifteen weeks. Author and his comrades ordered upon duty. Troops arrive unbealthy. Two-deck ships bad transports. State of negroes in flave ships contrasted with foldiers in transports. Degree of beat March 23d. Remarks upon a French paper, complaining of the professional practice of the British medical officers in St. Domingo.

Barbadoes, March.

I SHOULD have mentioned to you in my laft letter, that from joining in the general greetings on the glad occasion of Sir R. Abercromby's long-expected arrival, and hoping to learn that we were immediately to proceed to St. Domingo, we loft no time in waiting upon the commander in chief, but went to pay our respects to him the day after he reached Barbadoes. I am forry, however, to tell you, that we are ftill likely to be detained for fome time in this Ifland, it being intended that we fhould wait the arrival of General Whyte, and the Cork division, and all proceed to St. Domingo under the fame convoy.

VOL. II.

I am happy to be able to announce to you that the ills of climate have, hitherto, fcarcely reached me; but my friends Cleghorn and Mafter, I am forry to remark, are greater fuffesers than myfelf. All of us are annoyed by the prickly heat, and those tormenting infects the mulquitoes; but, in Cleghorn, the prickly heat is fo violent, as to become quite a fore eruption; and, on the legs of Mafter, the bites of mulquitoes have produced very troublefome ulcers: also, in addition to these evils, both of my friends are frequently troubled with epiftaxis *; with which I have not been once attacked.

Regardlefs that they are more diffurbed by the effects of climate than I am, they often amufe themfelves at my continuing to obferve an abstemious diet, and to perfevere in my long established habit of drinking water; and are even bold enough to propose that we should form a tontine, with the benefit of furvivorship. "Let us," fay they, " enter into an engagement that he who lives longest shall be entitled to the clothes, arms, baggage, and horfes of those who may chance to die, previous to our return to England."-To this I tell them, I can see only one objection, viz. that it would encumber me with more red coats, and baggage, than I fhould know what to do with. They, laughing, assure me that I need have no fuch apprehenfion, and kindly promife-the one to preferve my fword, the other my pistols as "a talisman, in memory of a friend, who fought his death ---- by drinking water !"-" Water," continue they, " will render you the most palatable to the hungry devourer of these regions, and, of course, you will be his earlieft prey."-" On the contrary, my friends," I reply, "you lay a bait for this ravenous destroyer, by preparing for him inviting juices, enriched with wine, and high effenced difhes; for, like yourfelves, he loves to indulge, and prefers wine and high flavored viands, to a more plain and fimple diethence, instead of your dividing my fword and

* Bleeding from the nofe.

at 10

d

30

1 y

d

ľ

0.0

le

e

2

2

1

Y

B 2

pistols, the probability is that I shall return to England trebly armed."

Were it fit to take up this fubject profeffionally, or to trouble you with medical difcuffions, I might fhew fome powerful reafons why I have a better chance of again feeing England, than either of my humorous and pleafant affociates. Our comrade, Weir, fimiles at our calculations, and being in a manner fecure, from having undergone nine years feafoning at Jamaica, feels that he may have to return alone, and report the fate of us all.

Endlefs, furely, are to be the vexations and difappointments attending this expedition ! In every attempt, every branch of it would feem deftined to meet with delay and difafter. In the papers, received by the laft packet, we read that the Cork fleet, which we had flattered ourfelves was within a few leagues of Barbadoes, has put back into Cove harbour. In this we have great and fevere difappointment. It was the division with which we were to proceed to our place of deftination, and from the fhips which have already arrived reporting fo favorably of the voyage, and the weather, it is a mortification very unexpected. The Clarendon, the Charlotte, the Singleton and others having made an uncommonly quick paffage, we had no fufpicion but the winds muft have been favorable for the whole convoy; and, making allowances for the delay of dull failing veffels, felt affured that they muft arrive in the courfe of a few days; hence the difappointment we experience is even greater than it was from hearing of the return of our own convoy under Admiral Chriftian.

5

11

-

.

2

2

Single fhips, of each of the two fleets, ftill continue to arrive. The Hindoftan and Abergavenny Eaft Indiamen, and feveral tranfports have joined from Cork; and on the 25th, came in the Mary Ifabella of the Portfmouth divifion. She failed with us on the 9th of December, and has been a week longer on the voyage than the unfortunate General Cuyler, but precifely the fame time at fea, having put into Lifbon difabled, and remained there three weeks, which reduces the period to twelve weeks, the exact time the General Cuyler was beating about upon the ocean.

It now remains to me to inform you that we have to bid adieu to our rural excursions, and maroon-like wanderings, about the pleafant island of Barbadoes : for it is ordered that the phyficians of the St. Domingo ftaff shall confider themfelves on duty, at the general hofpital at St. Anne's Hill; and it has fallen to my lot to be the first employed. We have alfo the further duty of infpecting the troops of the different ships of the Cork division as they come into harbour, in order to report their state of health, or difease. Luckily our refidence, on board the Lord Sheffield, happens to be fingularly convenient for the performance of these duties, and hence we hope to be able ftill to continue our focial mefs; and to live in the cool breeze, afloat, inftead of being crowded in the close and heated town.

Being in the bay, we readily fee every fhip as it comes in, and can, conveniently, take off a boat to proceed upon our vifit of infpection without delay: and we are not lefs happily placed for the hofpital, being able to reach it in a boat, much quicker than we could walk to it from the town. 沮

S,

Sicknefs, I am forry to remark, is already appearing among us. The hofpitals are full, and fome of the troops are obliged to quit their barracks, in order that thefe may, alfo, be converted into fick wards. But do not imagine that we are already fuffering from difeafe of climate. It is not fo. The malady, which now exifts, has been brought with the troops. It is the common hofpital or fhip fever—is the confequence of the foldiers being long detained in crowded fhips, and has nothing to do with La Maladie du Pays.

The fhips of the Cork division, notwithftanding their quick paffage, arrive in a very unhealthy flate, but in thefe the troops muft have been fickly when they embarked, or before they left the harbour; and, from the fpecimen we have in the Abergavenny and Hindoftan, we have nothing favorable to expect from the feeming accommodation of employing thefe large veffels as troop fhips. In none of the transports have we, yet, found the men more unhealthy: but, from the habits of cleanlinefs, commonly obferved on board the Eaft India fhips, and, more especially, from that excellent officer General Whitelock, and feveral other active and intelligent military officers being on board, no fufpicion can be entertained of any of the rules of cleanlinefs or regularity having been neglected among the troops.

To me it has always appeared unwife to employ any fhip as a transport, in which the men are obliged to fleep upon two different decks, both crowded, and the one below the other; and, from prefent appearances, this expedition promifes to confirm the opinion.

Where from three hundred to five hundred men, in addition to the fhip's company, have to make a paffage in the fame veffel, they cannot but be crowded; and if the weather fhould chance to be bad, it will be impoffible to have the lower deck kept fo clean, and well ventilated, as is requifite; and hence from many of the foldiers becoming fick; from their taking food in their fleeping births; and crowding themfelves with knapfacks, blankets, and other baggage; and from multitudes breathing together, in a clofe and confined place, the air muft, very quickly, be rendered unwholefome, and difeafe will, neceffarily, be generated. Where there are two decks it is alfo more difficult to keep the men fufficiently exposed to the open atmosphere, as the idle and disobedient can more eafily conceal themfelves, and remain below throughout the day.

The difference, in point of health, is peculiarly firiking between the troops conveyed in transports from England, and the flaves brought in the Guinea ships from Africa. Perhaps, from the prefent mode of conducting the flave ships, might be derived some useful hints for the management of our transports. The flaves are much more crowded than the foldiers, yet far more healthy. It becomes us therefore to afcertain the caufe of this, and I much fuspect that it will be found in the difference of treatment and accommodation. According to the prefent method of conducting them, I might venture it as an opinion that a Guinea ship would carry-with lefs danger of difease being generated among them-a cargo of flaves more than thrice as numerous as a transport would carry of foldiers.

I took occasion to note to you in a former letter that the nakedness of the flaves was perhaps their greatest fecurity against difease : but in addition to their being without clothes, they are compelled to remain conftantly upon deck in the day-time; and are encouraged to exercife and amufement : their fleeping places are completely washed out as foon as they quit them; and no fpecies of baggage, nor clothing-not a bundle, nor any article of bedding-not even a fingle blanket, nor a sheet, nor any kind of thing that can create filth, or collect impurities is admitted. Ventilation and washing are strictly observed, and the flaves are encouraged, or compelled to cleanlinefs of perfon: and, together with thefe means, perhaps their fimple diet of vegetables and water may greatly contribute, by diminishing the predisposition, and lessening the fusceptibility of difease.

Hence it would feem that cleanlinefs, exercife, cheerfulnefs, a fimple diet, and free exposure to the atmosphere are the great preventives of ficknefs—and that by a flrict obfervance of these means the flaves make the voyage, from Africa to the West Indies, without engendering infectious maladies, although infinitely more crowded, than troops on board even the most confined transport.

Many causes conspire to prevent these grand objects from being equally attained by the foldiers; but it is a defideratum, even, to approach them. Were I to enter into a detail of all that might be offered upon this very important subject, instead of a letter I should write you a volume. The difference of climate, of habit, of education, and of diet would all require to be taken into the difcuffion; but it were foreign to our present purpose to engage in so extensive an inquiry, I may, therefore, content myfelf with adding that, both in regard to transports, and barracks, the fervice would reap the most effential benefit, were the rules, which might be prefcribed by its medical officers, ftrictly enjoined; and policy, no lefs than humanity would feem to demand it.

I must not forget to note to you, that the 23d instant was the hottest day we have felt, fince our arrival between the tropics. In

Į.,

25

-

5.

to

S

Ît.

1.

1-ţ,

3

3.

to

S

12

the morning the thermometer flood at 73, and the weather was pleafantly cool, but it afterwards grew very clofe, and the little air that was flirring, coming from the fouth, we all felt the temperature much increafed, and every one complained of exceffive heat. We were on fhore during the morning, but having left our thermometers in the fhip, had not the opportunity of obferving the degree of heat, either in the town, or the bay: from our feelings, compared with the preceding days, we judge it to have been at leaft 86.

Although it was unufually hot and oppreffive in Bridge Town, we perceived a ftrong difference, indeed found a tolerable breeze, in the more elevated part of the country. We took our dinner at Dr. Hinde's, which I before mentioned to you is fome miles from the town, and fo far from feeling the heat oppreffive, there, we were not at all incommoded by it. Thirteen perfons fat down to table, and I remarked that not one of the party had occafion to ufe his handkerchief, in a way that might have fhocked the delicacy of a Chefterfield. What would you think were I to conclude my letter by noting to you a mark of great modesty in a Frenchman? Perhaps you will fay it is a rare inftance; or that you never met with—never heard of fuch a thing! If fo, call it affurance, impudence, or what you like, and I almost promise to forgive you!

A paper, faid to be of high importance, has been prefented for our confideration. It was fent from St. Domingo to England: and lo! what fhould this important communication prove to be, but a direct and indifcriminate attack upon the practice of all the British medical officers who have, hitherto, been employed with the troops in St. Domingo, written by a French practitioner of the island; who, without knowing what means had been ufed, in the treatment of difease, illiberally condemns the whole practice, arrogantly fetting forth his own as more wife and more beneficial. Need I have told you that the modest author is a Frenchman? We know not the name of this would-be Hippocrates : but as we have found his statements to be not fimply inaccurate, but wholly devoid of truth, I think you will allow that we have heen merciful towards

73,

it

air

R

and

We

W.

120

e of 10

Ig

1P-

2 20

e

5.

18

75

1

10

「日月

him, in only remarking that the very curious paper laid before us, must have been "the production of fome prejudiced individual, who had not troubled himself to obtain any knowledge whatever, of the practice which, probably from motives of interest, he had prefumed to condemn."

Nord I have told your that See

LETTER II.

time musiles a still soully in their

Author apprehensive of fatiguing his friend with tales of delay and disappointment. A fleet of merchantmen arrives at Barbadoes after a short passage. The heavens and the seas exclusively opposed to the convoys of the expedition. Supply of provisions and stock at Barbadoes. Single ships of the convoys still continue to arrive. George and Bridget reaches Carlisse Bay. This ship singularly the seat of incident and disafter. Character of Mac—. His adventures and vexations concerning a cow.

Barbadoes, March 30.

I FEAR you will be tired of reading tales of difappointment and uncertainty, which, as I before obferved, would feem to know no end. On the morning of the 28th inft. we faw an enfign hoifted at the fort, and heard three guns fired; which conflitute the fignal of alarm implying a ftrange fleet to be in fight. It was, immediately, concluded that it was the Cork convoy, and its arrival was readily explained, by fuppofing it to have put to fea again, quickly after its return to harbour, and to have availed itfelf of the favorable wind which had already brought to us fo many fingle fhips of that division. Dr. Cleghorn and myfelf happened to be on our way to the hospital, and on reaching St. Anne's hill we had a most fplendid view of about eighty fhips failing fmoothly below us, fpreading their white canvals along the coaft of the Island, as they proceeded towards the harbour. Our expectations now feemed confirmed. It must be the Cork fleet: and we felt affured of a fpeedy departure for St. Domingo ! But our measure of vexation was not yet filled. Judge of our difappointment on finding it to be only a fleet of merchantmen ! Never perhaps was expectation fo often raifed, and fo repeatedly difappointed, as regarding the unhappy convoys of this great and threatening armament.

mar Plane

After fpending nearly fix months in vain attempts to make the paffage, we are told that the two great divisions of our expedition are ftill lying in harbour, only preparing to put to fea; and amidst all the storms and perils which have so constantly opposed the progress of the ships of war, and the transports, our mortification is increased by finding that a fleet of flow failing traders, could make the voyage, with great facility, in the fhort period of thirty days. We learn, from these merchantmen, that the convoys were expected to put to sea, again, in about ten days, from the time they came away.

Every week, nay, almost every day, fince the middle of the month of September, have we heard of these fleets being about to fail in the course of a few days, and now, after fix months of daily and anxious expectation, and of as constant disappointment, it is again faid that they were to put to sea in about ten days.

It would feem that the very elements had been fet in hostile array, exclusively, against the expedition, and that it only required the failing of the convoys to provoke the wrath of the winds, and of angry ocean. Amidst all the vexatious delays, that continue to occur, it is mortifying to difcover that not one of the troop ships has made the passage with this fortunate fleet of merchantmen—which failed from Spithead on the 27th of February, and reached Barbadoes early on the 28th of March.

VOL. II.

i of

p-

DC

ÈD.

th.

18 bs

)晋

k

2.

e

11 ŝ

2-

.

1

E.

-

After breakfast we went on shore to make our marketings and to learn all the additional news brought by the fleet, which had now come to anchor. The streets of Bridge-town were crowded, and the markets over-run with strangers. Not a fish—nor a joint of meat was to be had. A fingle chicken was all we could procure.

Barbadoes is the beft fupplied of all our colonies to windward of Jamaica. The ifland abounds with provisions and ftock; but from the late repeated, and multiplied arrivals, and from a numerous fleet being fo long detained in the bay, the demand has been fo great that a degree of fcarcity, or, at leaft, that mark of it, an increased and extravagant price begins to prevail.

In the courfe of the day on which the fleet of merchantmen arrived, a fadly terrifying fcene occurred in the harbour. The found of an alarm-bell was heard, from one of the transports, and a dread fensation was inflantly diffused throughout the bay. All hands hastened upon deck, and every ship appeared thronged with anxious multitudes, eagerly looking out for the cause of alarm. The transport was on fire, and from the crowded state of the harbour, and the immense quantity of gun powder on board the fleet, our fituation became fadly terrific : we were all in danger of being blown up in one great explosion. Never was a moment of more exreme peril and anxiety. The veffel was rapidly confuming, and on every quarter she was closely furrounded by others; it was therefore expected that the flames would throughout the harbour. Fortufpread nately the efforts of those who were near were not paralyfed by the fhock. Boats were quickly manned on every fide, and fent with all poffible difpatch to the relief of the tranfport ; and most happily, by the boldness and activity of the seamen, the fire was extinguished before it reached any of the other veffels.

Single fhips of the Cork division ftill continue to join us; and among them we now find the George and Bridget with hospital stores, having our comrade Henderson on board. The George and Bridget, as I before remarked to you, is a large North country ship, ke

W

WIL.

at

We:

ľ

1

0

of vaft bulk, very unwieldy, and manifefly a flow failor. Her cabin is not conveniently fitted up; but appears heavy and fombre, and calculated to convey gloomy impreffions. This ship has been quite the feat of incident. I am not fure whether she, originally, failed with the fleet in November. If she did, she returned to Spithead atter the ftorm, and there waited the fecond failing of the convoy in December.-On the 9th of that month fhe left England, in company with us, but being difabled in one of the gales, which early befet our fleet, she put back into Cove harbour ; and, there, finding the Cork division preparing for fea, and, like herself, destined for St. Domingo, she did not hasten to fail again, and follow us, alone ; but waited to put herfelf under the protection of the Cork convoy. During this delay it was that our affistant Mac-found her out, and obtained a birth on board.

With the Cork fleet, which was termed the St. Domingo division of the expedition, the George and Bridget again went to fea, and, again, was compelled to put back in confequence of bad weather.

Only two days had paffed, from the time of leaving the harbour, when a fignal was made for the fleet to wear, and return to Cove. The weather being, at the time, uncommonly thick and hazy, feveral of the ships ran foul of each other: one went directly aboard the unwieldy George and Bridget, which was ever in the way of accident and difaster, and had it not been a much lighter vessel, than herself, must have funk her, with all hands, to the bot-As it was, she stove in her fide, and left tom. an unfeemly mark of injury, which the ftill bears about her. The wind being fcarcely more favorable for returning than for advancing, feveral of the ships were unable to make the harbour; and from being obliged to keep at fea, they flood on and effected the passage alone,-which explains the circumstance of fo many fingle ships of this convoy having arrived in Carlifle bay.

The George and Bridget, after her unfortunate accident, reached fo near the harbour as to take a pilot on board to carry her in but from the wind veering round, and blowing ftrong against them, poor Patrick the pilot, in steering for Cove harbour, flood across the

c 3

Atlantic, and committed the blunder of carrying himfelf out to the Weft Indies. True it is that the accident might have occurred upon any other coaft, or to a man of any other nation —but the pilot happening to be from dear Cork it/elf, the poor fellow, you will readily imagine, is teazed by the failors, as having practifed fomething very like—a Bull !

We have been diverted at hearing the circumftance related : but we have ftrong feelings of fympathy towards the unfortunate pilot, and his family ; for his wife and children are left in the diftrefsful fituation of not knowing how to account for his abfence. He had hoped to return home, by getting on board fome veffel upon the paffage, but none fell in their path, and it now remains for him to take a view of the bay, into which he has fteered, and return to tell the tale at Cove - - as foon as he can.

During the time the George and Bridget remained foul of the fhip which ran aboard her, and which in addition to the blow of her fide, carried away her fore rigging, two of the failors, from the other veffel, while in the attempt to clear her, ftepped on board the George and Bridget, and the shipshappening at that moment to get as under, these men were separated from their own vessel, and, compelled like the pilot, to take an unexpected passage in the George and Bridget, to Barbadoes—their own captain supposing them to have fallen overboard, or been in some way the victims of the accident.

Our loft affiftant, poor Mac- who was left behind in confequence of going to Portfmouth in fearch of our cow, just as the ship was getting under weigh, is also among the unexpected passengers on board the eventful George and Bridget. After many unfuccefsful attempts to overtake the Lord Sheffield he felt happy in meeting with a veffel with fome of his comrades on board ; and having difcovered this ship it had been extremely difficult to convince him that no birth could be had on board. His foot once upon deck, all further concern respecting accommodations was quickly removed. The narrative of his adventures, with and without the cow, has diverted us exceedingly. To comprehend his urgent proceedings, and rapid movements, it were necessary to know fomething of his figure and character. He is a little fat, sturdy man, of short, punch-like figure, between thirty and forty years of age, with a vaft deal of good humour and willing activity about him-buftling, well intending, and officiously defirous to be useful. He is confident, and presumptuous, yet possesse a degree of perfonal timidity bordering upon fuperstition. Abruptly familiar with those he feeks, he grows importunate and attaches himself even to annovance ; being one of those people who have more of freedom than good manners-perfect masters in ease, and as perfectly ignorant in politeness. He is of that class which possefiles more of willingness than judgment-more of hafte, than order ; one of those who engage with bold confidence, in whatever prefents itself, without looking to the event, or observing any thing of method in the execution ;- who are ever ready to plunge into difficulties, without a thought how to fubdue them.

C 4

The fame fanguine feelings which lead him into difficulties, tend to fupport him through them. Not being of a difpolition to brood over his diffreffes, he is feldom the fubject of difmay, or the victim of tombre reflection. Involved in one dilemma, he commonly escapes from it by rushing headlong into a greater, and often by entailing future troubles, blunders on to his object—overcoming every impediment by forcing circumstances through all hazards to the end proposed ; then, forgetful of the new difficulties he has created, piques himfelf upon the merit - - - of having accomplished his defign ! His woes, you will believe, are frequent, but they are, also, transitory. He requires not the patient endurance of philosophy to support them—they pass quickly away in all the hurry of thoughtless indifference.

From this fketch of his character you will learn, without furprize, that pecuniary difficulties have led to his prefent humble appointment. He had fettled himfelf in bufy London, in a fituation of refpectability, and which promifed early independence; but from thoughtlefs habits, and a difpolition ever regardlefs of the morrow, became involved beyond the power of extricating himfelf, and, at length, brought on ills, which he now feeks to fly from, rather than hopes to remedy.

ke

19

.

ě.

R

2

•

With feveral other gentlemen of the hofpital-ftaff, to whom the fore-cabin was allotted, Mac—was ordered to take his paffage in the Lord Sheffield; and feeling both pleafed and proud to be in the fame fhip with the perfon who had the direction of the department, to which he belonged, he was always at hand when any thing occurred, always first to tender either useful, or officious fervices.

ter

Ce

30

CO

01

m on bet

Ver

800

CUT

Wa

rai

wh

DON

only

It being an effential comfort to have plenty of milk on the paffage, we had purchafed a cow to take on board, as the beft method of fecuring the accommodation; but owing to fome neglect, on fhore, our valued animal had not reached the Lord Sheffield at the time the fignal was made for failing. This was a fad difappointment to us: for, to lofe our cow were a ferious misfortune even the apprehenfion of it was matter of much anxiety. We applied to the captain to know how we could proceed with the greateft probability of procuring her; who, faying that it was not an object for which he could delay the fhip, added that the only chance of having our milk was by fending off fome person, instantly, to Portsmouth, who would bring the cow, without a moment's delay. Mac- hearing this, and being always defirous to make himfelf useful, immediately volunteered his fervices-nothing doubting of fuccefs. A boat, returning to the fhore, was accordingly hailed, and away hurried Macfor the cow; not once dreaming of the poffibility of failure, nor that there could be any rifk of his being left behind. The cow! the cow ! he had no other idea-nothing but the cow occupied his mind ! In the fame unthinking hafte in which he left the ship did he buftle on when he reached the shore. Proceeding without plan, and without thought, he looked only to the cow, and, in his hurry to bring her before the eye, neglected the means of conveying her to the ship. The propriety of engaging a boat, to return in, not once occurred to him-no fooner did he reach the water's edge, than he jumped on shore, and ran off in fearch of the person's home, from whom the cow had been purchased: but he now discovered that, in his hurry, he had only carelefsly liftened to the addrefs; and he

II

as

re

15

8 confequently much time was loft in finding out the houfe.

Mac

fire

田

Wa

bel

the 122 edg

di

Y

tha

001 bin

tur

W

b

Vę

001

Way

It happened, when, at length, he came to it, that the man was from home : and, here, he fell into another error. Instead of fending fome one to fetch him, or taking with him fome perfon who knew where to meet with the man, he, in all the impetuofity of thoughtlefs speed, blundered into further delay by running into the town, alone, to feek him: and after losing much time in finding him, inftead of promoting all poffible difpatch, and urging the man to the utmost expedition, he detained him, in tedious and ufelefs explanations, as to the caufe of his not fooner fending the cow on board. Another half hour was confumed in fruitless parley, when they reached the house; and, there, feeling fecure in having the cow and her mafter near him, it occurred to Mac- that after all thefe exertions he required fome refreshment, and, forgetting the preffure of the moment, he, again, added to the delay by, quietly, fitting down to relieve the calls of his ftomach.

During all this time poor bufy thoughtlefs Mac— never recollected that he had no boat hired, nor any means fecured of taking the cow off to the fhip. He had urged on, ftraight forward, and now, feeing the man, and the cow before him, felt as certain of fuccefs as though the undertaking had been completed.

The cow was, at last, led down to the beach, and, on arriving with her at the water's edge, poor unthinking Mac- met with new difficulties, to which the confident fecurity of his vacant mind had lent no expectation, Yet they proved to be more infurmountable than any he had encountered, being of a nature equally unyielding to fober circumfpection, as to the ftorming affaults by which he, commonly, forced the obftacles that opposed It was the hurried moment of deparhim. The fleet, obeying the fignal for failing, ture. was crowding, in full canvafs, out of the harbour, and all the cutters, boats, fcullies-every veffel capable of carrying an oar, or a fail, was gone off, at an exorbitant hire, with fome one in danger of being left behind. No boat was to be had, at any price! This was an finding

came

: and,

ead of

g with

t with ought.

ay by him;

him,

l, and

n, he

Hana+

iding

Was

iched

hav-

n, it

67-

and

, be,

etly

fto-

impediment which might eafily have been prevented, but it was an obstacle in Mac-'s broad path, which had never entered into his calculations. Still it could neither be removed, nor trampled down. Method and force-prudence and rafhnefs were here equally unavailing. It was an obstruction which could neither be overcome by rude, nor fystematic means. Mac- was now arrived at his ultimatum-checked by the ocean, he could no longer blunder on. He curfed, and raved, and fwore, and implored the people ftanding by, all to no purpose! Prayers and imprecations were al ke fruitlefs. Every boat was gone! Thus arrefted, and unable to force circumstances further to his end, giddy Macbecame almost frantic, and feeing the ships rapidly getting out to fea, he gave vent to his feelings in all the acuteness of unexpected difappointment. Storming with rage, he fwore and prayed alternately - now curfed the cow; then abused the man-ran into the different shops' uttering lamentations - plied every one paffing with queftions-begged the boatmen to give him affistance-offered perfuasions, entreaties, rewards-but all in vain ! None

30

C

0.8

10

1

could give him aid. No boat remained—nor any poffible means of getting either himself or the cow to the ship.

been

1-

his re.

200

ual.

hich

fte.

his uld

ed,

nd-

111-loat

rce

ips

his

ed

re

Πj

10

R

21

SI

18

He observed the fleet putting to sea; fancied he faw the Lord Sheffield dropping down to St. Helen's, and loudly deplored the loss of his paffage; then, turning to the cow, renewed his curses upon her, for detaining him; and, again, loaded the man with oaths for not fooner taking her on board. It, alfo, now occurred to his recollection, that he was feparated from his baggage, and would have to remain without a change of garment throughout the voyage; and again he appealed to the boatmen in anxious folicitude ; fome of whom only finiled at his dilemma, while fome regarded him with cold indifference, and others, more awake to his diftress, endeavoured to foothe, and encourage him with hope. What can I do? good fellows! cried poor defeated Mac-, what fhall I do? what can I do? d-n this cow? shall I, failors! must I lose my passage? Can none of you help meshall I, must I be left behind ?

The fleet still advanced. The full canvafs spread every mast, and the ships, in crowded fucceffion, continued to put to fea. Poor Mac-looked ftedfaftly towards them-his eye intent upon the Lord Sheffield; then, fuddenly turning round, he again faw the patient cow, who, equally unconfcious of his diffrefs, as that fhe was the caufe of it, had quietly laid herfelf down to ruminate her cud, upon the fands. Finding new provocation in the poor animal's composure, I shall, exclaimed Mac-I must, I shall be left behind ! Curse that cow ; d-n the cow! I shall, I shall be left behind! Then again turning to the boatmen he folicited them, in new entreaties, to take him off with, or without the cow-forgetting how ufelefs it were to urge the men, when there was nothing to be had in the shape of a boat.

Still the little, fat, improvident man curfed and fwore and ftamped and ftormed begged, entreated, and implored; but all to no purpofe. The ftumbling block of impoffibility was in his path: and it might have taught him that engagements are, fometimes, more eafily undertaken, than accomplifhed: but it was not among his qualities - - - - to benefit by experience!

The Lord Sheffield was delayed until nearly the last ship, in the hope of our feeing Mac- and the Cow; and we thought him a tedious time before he returned. At length the anchor was up, and the fails fpread. We now looked anxioufly to the fhore. The day was wearing away; and no Mac-, no cow appeared ! The captain could not-dared not wait any longer ! Quickly, therefore, we were under weigh, and had only the hope that Mac- and the boat might fleer direct for St. Helen's, and meet us as we advanced from the Mother-bank. But still, poor fellow ! he remained in great tribulation upon the fhore. No boat could be had, and the only ray of hope, conveyed to him, was from a remark of the boatmen, that, as many of the fhips were getting out to fea, fome of the boats could not fail to be foon back. He caught eagerly at this idea, which, plain and fimple as it was, had not once suggested itself to his mind, and, appropriating it with all the fanguine feelings of his nature, again hailed the certainty of foon overtaking us.

Prefently a boat arrived, but it was only a fmall one, with oars. Still a boat it was, and VOL. II. D la

10

e

The

25

d

18

][

-

12

I

T

ę.

Mac— without confidering whether or not it was fit for his purpofe, impulfively ran down and jumped into it—calling to the men to take him to the Lord Sheffield! This they obferved was impoffible, for, even if they had time to reach her, which they had not, their boat could not live fo far out at fea, as where the fhip would be before they could come up with her.—This was a fad blow to his revived expectations, and he preffed the men to engage in the attempt, making them great offers of reward, but they were inflexible, and advifed him, as his only chance, to wait until a lugger, or fome larger boat with fails fhould come in.

The poor cow still lay quietly massicating her food upon the fands, and Mac— in great fatigue and all the chagrin of disappointment, fat himself down, less patiently, to ruminate a more bitter cud.

Other fmall boats arrived, but the men who came in them offered the fame objections as the former, and but little encouraged the faint hope of even a lugger being able to come up with the fleet; fo rapidly were the fhips getting out to fea.

But Mac- faw no difficulty, provided he could only prevail upon the crew of any boat to take him from the fhore. He still looked towards us, and still fancied that he distinguished our ship, lying to waiting for him and the cow. Again, and again he folicited the boatmen to take him off, either with, or without the cow. But all was unavailing; the fhips would, neceffarily, be at fea, before the boats could get near them; and to overtake the Lord Sheffield was, abfolutely, impoffible. Poor Mac-, at length, began to difcover that he had proceeded rashly, and without well calculating the means of fuccefs : but he ftill curfed the unconfcious cow, and abufed the fates for the lofs of his paffage, and his baggage !

Thus it ever is with the improvident whether regarding his time, his fortune, or his purfuits. The errors of imprudence he never fails to attribute to misfortune, and he unjuftly charges upon the fates what is only the refult of his own folly or neglect. And, here, my friend, I cannot but remark how common it is to others, as well as to our thoughtlefs Mac— to quarrel with misfortune, whenever

100

ND

to

ley

iad

eit

he ith

X.

5e

of

ed

er,

g

i,

e

1

C

B

D 2

they are overtaken by the confequences of their misconduct. No important personage is fo unhandfomely, or fo unjustly treated as that poor, and modest young lady Mils-fortune. All the errors, and even the crimes of those indifcreet damfels Mifs-usage, and Mifs-condutt, are laid to her charge; and, however frequently, however grievoully the imprudent fuffer from committing themfelves to the guidance of these deceitful jilts, still are they fo infatuated as to proftrate themfelves at their feet, and blindly attribute all the ills they fuffer from them, to the more chafte, and innocent Mis-fortune. How often do the unthinking and the profligate cry aloud against misfortune, for bringing upon them the evils, which were the plain and neceffary confequence of their own folly, or depravity; and which even the smallest share of common diferetion might, with the utmost certainty, have prevented !

If, inftead of thoughtlefsly blundering into various and unneceffary delays, our hurrying Mac— had first engaged a proper vessel for taking off the cow, or even detained the boat which had carried him on shore, he might have faved himself the accumulated vexation, fatigue, and anxiety which were the natural effect, and the neceffary fequel of his method of proceeding; and not, as he infifted, of misfortune !

He now began to perceive that he was left in England, with all his clothes and baggage gone to the Weft Indies, and forgetting, for a moment, his present difficulties-forgetting the cow, and all around him, he funk into penfive contemplation, upon the various evils which might follow, when he was, fuddenly, roufed by the cry of " a lugger, a lugger, here comes a lugger." It made no part of Mac-'s character to lofe time in ufeless bewailings. If a new path prefented itfelf, however rugged or impaffable-if but the flightest opening occurred, however faint the gleam of light admitted, he, hastily, pursued it, dashing, heedlessly, on to his object .- Hence on hearing that a lugger was in fight, fanguine hope again affumed the form of certainty, and without a moment of hefitation, to weigh probabilities, he refolved, at all hazards, in defiance of all doubts, and at whatever expence, to take off the cow in the lugger the moment it reached the shore. The yessel was, accordingly, hailed as it came in, and the men were defired not to let go the anchor; but to "take the gentleman, and the cow on board, and return immediately to the fleet." The crew expressed many apprehensions of not being able to reach the ship; and demanded an exorbitant sum, even, to make the attempt. Mac— would hear no objections: there could be no obstacle—no difficulty! He would give them any reward; and go they must. "Take me and the cow on board—take us off —carry us out towards the fleet, and I'll give you any thing" was all he had to fay, and all the agreement he required.

Some delay, neceffarily, occurred in getting the cow into the boat, although as little as poffible; and Mac —, moft joyfully, jumped in after her. All was now certain. Every terror vanifhed. He regained all his powers, and feeling confident of fuccefs became clamorous and buftling as ever. He entreated the boatmen to be active—related to them his anxieties and difafters, flormed them with idle queftions, hurried them with perfuafions, and encouraged them with offers of reward. Still their fears hung heavy upon them. They proC mifed exertion, but doubted fuccefs. The Lord Sheffield failed well : fhe alfo laid near to the wind, and, not to lofe any further time, we fteered direct for St. Helen's. Unluckily for poor Mac, — his delay had exhausted our patience, and despairing both of our milk, and our messenger, we had already passed Spithead, and were advancing into deeper water, and heavier seas.

Mac— was yet very diftant, and, the boatmen's doubts increasing, his confidence gave way to reftless folicitude. He looked out anxiously for the Lord Sheffield, and implored the men to hoist every fail, and pull hard at every oar : then, growing more and more reftless, he jumped up, fat down, asked questions, curfed the fates, looked up to the fails, cast his eye down to the oars, used persuasions, promised rewards, and exhibited every trait of anxious disquietude.

At length he deferied the Lord Sheffield ! She was very far ahead, but creative fancy faw her lying-to waiting for the lugger. Mac—'s declining hopes were again affured— no doubt remained, and pointing out the fhip to the boatmen he infifted that they might foon be up with her. The men used all their efforts, and still proceeded, although they could not difover that the ship was waiting. Mac- was certain the boat gained upon us. The men thought otherwise, and feared it would be impoffible to reach us: but Mac-had never believed in impoffibilities ! The Lord Sheffield was before them, and in fight, and hence they could, and must overtake her ! He infisted upon their going on, and urgently implored them to use every poffible endeavour. Encouraged by his promifes, and not infenfible to his earnest solicitude, they stretched every fail to its utmost thread, and pulled with all their might at the oars: but every effort was in vain. We had now abandoned every hope of feeing our cow; the fails were full fpread; and we were flanding on our paffage. In fine we were at fea, and had loft both our milk, and our affistant.

D 4

The boatmen found that they were advanced into deep water. The oars became ufelefs, and the rolling feas which beat againft the boat impeded her progrefs. The fhip outfailed her, and fhe evidently fell aftern. All 40

: Up

Ind

if.

ias

len

M, er

Id

60

t, d

18 0

1

-

further purfuit was hopeles, and the boatmen unwillingly gave up the chace. Even Mac whose expectations, when he first descried the ship, had affured him of success, now discovered that the further he advanced, the further he was left behind.

Ever without deliberation, poor unhappy man, he now yielded to the impulse of difappointment, and threw himfelf down in the boat, in all the anguish of despair, lamenting his cruel fortune, and curfing his thoughtless head, for not having secured a boat when first he reached the shore. But as it was not among his qualities to profit by experience, he precipitated himfelf, in the very next step of his proceedings, into further error and confu-To deliberate was no part of his fyffion. tem. Ever adventurous, and devoid of method, he rushed head-long into a gulf yet deeper and deeper; although a fingle moment of fteady contemplation might have extricated him from all his troubles.

When the purfuit was found to be fruitlefs, and he defpaired of coming up with the Lord Sheffield, inftead of defiring to be put on board any other veffel of the fleet which they might be able to fetch, and from which he might have removed to our fhip, any fine day upon the voyage, he ordered the boatmen to carry him back to Portfmouth and there, likewife, inftead of applying to the agent to give him a paffage, in any veffel that might be delayed behind the fleet; he returned the cow to her home, and wildly took a boat to the Ifle of Wight, fancying that, from fome part of the oppofite coaft of the ifland, he might be able to reach the Lord Sheffield. This he had heard mentioned, as barely poffible, and defpifing all doubts and difficulties, inftantly embraced it as certain.

He paid off the lugger, and hired a different boat to carry him to the illand. This again confumed time, and every moment of delay leffened the flight probability he had of fuccefs. On reaching the Ifle of Wight he had to journey many miles, acrofs the illand, to attain the port from whence he purpoled to embark. He accordingly hired a horfe, and rufhing on, as ufual, without thought, forgot to take any perfon to bring it back again. int

ich

ne

10

TC)

10

be

W

18

But little time was confumed in galloping acrofs the ifland, and on reaching the feaport he difcovered fome fhips of the fleet, not far diftant from the fhore. In his mind flight probabilities amounted to a confirmation of fuccefs, and hence the bare appearance of fhips, was, inftantly, conftrued into a certainty of getting on board the Lord Sheffield.

Leaving the horfe he knew not how, nor with whom, he went into a boat, and again put to fea, defiring the men to take him " to the Lord Sheffield, which was about to pafs that way." Again, inftead of adopting the more prudent and certain method of getting on board the first ship of the fleet they could reach, and going, from her, to the Lord Sheffield on the passage, he employed the boatmen, for hours, in the fruitles pursuit of looking for our ship; forgetting, what was actually the cafe, that we might have passed the flow failing vessels of the convoy, and have advanced beyond that part of the island.

The day declined; the fun was finking into the ocean; and night coming on; when our tormented Mac— again found himfelf the victim of difappointed hopes, and ardent expectations. Still it never occurred to him that he might have made one of the dull-failing veffels, and have faved his paffage. In bitter chagrin, and fadnefs of fpirit, he returned to the fhore : but not to deliberate upon the next beft plan of proceeding, for, even yet, he was deaf to experience. Like a Frenchman he was not long the fubject of defpondency, but, in defiance of all fatigue, and without difcuffing any of the probabilities, he again rufhed into new and ill-planned adventures. If one project failed—he believed that he had only to fly to another.

After fome trouble he found the horfe, he had fo thoughtlefsly left behind. And although it was late, and grown almost dark, he galloped across the island, and again took off a boat to Portfmouth: from whence he, abfurdly, fet off the next morning for Plymouth, in the wild certainty of being able to get on board the Lord Sheffield, from thence. Upon his arrival, fome ships were seen at a great diftance from the shore, and it was not easy to afcertain whether they belonged to our convoy; but Mac— was not apt to doubt, and with dife

tain

etter

that il

cert

25 (

200

OUL

102

DOCU

the

Bu

his

and

hip

ABY

gain

difat

(peec whe

1977

COL

out boar

com

felve

discretion he held no fort of acquaintance. Certainties alone were his affociates. He faw every thing plain before him, and believed that he need only put out his hand to poffefs it. It must be the fleet ! These ships were certainly of the convoy, and the Lord Sheffield as certainly one of them. Another boat was accordingly hired, and he infifted upon going out to fea in order to be put on board. It is unaccountable that, evenyet, it should not have occurred to him to go on board any ship of the convoy, which they might be able to make. But no ! he was fure of the Lord Sheffieldhis baggage was on board the Lord Sheffieldand the Lord Sheffield was - - - - - the only ship upon the ocean ! Were it possible to reach any part of the fleet, it must be equally fo to gain the Lord Sheffield. But, to his further difappointment, we had again outfailed his fpeed, and had paffed beyond the port from whence he failed to meet us. The veffels feen were a few of the very dulleft failors of the convoy-and even these were probably too far out at sea to be overtaken in a boat. Yet the boatmen, either from believing it possible to come up with them-or from availing themfelves of Mac-'s eager impetuofity, to their

1 that

iling

bitm turne.

n the

, he inha-

but uf.

hed

300

Div

he al-

be

f

10

1

0

1

own profit, rather countenanced than difcouraged his hopes. It required but little to affure him of what he fo ardently wifhed, and in full certitude, under fevere fatigue, and without food, did he continue failing about throughout the greater part of the day—fupporting both hunger and exertion by the animating hope of fuccefs.

Unluckily the boatmen who had flattered his profpects, were afterwards feized with doubts : The fhips were too far out at fea : the tide was againft them : the wind was fhifting: it was growing calm : they fhould not be able to get back by night, and other difficulties and objections occurred to oppose their proceeding further. Indeed the prospect of reaching the fleet, evidently grew lefs and lefs, until at length Mac— himfelf acknowledged it to be impoffible.

His dilemma was now at the higheft: what to do, or how to proceed he knew not. The Lord Sheffield was gone; his baggage was on board; and he - - - - left behind! All his efforts had proved unfuccefsful—all his hopes fallacious. He returned on fhore, accuti

for fuch ful

tai

200 20 ev

20

his

ko

St.

C

0 ea

iou

WC

bu

in,

in

Bj

n

H

We

cufing his unluckly flars, and blaming fortune for all his difappointments. To most men fuch a fituation would have been very painfully distreffing. He was thrown into a diftant part of the country-far from his home He had loft his clothes-was and his friends. absent from his duty-out of the way of every opportunity of following the convoy, and, worft of all, had fpent every farthing of his money. But he was not eafily difmayed. It now occurred to him that a fleet, bound to St. Domingo, was on the eve of failing from Cork; and, proceeding in all the precipitation of his former movements, he, inftantly, adopted the refolution of journeying to Ireland, to join the Cove convoy. How to get money would have been a difficulty to most men; but diffidence was not Mac -'s greatest failing; he therefore did not lofe time by delaying at Plymouth, waiting remittances to enable him to proceed further, but he went boldly to a gentleman of the town, related the tale of his woes, excited his compaffion, and, o'staining his confidence, procured from him the means of defraying his expences to Ireland. His purfe being, thus, replenished, his cares were quickly diffipated : and he took his de-lifcon.

affine

1 ful

ghour

both

peoi

ttered

with

the fing;

it be thies

pro

, of

lefs

dged

telt

100

2 银影

A

his

20

parture for Cork, under hopes no lefs extravagant, than thofe which had led him to the Ifle of Wight, and to Plymouth; for the Cork fleet was already reported to have failed, and the probability was, that under all circumftances, it would be gone before he could poffibly reach Cove harbour. He travelled with little delay to Milford-Haven; whence he embarked in the packet for Waterford; and thence purfued his journey to Cork, and to Cove. Fortunately the convoy had not failed, and he found the whole fleet ftill lying in harbour, alfo many veffels of the Portfmouth convoy, which had been obliged to put back, after the early ftorms to which they had been expofed.

All former troubles and difappointments, and even the poor ill-tokened cow were now foon forgotten. The greater part of the St. Domingo hofpital ftaff was with the Cork convoy; and Mac— was not of a difpofition to be long a ftranger among his comrades. Looking out for a fhip, in which to procure a paffage, he difcovered the George and Bridget, and, knowing Dr. Henderfon and others of the hofpital-ftaff to be on board, he, without hefitation, applied to the captain for a hi

out

ali

6

h

N

to ge

121

200

in 28

the

bel

So

101

for

of

t

m ha

for 20

tion

birth, repeating his adventures, with and without the cow, as his paffport. The captain had, already, his full complement of paffengers on board—indeed was crowded with more than he could conveniently accommodate. But Mac—was not inclined to hear objections, or to make difficulties. In the George and Bridget he muft go ! The fhip was fufficiently large, and he was difpofed to accept whatever accommodations he might find.

From his frankness of manner, and the willingness he expressed to put up with all the inconveniences that might prefent themfelves, as well as from his companionable familiarity, the master of the ship became interested in his behalf, and adopted him as his prime affociate. Soon he was the companion and friend, and none were fo happy as Doctor and Captain; for in a few hours they were the acquaintances of years; and Mac- was fo entirely chez lui, that he seemed rather to be the master's intimate friend, than a passenger. He now was happy-forgot all past cares and toils, looked forward to a quick passage, and the delight of a clean shirt on his arrival. Yet were his troubles not at an end, for on the accident VOL. II. E tra

lle

et

18

Cesi

100 ay

10

ed

10 0 ch

V

5

W

1.

R

occurring of another fhip running foul of the George and Bridget, the timid nature of poor Mac— reprefented to his imagination a thoufand terrors, and, in the hurried impulse of vivid apprehension, cruelly augmented the alarm : in all the dread of finking to the bottom, he accused his luckless stars, called the fates relentless, uttered loud ejaculations for his fafety, and called that moment only, unhappy, which had led him to the George and Bridget. But the start and favorable passage, and is arrived in fafety at Barbadoes —where poor Mac— yet lives to relate all his perils by fea, and his troubles on shore *.

* The George and Bridget afterwards funk in the harbour of Cape St. Nicholas Mole: and poor unfortunate Mac— foon after his arrival at St. Domingo fell a victim to the yellow fever. th

TO

US

alar

LETTER III.

51

he

1

-

id

1

16

ĉ.

V.

1

I

e

23

1

C

M

A Common fignal of alarm converted into an enfigit of joy. Acutenefs of failors in discovering the nature and extent of a fleet at sea. Convoy from Cork arrives on the 1st of April. Its entrance into Carlisle bay an interesting scene. Author and his comrades expect to proceed to St. Domingo. Voyage thither from Barbadoes only a pleasant run down the trades.

Barbadoes, April 1.

Accustomed to address you upon all occafions without referve, my glad pen, true to the feelings that direct it, feems confcious when made the herald of happy tidings, and, on fuch occasions, certain of being hailed with all the warmth of fympathy, it hastens to greet you with a swiftness even beyond its feathered felf.

We are here all joy and gladnefs. Without the humour of an April day, the morning has been bright and cheerful, from bringing to us friends we have long been anxious to meet.

I have before obferved to you, that the alarm fignal being hoisted at the fort, indicates a ftrange fleet in fight. When it appears every one is on the alert, and ready to take his poft, and thus the fignal ferves to prevent furprize. But, one idea fo predominates among our party, and we have been fo long abforbed in one great expectation, that the fignal of alarm is become a fignal of joy, and, with the report of a ftrange fleet, we inftantly affociate the arrival of our long expected convoy.

Early this morning the enfign of alarm was flying at the battery, but apprehension was not even the momentary effect; no fooner did the eye convey the intelligence to the mind, than the heart bounded with gladnefs, and we affured ourfelves of the remainder of our Portfmouth convoy. In this belief we were alfo fanctioned by the late arrival of the Rofe E. Indiaman and the Columbus, both of which had failed from Spithead with Admiral Cornwallis, and likewife by the arrival of La Favorite, a fast failing French vessel of 20 guns, which had been captured by the fleet on its paffage, and sent in under command of one of our officers-Still our ready conjectures did not convey the fact, for as the unnumbered strangers approached, it was discovered that they were neither foes, nor Portsmouth friends.

3

S

1

0

f

18 te

3 10

be 11

e H

10

E.

h

.

10

il.

13

of

id

C

53

On this occafion, as on many others, we were both pleafed and furprifed to observe the acuteness of our men of the ocean in discovering the nature and extent of a diftant fleet, at Before we could well diftinguish a ship fea. from a brig, our tars, from the cut of the fails, proclaimed it an English convoy, but not that of Admiral Cornwallis. From the mode of fetting the canvals, from the form of the ship, the figure of the masts, or fome flight circumstance, attaching to different veffels, but totally imperceptible to us, they had no hefitation in declaring, while yet at a great diftance, that instead of the fleet from Spithead, it was our long-wifhed for convoy from Cork.

To us this was even better and ftill more joyful news, and we had foon the gratification of finding it correct. The whole fleet is now at anchor in the bay, and has brought to us a large body of troops, deftined for St. Domingo, under the command of General Whyte. This being peculiarly our division of the expedition, we had twofold pleafure in greeting its arrival. In our gladnefs to hail it, we climbed the fhrouds up to the main top—and there flood to view its entrance into the bay.

Such a fcene muft have been highly interefting, even had it been wholly independent of the intimate connection we had with it : the day was fine—the breeze foft and mild, and the furface of the water gently moving. The picture was rich and varied : comprehending, under a bird's-eye-view, the town, and neighbouring plantations—the bay crowded with fhipping—a great extent of the fine country around—and the wide ocean, together with the numerous veffels of our defired convoy dropping with full fails into the harbour.

You will believe that it was one of the most pleasing prospects we had beheld fince our departure from England. While it seems to secure the speedy removal of our long and anxious suspense, it strongly revives the hope of a successful campaign.

This fleet, which had been fo often reported at fea, even fo long fince as before we left England, and which did once fail and return to harhe

d

In.

at

he

the ic-

11-

h-

th try

the pp=

the 900 ms

nd

pe

red

100

11º

bour, finally took its departure from Cove on the 25th of February: hence it may, at last, be confidered to have made a very favorable passage, having been precisely five weeks at fea.

We now look forward to a fpeedy change of place, and I may foon have to addrefs you from St. Domingo, where I hope to meet your letters, and learn tidings of ye all. It is about a week's voyage, and is confidered a very pleafant one—being as fine failing as is known on any part of the occean; the fhip having only to fpread wide her wings and fly before the trades.

ing the rigid northern fibre into increase early, arrival in men Weft Ladies.

contine diversit bas to course successit add

These at full, only increale the enricement.

LETTER IV.

Creole languor from heat of climate—favorable to the Brunonian doctrine. Effect of slimate upon a Dutch failor. Lord Sheffield hailed by a man in the fea. An intoxicated failor overawed by the prefence of a fuperior.

Barbadoes, April.

INDOLENCE is confidered to be the general effect of exceffive heat of climate; and had the great Bruno vifited the tropical regions, he might here have found many facts in fupport of his plaufible and very ingenious doctrine. The languor of climate is felt by few on their early arrival in the Weft Indies. The firft effect of the heat feems to be that of ftimulating the rigid northern fibre into increafed activity—and Creole inertnefs follows only as the refult of continued refidence.

" Precifely thus," would have exclaimed the ingenious Bruno, " and fo with wine, opium, beloved brandy, and all other ftimuli. They, at first, only increase the excitement, and give new vigour to the frame; but, con-

me East v cool its departare from Coveral a ette of affebruery a heade it may, at .

tinued to excefs, they exhauft the excitability —over-run ever delighting excitement, and plunge the body into indirect debility, inducing a flate of body, precifely fimilar to that of Creole inactivity—a flate from which there is no efcape, but through the medium of new or ftill more powerful flimuli." Yet, the renewed vigour—the reftored excitement, acquired by a return to the fedative north, would feem an everlafting obftacle to the theory as flated by its great projector—the languor of climate, or indirect debility, being removed by a directly debilitating power—the abftraction of heat.

Brus

ilor

ated

nī.

al

10

be

Dit.

Ê.

ľ

2

6

d

S

ł

But I am straying from our path. Let me, therefore, retrace my steps, and tell you the effect of climate upon a cold Hollander of our crew.

I have already made known to you that neither my comrade Cleghorn, nor myfelf, yet feel any fenfe of tropical indolence, but continue our habits of exercife in all our rude European ftrength. We have, for fome days paft, been clofely watching one of our failors —a Dutchman. He is recently from Holland, and, in manners and appearance, un vrai Batave. On the paffage he was a dull, heavy, flow, and plodding Dutchman—frigid, and inanimate as the most icy boor of his aquatic nation. His movements were a pretty accurate reprefentation of the crawling floth, and the unvaried fedateness of his visage no less emblematical of his native home.

Having particularly noticed him throughout the voyage, we feel fome furprize in now witneffing, as it were, a complete revolution of his nature and habits. The rays of a tropical fun feem to have given play to his mufcles, fet free all the circulating juices of his frame, and unfrozen the icy coldness of his foul. The change we observe in him is indeed greater than you can imagine : roufed from the torpor of unheeding famenefs, by the allvivifying power of tropical warmth, the cold cloud of indifference is diffipated from his brow-and the Batavian gluten of his frame fublimed into volatile spirits. He is grown cheerful and gay; wears a fmile of mirth upon his countenance, and moves with an agility and alertnefs, beyond all that could have been hoped in a Dutchman. He now fkips merrily abo

boa

and

the 何 al

hu

210 pro

Tio

'n

the

boa

dife

Was

01

Cer

in fe

2

W hir

the 防御 leam

ani

Patic

acette

1, 20

c ld

ough.

DOW

tion

of a

o his

of his

his

jeed

TOM

all.

cold

his

me

IN

poa

LIT

660

ily

boat; and, on all occasions, appears animated and lively; vying in spirits and activity with the sprightlies tar of the ship.

I have next to conduct you into the prefence of a true English failor; but first let me as one versed in the operations of the human mind, in what way the appearance of a superior, before the eye of a drunken man, produces the effect of instantly subduing all the violence of wrath and revenge?

Early this morning our fhip was hailed in the loud rough voice of a failor, who, from the found, appeared to be near to us, but no boat was feen to be alongfide, nor could we difcover whence the voice proceeded; fiill it was repeated again and again, and at length, on looking over the quarter boards, we perceived a naked head in the fea. A rope was inftantly thrown over, and the man, eagerly feizing it, quickly climbed on board. It was a failor from one of the neighbouring fhips, who was much intoxicated, and had thrown himfelf into the fea, in order to efcape from the veffel, on account of a quarrel with the boatswain and mate, who, according to his account, had treated him very ill. He was bitterly incenfed, and in all the heat of rage protefted, violently, against the captain, the mate, the boatfwain, and in fhort the very fhip, fwearing that no earthly power should ever oblige him to return to it, and entreating to be employed on board the Lord Sheffield. But finding him to be exceffively intoxicated, we hailed the mafter of the ship and informed him where to find his failor. He, accordingly, came without delay to fetch him, and we were furprized to remark, that the very inftant he stepped on board, and the man's eye met him, all his inebriate violence, as if by magic, was fubdued, and at once converted into temperate fubmiffion and obedience. Simply the face of his commander in a moment extinguished the furious flames of wrath, checked the burning current of revenge, and deftroyed all fense of an injury which had been powerful enough to impel him to the hazard of throwing himself into the fea;-all his loud execrations ceafed, he became docile and refpectful, and returned to his fhip without a murmur ?-How true it is, my friend, that the paffions of men may be brought under

60

cont

comi

ofter

101

COL

wh

OF (

8 to hi

8 178

Tage

1, the

Think

ever

ng to field

cated,

Imed

ling.

we

y in.

s eve

f by into ply

62-eck-

deeen ard

oud

re-

11

at

er

control, and how lamentable that they are fo commonly left to reign in lawlefs fway! How often do we fee that, like our drunken failor, those intoxicated with boisterous rage, however loud and violent before their intimates, can command themselves into a milder manner, when overawed by the prefence of strangers, or of their superiors.

and and the second look it was not bus the and mail over the of a star is and have been dean

Han laiguess school our no. juint socuries someting foremento of harden's deliver desidential aliand in pour din an analyzanching near ta cherne why the set of a construction in estimations share will more promition whe there i and aldress willing and the first and the curiofity being excited, we is with har an interroge all stand in as back and she which while frait meatnels and destarty.

Waltan ron the basel, we remained in Lagan I is nonzal half it form all yd

LETTER V.

A furgical operation performed with great dexterity by a negro. Progrefs of chigoes in the foot. Negroes expert in finding them. Mode of extracting them. Indolent toil of flaves. Inconvenient method of labour. Severity used towards a party of flaves. Brigands defeated at Grenada. Officers lost of the name of Edwards. Single scontinue to arrive in Carlisle bay. Reports respecting the St. Domingo division. Sir John La Forey arrives at Barbadoes.

Barbadoes, April.

infit

mol

ing

en

ini

山2

elc

the 価冊

for

pa ex

1y ti

flan

mi

If.

Eale

4

e

di

for

Rei

PERHAPS you will feel fomewhat furprized fhould I tell you that we have feen an African flave perform a chirurgical operation, with greater dexterity than it could have been done by the most skilful furgeon of Europe !

Walking on the beach, we remarked two negroes fitting on the fands, occupied with fomething, which feemed to command minute attention; and on approaching near to them, we found the one engaged in extracting that fadly troublefome infect the Chigoe, from the other's foot. Our curiofity being excited, we ftopped to witnefs the operation, and faw it executed with great neatnefs and dexterity.

The chigoe is a very minute infect, which infinuates itfelf, imperceptibly, under the fkin, most commonly of the toes, and there, forming a nidus, produces its young. These are enveloped in a small cyft or bag, which usually increases to the fize of a pea, as the period of maturity approaches. When the young are to escape, a sense of tingling, or itching is felt in the part-at first very flight, often, indeed, not fufficient to attract the notice of Europeansbut, if longer neglected, increases to a fense of foreness on pressure, or on treading upon that part of the foot. This commonly leads to examination, when a black, or dark point is discovered, which directs to a small, and scarcely tumid circle, whitish, or very flightly inflamed, of an appearance fomewhat like what might arife from a pea lodged under the skin. If, at this period the cyft be removed, the difeafe is eradicated, and nothing further is to be apprehended; but if it be still further neglected, the nidus ruptures, and the young ones escaping penetrate into the parts around, producing a fore which degenerates into a troublefome ulcer, and this being increased by the new cyfts of many chigoes, not unfrequently laser.

相對情

Ending

Will C

Fars.

to are migs

torils

ized

th.

ith

300

WO

油

510

m,

hat

the

TTE

ít

proceeds to incurable difeafe, and ultimately to the destruction of the toe.

The chigoe prevails moft in fandy places. In this ifland they are very numerous. A negro not unfrequently extracts five or fix from his feet, at one fitting; and fo expert are they at finding them, that, in examining the foot of an European, a flave will, frequently, difcover two or three chigoes, before the mafter had felt the leaft fenfe of itching or uneafinefs from them.

The mode of extracting them is as follows: with a pointed pen-knife, not very fharp, or the blunt end of a large needle, a flight opening is broken in the fkin, at the fmall black point over the cyft. From this opening the fkin is forced away, by being torn, or broken down, and preffed outwards, on all fides, care being taken not to puncture, or otherwife rupture the cyft. The fkin, being thus feparated, the nidus or fmall bag becomes exposed in form of a little round body—and is, afterwards, extracted by preffing down the point of the inftrument, at one fide, and turning it out whole. A round hole remains not unlike a pea iffue. This the negro commonly fills with afhes from the pipe or fagar, mixed with butter, tallow from a candle, or any other kind of greafe that happens to be at hand, and the cure is completed with the operation.

A specimen of indolence in labour has occurred to our observation, which, whether it be regarded as the effect of climate, or of flavery, I may note to you as an additional example of the feeble exertions used by flaves in their unrequited round of toil. A party of negroes being employed to remove some hospital stores, from the side of the water to a warehouse, Dr. Cleghorn and myfelf took the opportunity of paffing that way in our walk, in order to fee them at work, and to remark upon their industry and mode of labour.-We found no lefs than ten flaves occupied in rolling a middle-fized cheft, with a black driver holding his whip at their backs, and an overseer, of fairer skin, to command them. It was perhaps, in all respects, the very worft way in which fuch a package could have been moved! From the fize of the VOL. II. F

ateh

laces.

l ne.

tom

they loot

dif

fter

els

ol-

ry

3

he

IS

Δ,

d

1

18 es

d

8-

9

cheft it was only with difficulty each negro could find fpace for an affifting hand; from its fhape it was moft inconvenient for rolling; and, from its contents, moft improper—being filled with bottles, jars, earthen pots, and the like. In England four men would have carried it upon a hand-barrow with great eafe while, here, the time and labour of twelve men were confumed in moving it, at a rate incomparably flower, and at the expence, probably, of great part of its contents.

We pointed out to them the injury that might, and the lofs of time that neceffarily must derive from this method of moving it, and endeavored to convince them how much better, fafer, and more expeditious it would be, to take it up, and carry it. But, no ! That was not their way ! "We no favez carry bim, we roll him gently, Maffa, den we no break 'em bottles infide," was the reply. In even the most liberal it is always a task to oppose habits confirmed by long usage among flaves it were utterly in vain to attempt it ! Had we infisted upon the case being carried, it is more than probable that it had

to

lig

De

to

Tet

legro

fom

ng;

Èlog

the car.

2-elve

fate

nce,

hat

ily

il,

ch

IN

0!

R.

en

y.

10

-

作

RE

は

quickly fallen to the ground, and the whole contents been fhattered to atoms; we, therefore, left them to purfue their own means.

We have fince met with another circumstance nearly fimilar, which I might offer to you as a further example of the indolent manner in which flaves execute their task: or I might note it as a specimen of the cruelties which men, held in flavery, may, and too frequently do become subject to, from paffionate, and unfeeling individuals, Walking towards the hospital we met a party of negroes rolling a box of ftores from the boat, in which they had been brought on fhore, to the ftore-room. Perceiving the cafe to be light, and knowing it to contain only veffels of tin, a defire to fee how they would perform led us to try the experiment ofmaking them carry it : nor in doing this were we aware of exposing any of them to an act of cruelty, or, we had affuredly left them, as before, to their own way .- On attempting to lift the package to their shoulders, they fet about it precifely in the awkward and ludicrous manner we had expected; still as no accident, nor injury of confequence could derive from it, we, who were recently from Europe, were quite diverted at their fruitless and incompetent efforts; but Captain ----, who was with us, and had refided long enough in the Weft Indies to have accustomed himfelf to the arbitrary treatment of flaves, feeing the flupid way in which they attempted this new tafk, immediately gave one of the poor fellows a cruel cut, with a large horfe whip, acrofs the face and eyes ! We remonstrated with him on this unneceffary and unmerited feverity; and could not but mark it, in our minds, as an act of wanton cruelty; which, if I may judge from the impulse of my own feelings, will long stand against him. We defired the poor negroes to put down the box, and convey it according to their own method; and, in fentiments of indignation, left the Captain to the remorfe which ought to be his punifhment.

You will be pleafed to know that intelligence has just reached us of the defeat of the brigands at Grenada, in an action with our troops, commanded by general Nicoll. Their lofs is faid to amount to three hundred men.

Te,

ba d de.

fron

tlefs

Ves,

at-

gave

th a es!

cel-

DOL

120-

the

Ind

Oes

ling

s of

HI

211.

the

OUT

eII

en

It is with grief we learn that feveral of our brave countrymen have alfo fallen; among whom we lament to find Major Edwards, whofe very name would feem at this moment to be unfortunate, for Major Edwards of the artillery has alfo juft taken a fatal leave of his comrades, in confequence of (perhaps imprudent) expofure to climate; and a Lieutenant Edwards, only a few days fince, fell a victim to typhus fever contracted on the paffage.

The Portfmouth fleet is ftill a truant to our expectations. From the tidings we had received of it we now think it long delayed; and unhappy conjectures, refpecting it, again prevail. Four additional fhips of this convoy arrived fome days fince, and from thefe we felt affured of learning that the Admiral and the remainder of the fleet were near the ifland; but we were difappointed on finding that they parted from the convoy the first or fecond night after leaving Spithead; fince which they have neither feen nor heard any thing of it. No accurate intelligence having reached us, fince the time our expectations had led us to look for its arrival, we have many fears left Admiral Cornwallis may have failed into Admiral Chriftian's unfortunate path; and, like him, been obliged to trace his courfe back into an English port.

You will feel no furprife on knowing that many rumours have already obtained circulation, all equally uncertain, and, perhaps, equally unfounded, regarding the further movements of the St. Domingo division. Some infift that we are to go immediately; others that we are to wait the arrival of Admiral Cornwallis; and many that we are not to go at all. At one moment the whole of us are to fail without delay : next we hear that only the cavalry is to go : then it is faid that the barrack ships, and a detachment of the hospital staff, only, are to proceed : and, again, we hear it whilpered by fome one, believing himfelf to be quite in the fecret, that the horfe ships, the flore ships, and the whole of the hospital department are to go down to St. Domingo, and the principal body of the Cork division to remain, and affift in the grand objects of the expedition to windward! Amidft fuch incertitude I can, only, fay as ufualcontinue to write to me at St. Domingo.

Bay

Or-

to

E T

that

CIT.

3P8,

Ve+

filt

hat

-[]]

all.

fail

the ar-

Hal

We

m= rle

he

)0-ork

ob.

idft

Sir John La Forey is arrived here in the Majeftic, from Martinique. This officer, who, for fome time paft, has had the command of the navy upon this ftation, and is much refpected in the colonies, we are told is to be relieved, and to return to England on the arrival of Admiral Cornwallis, or Admiral Chriftian.

Also an in there, Filmondal from the provide 115.

Standing of the second states of the second states

F 4 ONIVAT

you, in all of defutiony

LETTER VI.

General Remarks concerning Barbadoes. Different appearance of the West India Islands, and the opposite coast. Situation and extent of Barbadoes. Period of fettlement. General face of the Island.-Called aged and decrepit. Inhabitants proud of its antiquity. Early commerce and population of Barbadoes. Its decline from its former prosperity. Middle class of Inhabitants. Temperature and falubrity of the atmosphere. Exemption from important ills. Endemial malady. Carlifle bay. Whence fo named. Towns, houfes, buts, cottages and other buildings. Varied and interesting scenery. Hospitality of the Inhabitants. Remarks concerning the distinctive appellation of the two divisions of the armament. Difficulty of afcertaining which the windward, and which the leeward islands according to the common acceptation. Soil of Barbadoes. Remarks on tillage and cultivation. Small cattle kept for the purpose of supplying manure. Wet and dry feafons. Sea and land breeze. Equal length of the days. Absence of twilight. Perpetual summer compared with the delighting novelty of an English Spring. Remarks upon Spring. An English Scene in the month of May.

Barbadoes, April 7.

HAVING from time to time detailed to you, in all of defultory remark, the whole chain of circumftances that have paffed under my eye, you will not perhaps deem it premature, should I now offer you a few general observations concerning the island of Barbadoes. After a refidence of many weeks it is probable that my notes may posses more of correctness than any I might have offered you immediately on my arrival. I feel, alfo, that you may find them fomewhat more interefting after the irregular melange that has preceded them. I therefore purpose taking up my pen, from day to day, at each moment of leifure, until I shall have copied for you the few remarks I have collected on the general fubject of Barbadoes, and may probably fend them to you, in a full packet, by fome early occafion.

hear.

Si.

emetri.

In

pile.

erity.

tyof

emal

infri

idet.

norei

ard,

1 06-

all

間本 qual

utt.

lifb

1 the 17.

10

ole

From the fituation of the Weft India Iflands in the Atlantic ocean, extending in form of a femicircle, nearly from the coaft of Florida to the river Oronoko, it might feem that, at fome remote period, they had been detached from the great continent of America, either by the gradual and progreffive power of the ocean, or by fome great and fudden convultion of nature. But from their being of very irregular and mountainous furface, while the land of the proximate fhore is peculiarly low and flat, to a diftance of many miles from the coaft, it would appear that the iflands and the main land owned a diftinct, and very different origin. The craggy fhores, and rugged broken figure of the iflands befpeak the convultive throes of a fudden birth ; while the fmooth and muddy furface of the oppofite coaft indicates a lefs difturbed and flower beginning. Probably the latter has been formed from the gradual deposit of a feculent ocean—the former from the vehement vomitings of volcanic eruption.

Barbadoes is the most windward of the West India Islands; and is in that division of them known by the appellation of Charibbee Islands—a name they have obtained from one of the nations of Indians, who formerly inhabited them.

It is about twenty-one miles in length, by fourteen in breadth; lying in latitude 13° North, longitude 59°. Weft. The English H have occupied it nearly two centuries, having taken poffeffion of it in the reign of James I. At the time of being fettled by our countrymen, it was covered with wood, and had no appearance of having been, before, occupied by man; but it now appears under a very different afpect,—the deftructive axe having converted its deep and heavy forefts into even characteriftic nakednefs.

Weft Indians regard it as of low and level furface: but this can be only comparatively fpeaking, and in reference to the neighbouring iflands whofe bold fummits pierce the fkies: for Barbadoes has all the pleafant variety afforded by hills and broken land, and, in fome parts, is even mountainous, though lefs fo than Grenada, St. Vincent, or St. Lucie.

It is confidered as an old ifland, and, from having been long in cultivation, is faid to be much exhausted, and wearing to decay. Those concerned in the culture of more recent, and now more prolific colonies, feem to compassionate Barbadoes as the venerable and decrepit parent of the race; while its inhabitants pride themselves upon its antiquity, their

fur.

re is

Yatt

the ina,

ores,

De.

th;

op-

W=

en

ent

110

he

of 99(

91

2-

7

4

and, like the feudal lords of ftill more ancient ftates, affume a confequence, I might almoft fay claim hereditary rank and privilege from priority of eftablifhment. This fenfe of diftinction is ftrongly manifefted in the fentiment conveyed by the vulgar expression fo common in the island---" neither Charib, nor Creole, but true Barbadian," and which is participated even by the flaves, who proudly arrogate a superiority above the negroes of the other islands! As one of them if he was imported, or is a Creole, and he immediately replies--" Me neder Chrab, nor Greole, Massa

76

fai

121

201

hu

Perhaps the late decline of this island may be still less the effect of exhaustion of the foil, than of the extensive emigration, and the diversion of commerce confequent on the cultivation of new islands and colonies. In the early period of its culture Barbadoes yielded a produce, and gave rife to an extent of commerce, not known in any other island, and its population increased to a degree, perhaps unprecedented in any part of the globe. Within the first fifty years the trade of the island had become fufficient to employ four hundred icies -

mol

TOI

til.

, 101

由前 odly

s of

Was

ely

F

ind

the

the u.

the

Id-

of

ind

ap;

th.

ed

fail of fhipping; and the number of inhabitants amounted to no lefs than one hundred and fifty thousand, being upwards of five hundred to every square mile.

To enable the land to continue the bountiful produce it now afforded required much labour, and a great and expensive fupply of manure, therefore as new colonies were fettled, and new land brought into cultivation, which was capable of yielding equal returns with lefs labour, and lefs of artificial fupply, it became an object to individuals to emigrate from the neighbouring island of Barbadoes, and engage in the culture of the more recent, and lefs exhausted fettlements; and, thus, with the population, the commerce, which before had been confined to the parent island, was neceffarily diverted into new and various channels.

At this day the Dutch colonies of Guiana, and the captured ifland of Martinique are a continual drain upon the population of Barbadoes. But notwithstanding its decline from what it once was, it is still the most populous, and one of the most important of our

West India posseffions. From situation, and from its fine bay for fhipping, even indepen-.. dent of its produce, it must ever be valuable to us, and indeed may be confidered as the key of the Weft Indies. Some of the Creoles of the ifland, not barely fenfible of this, commit the excefs of attaching to it a degree of importance beyond even England itfelf .- " What would poor old England do," fay they, " were Barbadoes to forfake her ?" This adage you will believe expresses only the veneration of the illiterate; but you will admit that it arifes from a very natural feeling: for those who have feen but one fpot readily fancy that to be of the first importance! And there are multitudes in Barbadoes who never faw any other foil, and who, no doubt, from the fame laudable fentiment which we fo honor in Britons, regard their native isle as pre-eminent above all others.

Barbadoes contains a numerous clafs of inhabitants, between the great planters, and the people of colour, a circumftance which forms a ftriking difference between this ifland and the more recent colonies. Of thefe, many are defcended from the original fettlers, and have 10

the

gene con

gan do

10 0 fpe

VIE

10

W

if tow

be

pid

LOT

for.

m il

its no

poi

the ;

20

Den.

ible

Ney -

68 01 1

nmit

im.

That

Elte

you

of

it

ofe

hat

are ny

ne

in ent

of

he

mi nd no precife knowledge of the period when their anceftors first arrived. Through feveral generations they have been born, and have constantly lived upon the island. They regard it as their native, and only abode, and do not, like their more wealthy neighbours, look to England as another and a better home. Of fome of these old families I may, perhaps, speak more particularly in another letter.

If in point of produce Barbadoes now yields to other fettlements-if its population and commerce have decreafed-if its thick woods have fallen before the rueful axe-and if its mountains are lefs aspiring than the towering fummits of fome of the neighbouring islands; fiill its trade and produce continue to be important; its population great; and the picturesque scenery of its surface, perhaps, unrivalled. Nor are thefe its only advantages; for, in confequence of being more cleared, and more generally cultivated, than the other islands, its temperature is more equable, and its air more falubrious. Damp woods do not interrupt, nor staguant morasses empoifon the breeze. Every part is exposed to the full perflation of the trade-wind; by the coolnefs and falubrity of which, this is rendered the most healthful of the islands; infomuch that it is common, in ficknefs, to make a voyage from the other colonies to Barbadoes, as the Montpelier of the Weft Indies. Being fituated to windward of the other islands. it receives the uninterrupted breeze, brought to it in all its purity immediately from a wide extent of ocean, unimpregnated by the feptic exhalations of stagnant waters, or polluted foils .- Its temperature has been far lefs inconvenient than we had expected. We have felt but little oppreffion from heat; and have continued our habits of exercife without interruption. In the harbour, and placed in the shade, the thermometer has feldom been higher than 84, and at no time has exceeded 86 degrees.

Yet bleffed as the ifland is in its exemption from exceffive heat, from noxious miafmata, and from great and general ficknefs, it has its peculiar ills; being vifited with an endemial affliction, fo much its own as to have obtained the appellation of the Barbadoes difeafe. It appears in form of the elephantiafis, or what is here termed the "glandular Hile trefs

and bay

Gig

file

feat

ftan

form

The

WOJ

in ifland varie

fpott

which tries.

pear

tha

of

aum

VO.

disease,"-and is a most unsightly and distressful malady.

隐 nío

ake

0.85,

ady.

lgh:

n 3

the.

pol.

les

We

and

lout

in een

ded

mp-

ial-

it

21 10 dees

DI-

21

Bridge-town is the capital of the ifland, and is fituated on the S. W. Bank of Carlifle bay, which is one of the fineft harbours, for fhipping, in the Weft Indies; but is not confidered to be fecure during the hurricane feafon. It derives its name from the circumftance of a royal grant of the ifland having formerly been made to the Earl of Carlifle. The other towns are Speights-town, Auftintown, and Hole-town, all of which are much inferior to Bridge-town.

Both the scenery and the population of the island are more indebted to the number and variety of mansions, cottages, and huts, thickly spotted over its surface, than to its towns; which, as is too commonly the case in all countries, are built with less regard to general appearance, and the health of the inhabitants, than to the convenience of trade, and the profit of individuals.

On all quarters of the island are seen numbers of wind-mills, store-houses, and other VOL. 11. G buildings for fugar, coffee, and cotton, houfes of planters, the fmaller dwellings of cottagers, and the huts of negroes, all of which improve the fcenery, while they convey the idea of extensive population, and delight the mind with images of rural enjoyment, and of generally diffused comfort and tranquillity. The numerous buildings, together with their protecting shades about them-the luxuriant tropical vegetation-the conftant verdure of the fields-the evergreen foliage of the treesthe broken irregular hills, lofty mountains, and cultivated rich-yielding plains-all furrounded with extensive views of shipping, and the open sea, create an effect more varied and interesting than is often to be met with, and contribute to render Barbadoes a most pleafant and picturesque island : and from this, added to the examples I have given you of the hospitality, and friendly urbanity of its inhabitants, you will difcover how highly it is calculated to call forth the attention, interest the feelings, and fecure the attachment of those who visit it.

81

In speaking to you of the fituation of Barbadoes, it occurs to me to notice the confu-fion which has arisen in the minds of individuals, from the term commonly employed to diftinguish the two grand divisions of our expedition. To difcriminate what is literally the windward army from that intended for St. Domingo, we hear it denominated the " Leeward-Island" division, than which it had been difficult to have found a term more pointedly incorrect. If the diffinction be intended with regard to the course of the trade wind, it should have been directly the reverse, for the islands, occupied by the troops of what is called the "Leeward-Island" armament, happen with respect to St. Domingo to be every one very far to windward ! If the term regard only the common nautical division of the Charibbee islands themselves, it is still inappropriate, for the windward, no lefs than the leeward of these islands, are possessed by what is termed the leeward army.

Any perfon confulting a map of the Weft Indies must discover St. Domingo to be among the most leeward of the islands, and would necessarily be led to conclude that the Leeward-Island division, was the St. Domingo division, i. e. that they were fynonymous, for

OTIN.

gens

love

a of mind

1903

The

pro-

DADE

10 9

23-

105.

IIII-

and 200

and 123=

bis,

the 11-tis

ell

of

of

fu-

no one could imagine that the troops occupying Barbadoes, and the more immediately neighbouring iflands, could belong to an army defignated "Leeward," in contradiftinetion to the army of St. Domingo. Perhaps the terms Charibbee Ifland division, and St. Domingo division had been more accurate.

Led by this circumstance we have taken fome pains to inform ourfelves, which are the iflands knownunder the term "Leeward," acing to the common acceptation : but we find this to be a question of difficult folution; almost every one dividing them differently ! Scarcely any two perfons, from whom we have fought intelligence, have given the fame reply; nor does it feem to be accurately known where the line fhould be drawn. Some regard the diffinction as respecting only the direction of the trade wind : fome derive it from the courfe taken by the ships from Spain to Carthagena; and others, from various other fources and circumstances; yet all agree that Barbadoes is the most to windward ; and all allow that the Charibbee islands are lefs to leeward than St. Domingo.

But to return to my notes concerning Barbadoes ! I have before remarked to you the principal variations of its foil:—near Bridgetown it is of rich black earth, moftly fpread on a bafe of calcareous rock, formed of madripores, and other marine concretions : in fome diftricts it is of a red earth, of greater depth, but lefs rich : in others the foil is of a light whitifh earth, broken into a grey-looking mould, or hardened into lumps refembling chalk—but actually confifting of indurated argille, bleached by expofure to the weather.

From this variety in the foil, together with that which attaches to fituation, as being flat, or mountainous,—protected, or exposed, it will neceffarily happen, that the produce will differ in different parts of the island : and as the whole has been long under cultivation, it is manifest that if a supply of manure, proportionate to the crops obtained, cannot be procured, a degree of exhaustion, bearing a certain ratio to the deficiency, must refult.

It is established, from the mode of agriculture adopted in some counties of England, that, by an adequate supply of manure, land

G 3

呼

ely

1-

Ri-

aps.

Ind

1-

[]]

be

-

d

1.

1

20

2

11 ę.,

1.184

I

may be continued in a conftant round of cultivation, yielding as prolific crops as upon its earlieft culture ; and this is now found to be no lefs certain, than that if the land be fubjected to continued tillage, without fuch fupply, it will be fo exhaufted, in the courfe of a few years, as not to give fufficient produce to compenfate the labour and expence of cultivation.

The fame facts equally apply to Barbadoes, where, if the artificial fupply be not commenfurate with the produce removed from the land, a gradual diminution of the crops will fucceed, or, in order to have thefe in their ufual abundance, the acres in cultivation must be reduced to fuch a number as the ifland shall be capable of furnishing with an adequate quantity of manure; and we accordingly find that great herds of a fmall species of cattle, mostly fteers, are kept upon the plantations, for the purpofe of fupplying this indifpenfable addition to the foil. These are employed instead of horses in the heavy labour of the eftate, and we often fee from twelve to twenty-four of them yoked in a waggon, drawing a fingle hogfhead of fugar, or some other small load, such as in London would be conveyed with facility by two horfes in a cart.

At night the cattle are penned upon a bed of trafh, collected from the refuse of the canes and other waste materials of the estate, by treading upon which, and mixing it with their own dung, they trample the whole into an useful compost for the fields.

It neceffarily follows from fuch numbers of these cattle being required, for the purpose of manuring the land, that a greater supply of beef and veal is raised for the markets, and that fresh provisions are more plentiful than in most of the other colonies. Of the custom of buying the veal in live quarters for the pot I have already spoken—and I may now remark that the beef is too commonly killed very young—forming neither beef nor veal, but a fomething of flavor and appearance between the two.

The feafons here are not divided into winter and fummer, but into wet and dry: yet are they, by no means, what many from these terms would believe, who might imagine that half the year is drowned with inceffant rain, and the other half parched with conftant drought. Such a conftruction of the terms wet feafon, and dry feafon, though not unfrequent, is far from correct, and leads to a very inaccurate idea of the climate; for, although it has been the dry feafon, during the whole time we have been at Barbadoes, we have fearcely had two fucceffive days without refreshing rain : although the showers are not fo heavy at this period as at that of their greater frequency, termed the wet feason, when the torrent which falls might often convey the idea of a fudden rupture of the clouds, letting forth their waters in fireams to the earth.

The quick evaporation which fucceeds to rain in these climates creates a most agreeable and refreshing coolness. The extreme ardor of the fun's rays is also counteracted by the ever-grateful breeze, which sets in from the fea about eight or nine o'clock in the morning, and continues throughout the day, ceasing only as the fun forfakes us at evening ; when we are again defended from oppressive languor by a breeze springing up from the land. This fets in as the set. verging, as it were from a central point, is felt on all quarters of the island.

ļ

1

et

Without these beneficent provisions of nature no tropical climate could have been habitable: nor does that great parent in any thing more admirably display her guardian care, nor more strikingly exhibit the universal confistency, or the happy order and arrangement of her works. The intense heat between the tropics must have been destructive to animal life, had not an antidote been offered in the refreshing trades; which, forming the fuite of a burning fun, moderate the effects of his too effulgent rays.

The day is nearly of equal length throughout the whole circle of the year. We have none of the fhort dark days of an English winter, nor of the still shorter light nights of a Scottish fummer. Nights of one or two hours, and days of fix or feven are here equally unknown : until nearly the hour of fix fair Aurora opens not her gates to spread around her eastern beams, and solemn Vesper, with little variation throughout the year, closes the spangled brightness of the west about the hour of feven. Evening is fcarcely known. The fun traverfing his vertical courfe finks at once from the horizon, and, refufing his oblique beams to protract or foften the decline of day, robs us of the gentle crepufcule hour, and fuddenly throws around all the obfcurity of night.

This uniformity of the diurnal round fcarcely exceeds that of the general temperature of the climate, which brings us one perpetual fummer. The fields and the trees are always green. Live nature ever fmiles. Uninterrupted by the torpor of winter fhe is neither chilled with froft, nor buried in fnow. But, for these advantages, we forego the fprightly delight, and genial comfort of a fummer's evening, the all-animating pleafures of a returning fpring, and the foft and placid joys of gentle twilight's hour. Had I time for fuch discuffions, I might here enter into a long digreffion upon the comparative excellence of the climate we have left, and that we now inhabit: yet should I yield the palm to my native island, for of all the delights of climate in other countries, however great or durable, I know none that can stand in competition

W

]23

fe

P

th

fu

山

UL

恤 ma

ten

the

the

by B

E

h

D

in fuc

101 eye,

with the fweet and animated foftnefs of England's fpring.

carce

ertic

hand

r foha

tle cre

und

round

npera

e per-

es an

U.

the is how.

the_ lus-

s of a ovsoire

fucin

g di-

ofthe

N IC-C

mater ables

ition

Of this foul-enchanting feafon the effect, no doubt, is much heightened by its periodical return; and from its fucceeding to the chilling blafts, and all the long and dreary fufpenfion occafioned by winter. It is in fact the refufcitation of nature, and is calculated univerfally to enliven,—while it forms the high repaft of feeling and contemplative minds.

What combination-what scenery can man contemplate capable of affording the tender delight felt in a folitary ramble, acrofs the rich and neat enclosures of England, at the happy period, when nature, reanimated by the genial orb of May, difplays, in gentle mildnefs, all her lovelieft form, and regales every fense with her foftest banquets ! Perhaps no fcene is known fo fweetly gratefulnone that fo calms the bosom with foft feelings of peace and comfort, or that ministers fuch copious streams of genuine delight. All around unites in fweetest harmony. The eye, the olfactories, the ear, the very fenses of feeling, and of tafte-all are gratified. The fields, fpread with green-fhooting herbage, appear enchantingly variegated with the cowflip, the yellow crocus, and the daify. While the fleecy herd patiently crop the fucculent plant, the young lambs are feen skipping, innocent and playful, at the fides of The hedges protrude the vertheir dams. dant bud and fwelling bloffom to drefs their chilly nakednefs, and the trees, cafting off the dull coat of winter, affume the foft livery of the feafon. The fragrant odours of the apple bloffom, the hawthorn, and the violet are exhaled around-the blackbird, the thrush, and the nightingale, warbling foft carols amidst the budding bushes, enchant the The very organs of tafte are regaled ear. with freshness from the mild falubrious breeze; and to the whole frame a genial feeling is imparted by the foftering rays of a temperate and cheering fun.

In mental retrospect do I oft-times contemplate a scene which every Englishman of feeling must have frequently enjoyed. Taking him from the busy hum of the world, my fancy leads the lover of nature into the endofe mor

greet

TIT

Nim

CTO

20 而

the

ftre

ling

(2)

ter

VI

the

To

blea

ofc

limp

TOOK

of hed

Ipar

prot

lun, tshi

closed fields of England, in one of the mild mornings of May, and feating him under a green-budding hedge, upon a moffy and funwarmed bank, furrounded with violets, bids him look down the floping mead to the crooked brook which winds in gentle current along the bottom, and there behold the thick wood of the opposite bank, reflecting the dark semblance of its branches in the ftream, and burfting forth its protecting foliage to conceal the harmonic fongsters of the feason. It also directs his eye to the green carpet of shooting herbage, enriched with the tender cowflip and the humble daify, and invites his regard to the playful innocence of the young lambkins skipping before him. To his ear it conveys grateful melody in the bleating of diftant herds; the lively whiftling of contented hinds; or the happy milk maid's fimple fong :- even the loud cawing of the rooks perched on the lofty elms, the foft note of the innocent robin hopping under the hedge, and the very chirpings of the merry fparrow excite congenial feelings, and improve the general harmony-while the bright fun, occafionally obfcured by fleeting clouds, exhibits the varied interchanges of light and

93 ath

hert

th the

til.

the

les

e ver.

s their file

y of e ap.

violet

mh,

arois

the

galed

eze;

ng 18

npe-

00-

OĪ

sing

my

en.

IO

fhade, and gives a higher intereft to all around. Having thus placed him, appealing fancy earneftly demands if any thing in the eternal fummer of other regions can equal the foft delight—the genial harmony of foul and fentiment infpired by this tender vernal fcene ?

Regu

T

of

Some fair friends of ours would place at his fide the miftrefs of his heart, and thus give perfection to his happinefs, as Buffon perfects the exiftence of his infant of maturity. But excufe me, ye fair, fhould I hazard the fuggeftion whether to be left alone, to think and wifh towards her, might in fuch a fituation be lefs foul-delighting; for anticipation is faid to fweeten our higheft joys, and, perhaps, it were the very life and effence of fuch-like moments to feel the tender privation of having yet a fomething to wifh, and to hope.

to,

Deali

in th al the

oul up

Icent

laces

d thus

Buffor

matu-

azari

le, to luch a ticipa-

and,

e of

iation

hope.

Regularity observed at Barbadoes in regard to rifing and going to reft. Land and fea breeze. Diet and mode of ferving the table. Planters and merchants fometimes grow fat : clerks, book-keepers, &c. very thin- Condiments much used. Plenty deemed a greater excellence than delicacy of affortment at a Barbadoes feast. A West India dinner. English habit of driving ladies from the dinner table practifed alfo at Barbadoes. Bad arrangement of dinner parties. Attendants of the table numerous. Odour of the Negroes offenfive. Stock and provisions abundant at Barbadoes. Perfonal clothing of the inhabitants-Bed clothing. Languid pronunciation of Barbadoes Creoles. Concerning the flate of the flaves. Old and decrepit Negroes allowed to beg, and to lie about the Areets. First example of slaves seen by the author and his comrades. The Negroes of the poorer owners diffinguifbed from those of the more opulent. Clothing of flaves. Construction of their dwellings. Negroes chilly, and hover round a fire in the evening ; - are fond of smoking tobacco. Food iffued to the flaves. Pepper pot. Hours of toil. Deficiency of moral principle among flaves.

April 8.

THE uniform returns of day and night in this climate appear to induce a regularity of habit in the hours of rifing, and going to reft. It is common to leave the pillow at fix in the morning, and few perfons remain out of bed after eleven at night. The cooleft and most pleafant part of the day is from fix to about half-past feven o'clock in the mornning: about eight an oppressive closeness is often experienced, arising from the decline of the land breeze, before that from the fea has become fufficiently strong to diffuse its influence. A fimilar period, likewise, occurs at evening, between the abatement of the fea breeze and the setting in of the breeze from the land. Some days the closeness of these hours is so flight, as to be street perceptible, but commonly they are by far the most oppressive of the twenty-four.

96

in ter fr

Refpecting the mode of living it may be remarked that in all countries faid to be civilized, and among all people calling themfelves cultivated, too much of time and attention are devoted to the bufinefs of eating and drinking. Perhaps the majority of difeafes in focial life may be traced to this fource. Were it poffible to convey, in a fingle fentence, the frightful train of ills, the melancholy interruptions of health, and the immenfe confumption of time, thus produced, men would be fhocked to read it ! They would be terrified to behold the magnitude of an abufe, to which, unheeding, they had fo long been devoted. This remark but too correctly applies to the island from whence I am addreffing you, and where, from the degree of indolence induced by tropical heat, the ingefta taken to excefs may be expected in a peculiar degree to opprefs the human frame.

The people of Barbadoes are much addicted to the pleafures of the table. We have fometimes thought that, in eating, they might put to the blufh even the turtle countenances of our London fat citizens.

The breakfaft ufually confifts of tea and coffee, or chocolate, with eggs, ham, tongue, or other cold meat. Bread is feldom ufed, but fubfitutes are found in roafted yams or eddoes, both of which a good deal refemble roafted potatoes. They are ufed hot, and eaten with butter, which is fometimes made in the country, but more frequently barrelled and brought from Ireland; that made in the ifland being of cream-like foftnefs, and not always of good flavor. In the courfe of the forenoon are ufed fruits, or fandwiches, with

VOL. II.

rom

mon

nels ;

Ang c

版 urs ;

he fe e fron

thele

ntible,

t op=

ay be

CIVE-

elves

n are king.

l life

pelli-

ght-

tions

in of cked

hold

free libations of punch and fangaree. Immediately preceding dinner, which is ufually at an early hour, are taken punch and mandram. The dinner, for the most part, is profuse, and many hours are commonly passed at table in full and bufy occupation.

After a more than plentiful confumption of food, a free indulgence in fruit, and a bounteous fupply of wine and other good liquors, to crown the repaft, the appetite and thirft are further provoked by a difh of fprats, or other broiled fifh, and a large bowl of milk punch. Tea and coffee are next ferved and laftly comes the fupper, which forms no triffing meal. After this the bottle, the glafs, and the punch bowl know no reft, until the filent hour when Morpheus, with rival powers, dethrones the Bacchanalian god.

From the nature of the climate we had expected to have found the inhabitants men of meager figure, half diffolved in perfpiration, and exhausted almost to shadows: nor, indeed, are such figures rare, but they are to be found, mostly, among the clerks, the book-keepers, and those orders of white people below the ally

11-

=014

dı

tion

id a

300d

200 ats

mik

d-

S 80

als,

the

Ters,

had nen

OD,

eed, nd,

2181

the

managers—thole who are employed in active and bufy occupation, and have but little time to devote to indolence and the luxuries of the table. Among the merchants and planters are many of as fat and portly figure as wellfed aldermen; to whom, indeed, they are fcarcely fecond in Epicurean devotion.

We obferve that condiments are used very generally, and in great quantity. Acting as ftimulants they appear to have the effect of causing the relaxed and enfeebled ftomach to receive and to digest more than it would, otherwise, require—more, indeed, than it would, otherwise, take. The various species of red pepper, known in England under the common term Cayenne, are used in quantities that would seem incredible to people of colder climates.

A mixture of food is often taken, of a nature fcarcely lefs heterogeneous than is commonly confumed at the varied feaft of a French appetite; and with this melange of folids, are ufed wine, punch, porter, cyder, noyeau, and other good liquors in free libation—yet are there fpecimens of health and vigour, amidst all these indulgences, which might stagger the doctrines of the advocates of abstemiousness.

H 2

In the order of the feaft plenty more prevails than elegance. The loaded board groans, nay almost finks beneath the weight of hofpitality. That delicacy of arrangement now studied in England, under the term æconomy of the table, is here deemed a less perfection than a substantial plenty. Liberality is more esteemed than delicacy in the supply; and solids are, sometimes, heaped upon the table in a crowded abundance that might make a London fine lady faint.

The repaft not unfrequently confifts of different kinds of fifh—a variety of foups—a young kid—a whole lamb, or half a fheep feveral difhes of beef, or mutton—a turkey a large ham—guinea fowls—and a pigeon pie; with various kinds of puddings; a profufion of vegetables; and multitudes of fweets. I was lately one of a fmall party, where, precifely, this dinner was ferved, and where the half of a fheep, kicking its legs almost in the face of the master of the house, adorned the IOI hich

ates

Pite.

Dans,

bol

WOIL

Dmy

LIOD

ore

DAS

able

2 9

of

-2

-

-

18;

101

I

ie-

he

ie

Perhaps we may find it to be common to the Weft Indies, but, hitherto, it has appeared to us peculiar to Barbadoes—to put on table three or four large fubftantial puddings of different kinds, and four or five difhes of the fame fort of meat, differently dreffed. Unaccuftomed to this, an Englifh eye, on looking into the dining room, is furprized at the continuation of mutton, mutton, mutton, pudding, pudding, pudding, from one end of the table to the other, and which the crowd of other good things feems to render unneceffary.

The generous board is often fupplied wholly from the produce of the effate, and on the occafion of giving an entertainment it is not unufual to kill an ox, a fheep, or, literally, the fatted calf: hence it occurs that various difhes of the fame kind of food, under different forms, fometimes make up the principal part of the dinner, and, thus, it becomes explained why we fometimes fee upon table, at the fame time, roafted mutton, mutton ragout, boiled mutton, mutton chops, and a mutton pie. The puddings moftly ufed are of citron, coco-nut, yam, lemon, and cuftard, and do great credit to the Barbadoes cookery-book. The defert is not lefs plenteous than the dinner, confifting of a variety of fruits, and preferves, ferved in crowded fupply. The bottle and glafs pafs freely, and the fluids are in full proportion to the folids of the feaft.

H 3

The liquors most in use are Madeira and claret wines, punch, fangaree, porter, and cyder. Punch and fangaree are commonly taken as the diluents of the morning. The latter forms a most delightful drink. A glass of it, taken when parching with thirft, from heat and fatigue, may be ranked among the higheft gratifications of our nature ! At fuch a moment, a draught of fangaree approaches nearer, perhaps, to god-like nectar, than any other known liquor. It confifts of half Madeira wine and half water, acidulated with the fragrant lime, fweetened with fugar, and flavored with nutmeg. A ftronger fort of it is fometimes drank under the fuperlative name of fangrorum This differs from the former,

only in containing a greater proportion of wine.

tto: lort

on.

do

the

and p

The

uies

alt

ira

nd

aly

he als

n

he

ch

DY

2=

th

10

1

16

5

103

The too prevalent English custom of fending away the ladies, or, according to the politer term, of the ladies retiring after dinner, for the gentlemen to enjoy their bottle, prevails also at Barbadoes; and, we have thought, even to a greater extreme than in England. They leave us very foon after dinner, and, often, we see no more of them during the evening. Frequently they do not, even, join us before dinner; but we find them all affembled, at the head of the table, when we enter the dining room; and, even there, we have little of their company, for the party is often fo badly arranged, that we have fcarcely more of the fociety of the ladies, and the people of the island, than if we had remaind on board Instead of the different perfons being, ship. pleafantly, intermixed, it is too common to fee the ladies grouped together in a crowd at the upper end of the table-the officers and ftrangers, just arrived from Europe, placed at one fide,-and the gentlemen of the island, who are mutual and familiar acquaintances, at the other fide-implying that it is confidered a rule of politeness to place each person nearest to those with whom he is best acquainted. But this arrangement confines the conversation of each person, too much, to those with whom he is in the daily habit of affociating. To me, it is always a disappointment, for I can converse with my comrades in my usual round, when strangers are not nigh; but, when thrown into society, in a foreign country, I always feel a defire for the conversation of the people residing therein, expecting to obtain information from them, both of the country itself, and of the manners and customs of its inhabitants.

н4

The attendants at the dinner table are very numerous. In addition to thole of the family, almost every gentleman has his own flave; and, thus, it often happens that the room is quite crowded with fable domestics, whose furfaces emit an odour not less favory than the richest discussed of the board. How long it may be before our olfactories become reconciled to this high-feasoning of a West India feast I cannot conjecture; but, at prefent, we find it extremely offensive. Poor Master is particularly annoyed by it, and tani erla.

with atiny

fo;

alo

When

try, -

ofthe

btain

tatry c

of its

e are fthe

OWE

e the effics

arory

How

come

Wet

pre

Post

ad

always takes care to obtain a feat as much to windward as poffible. Cleghorn and myfelf fuffer no lefs from a most filthy custom of the negroes—of taking a plate from the fide-board, before it is wanted, and standing with it under the arm, ready to give it the moment a change is required. On account of this dirty habit, we are obliged to attend with eagle watchfulness to avoid receiving as a clean one, a plate which a flave has been holding for some time closely pressed to, certainly, not the sweets part of his naked skin.

In its fupply of fresh provisions, particularly what is here termed flock, fuch as poultry and the like, Barbadoes exhibits a degree of plenty unknown in the neighbouring islands. This would feem to be the happy effect of allowing the flaves to raife poultry for fale; together with there being a number of small fettlers, distributed about the country, who find their support chiefly in breeding flock for the markets. Poultry has been our principal food. Turkies, guinea fowls, and chickens, we have had in great abundance. When we arrived, in the month of February, they were fold in the public market at little more than a bit (about $5\frac{1}{2}d$.) per pound, but from the increafed demand confequent upon the arrival of fo many troops, and fuch crowds of fhipping, the price is now raifed to nearly double. The Mofcovy ducks are alfo bred in great numbers upon the Ifland, and are fo large as to appear like geefe, when dreffed for the table. Next to poultry they have veal and pork in the greateft plenty. In Bridge-town they have alfo a fifh-market, which at times is well fupplied, but not fo regularly, as, from the infular fituation of the country, might be expected.

Of the immenfe quantity of poultry raifed on this little ifland, you will form fome idea, when I tell you that not only the fhips of war, and the transports, but most of the West India trading ships, recruit their stock at Barbadoes; and that in addition to this constant and extensive drain it furniss occasional supplies to the other islands. Since we have been in Carlisle bay, we have seen, at various times, great quantities of stock shipped for the Island of Martinique.

In point of clothing the people of Barbadoes deviate lefs from the habits of England th

W.

a

pa

CC

1 01

the

of fort

great

asto

able k in ave.

lup-

ilar alf-

me ps

he

at 11-

12

57

US

R

3=

d

than the difference of climate would feem to warrant. Their drefs refembles that worn in our more northern latitude, being for the moft part a cloth coat, with white cotton waiftcoat, and nankeen pantaloons. In fome inftances people of very active employment, or thofe who are much exposed in the fields, have the whole fuit made of nankeen. Their night clothing feems more appropriate to the greater heat of climate than the apparel of the day. It is common to fleep on a hard mattrefs in a long cotton fhirt, without any other covering, except in the cooleft feason, when they make the flight addition of asimple cotton fheet.

One of the moft prominent characteriftics of the ifland is the tedious languor in which the people of Barbadoes pronounce their words. Nothing perhaps is more annoying to ftrangers. To convey to you, by the pen, any idea of their manner of fpeaking is utterly impoffible :—to be comprehended, it muft be heard. The languid fyllables are drawled out as if it were a great fatigue to utter them ; and the tortured ear of an European grows irritable and impatient in waiting for the end of a word, or a sentence. " How you do to da-ay," fpoken by a Barbadian creole, confumes nearly as much time as might fuffice for all the compliments of the morning ! nor is this wearifome pronunciation confined to the people of colour only. It occurs, likewife, among the whites, particularly those who have not visited Europe, or refided for some time away from the ifland In the fame lengthened accent do the lower orders of Barbadians, in unrestrained impetuous rage, pour forth vollies of uncommonly dreadful oaths, which, in their horrible combinations and epithets, form imprecations fo ftrikingly impious, as to entitle them to the merit of peculiarity.

In manner, alfo, and in movement, as well as in fpeech, a degree of indolence and inaction prevails, beyond what might be expected, merely from heat of climate, and which has in it a fomething extremely annoying to Europeans.

The flate of the negroes in Barbadoes varies, as the flate of flaves must ever do, accord oft

hans othe

feet

tio

W

fer

cei lar tos

flex

Di

0 fe

A

of 10 an iller had wath

cording to the difpolition and circumftances of the mafter. Under fuch benevolent and humane characters as Mr. Waith, and many others whom we have vifited, they may juftly feel themfelves a favored race, for their fituation might be envied by the poor of nations, where freedom is better known ! But under fevere and cruel mafters it becomes a flate of cealelefs vexation, and mifery.

his days, in the heavy toils of bondage, ewh

fame

TS (

rage,

dful

tions

ingiy

it of 11:0

1 25

and ect-

ich

to 028

20*

On the very important queftion of general flavery I do not feel that my experience, hitherto, in the Weft Indies either warrants me to fpeak with confidence, or enables me to judge with accuracy. But I will take care to note for you fuch facts as, from time to time, fhall occur to my obfervation, and may fome day, perhaps, obey your commands, by giving you the reflections they create in a feparate letter.

Very much to the diferedit of Barbadoes numbers of old, difeafed, decrepit negroes, at once, objects of compaffion, and of horror, are feen lying at the corners, or begging about the ftreets. This, like the toleration of the fwarms of mendicants in England, is an evil, and a nuifance, for which there is no excufe. If thefe ale depravity of the bushin heart ! No poor unfortunate negroes are free, they fhould be relieved by a general tax upon the ifland : if flaves, the law fhould compel every mafter to provide for his own. Should the laws of humanity be infufficient, and those of justice inadequate, a law of coercion fhould constrain the unfeeling owner to protect and cherist the being, whose youth and vigour have been expended for his benefit; and who, having worn out his days, in the heavy toils of bondage, is grown aged and infirm !

What can be fo unworthy ! what fo culpable or difgraceful, as the cruel inhumanity and fordid injuftice, which render a mafter capable of neglecting in old age, the flave from whom he has exacted all the labour of youth, and all the vigour of manhood ! Perhaps nothing pourtrays in more melancholy demonstration, the possible depravity of the human heart ! No longer able to exert himself to his owner's profit, the aged flave enfeebled by years, and exhausted by toil, is left to beg his yam from door to door !—abandoned by his cruel master he is a pensioner upon promiscuous charity, or is allowed to fall a prey to difease, and to want ! of

212,

get 118

OH

12

of

ver

相

112

W

of

bef

get

Di

h

CI

Ь

fil

tre

the

Dani

nafte

O ETTE

論 aftri

ht

en er

WOI

odage tulpa

v ani-

blect

n he

the

DOUI-

, the

No

pro-

88.

door

The

高

10

Without fome compulsory law the flaves of the avaricious and of the lower orders, who are, themfelves, fcarcely removed from indigence, must ever be fubject to this hard lot of neglect and cruelty.

The first specimen we faw of West India negroes-the first example of flaves was fingularly calculated to impress us with fentiments of compaffion and difgust. It occurred at the very moment too when the impreffion would be most powerful, and confequently will ever remain indelible. Immediately on our coming to anchor in Carlifle bay, a woman appeared alongfide the ship in a small boat with some bad fruit, tobacco, falt fish, and other articles of traffic. She was rowed by two negroes, who, we learned, were her flaves. Two fuch objects of human form and human mifery had never before met our eyes! They were feeble, meager, and dejected-half-ftarved, and halfnaked; and, in figure, too accurately refembling hungry and diftempered grey-hounds! They crouched upon their heels and haunches in the boat-their naked bones almost pierced their filthy and eruptive fkins-their wasted frames trembled with debility-and while their hollow eyes and famished countenances rendered them ghaftly images of horror, their whole appearance shocked humanity, and appalled the fight !---- Are thefe, we exclaimed, what are called flaves ? Is this the flate to which human beings are reduced in bondage?-Afflicting and cruel indeed ! Well may flavery be deemed a curse! Can it be possible that these spectres once were men ! Are fuch the objects we are to fee-are these the wretched and deplorable beings who are to appear every day, and every hour before our eyes ? Forbid it humanity : forbid it heaven!-Such was the apoftrophe of the moment, and I feel a fincere gratification in being able to inform you that the melancholy fubjects of this first impression were not correct specimens of the general mass of flaves. Still is it grievous that any fuch examples should be seen, but we hope to find them only rare inflances, for we learn that the large gangs of negroes kept by the great merchants, and the planters, are generally treated with kindness and humanity, and appear contented and in comfort.

But it is eafy to diftinguish the flaves of the opulent and respectable inhabitants from là

10 tat

Wit

21

me

COL

bed

reff

hth

YC

those of the poor and needy people of the town. The latter, being in poverty themfelves, can only give to their negroes a fcanty allowance of food, while their indigence induces them to exact an over-proportion of labour. Hence the flaves of this class of people appear too often with fharp bones and hungry flavid countenances, having eruptions about the body, and their fkins of an unhealthy obfuscate hue. Their general appearance indeed is dirty and unwholefome, and ftrikingly marks their neglected flate. Want and wretchednefs are deeply ftamped in every line of their perfons-and they may not inaptly be faid to refemble the worn-out horfe, or the ftarved and jaded als, too often feen trembling under a heavy burden-or reeling in an old tattered cart upon the roads of England.

It is not the practice to load the flaves with fuperfluity of clothing.—A fhirt, and a pair of breeches, or only the latter, for the men; and a fingle peticoat for the women, conftitute the whole apparel.—Bedding and bed-clothes find no place in their lift of neceffaries : they ufually fleep on a hard plank, in the clothing of the day. Repofe is both

VOL. II.

nderkow

whole

dihe

12 3TE

ch hu.

licting

emei

ectre !

areta

orable

Verv

ity :

rephe

ifica.

me.

vere

s of

1 C.X-

find

the reat

ally

ap-

of

OM

enfured and fweetened to them by labourand the head needs no pillow but the arm. Some who, by means of industry and œconomy, are more advanced in their little comforts, procure a kind of matting, a paillaffe of plantain leaves, or fome other fpecies of bedding, to defend them from the rough plank; but this is an indulgence felf-attained, not a neceffary provided by the mafter. The architecture of their little huts is as rude as it is fimple. A roof of plantain leaves, with a few rough boards, nailed to the coarfe pillars which support it, forms the whole building .- The leeward-fide is commonly left in part open, and the roof projects to fome diftance over the door-way, forming a defence against both the fun and the rain.

Notwithstanding the great heat experienced by Europeans, the negroes feel the evenings chilly, and we frequently fee them crowding round the bit of fire which they make for cooking their fupper. This is commonly in the open air near to the door of the hut; but they fometimes place it upon the middle of the dirt floor withinfide the building — where they feem to have great enjoyment in fquat-

DO

ev

I

fa

01

01

VOL: SP

ting round it, amidst the thick cloud of smoke, to whis additional fumes from the short pipe or fagar, and to join in loud and merry song.

II5

bour.

arn

COПO.

tom.

Daillan

roug

tainet

The

ude z

动 ë pil. build.

left in ne dif

fense enced

ningi

vding

cook-

in the

they

t the where

juate

Smoking is an universal custom among In order to be at all moments prothem. vided for this enjoyment, they carry in their breeches pocket a short pipe, about an inch in length from the bowl; or instead of this a leaf of tobacco rolled into a fagar. Very often the pipe is so short, or the fagar so closely smoked away, as to be in danger of burning the nofe, or even the lips. I have frequently feen them fmoking with the pipe fo fhort as to hold it in the mouth by preffing with the lips upon the lower part of the bowl. They often kindle their pipes from one another's mouths, by putting bowl to bowl and nose to nose, and smoking into each others eyes, until the tobacco has taken fire.

The food of the negroes is iffued to them weekly, under the infpection of the manager. It is very fimple and but little varied; breakfaft, dinner, and fupper being fimilar to each other, and for the most part the fame throughout the year. It confifts mostly of Guinea corn, with a small bit of falt meat-or falt fish. Formerly a bunch of plantains was given to each flave as the weekly allowance; but the plantain walks being mostly worn out, this is become an expensive provision. Rice, maize, yams, eddoes, and fweet potatoes form an occasional change, but the Guinea corn is, commonly, iffued as the weekly fupply; and in order to obtain fome variety of food, they barter this in exchange for other provisions, or fell it for money, and with that buy falt meat or vegetables. We occasionally see them offering the Guinea corn for fale; and on being afked why they fell it, they thus express themfelves-"Me no like for have him Guinea corn always ! Massa gib me Guinea corn too much-Guinea corn to-day-Guinea corn to-morrow-Guinea corn eb'ry day-Me no like him Guinea corn-him Guinea corn no good for gnhyaam."

The weekly fupply being iffued to them on the Sunday, it becomes their own care how to hufband it fo as to have a fufficiency of food until the following Sabbath. Thofe who are industrious have little additions of their own, either from vegetables grown on

br

the fpot of ground allotted to them, or purchafed with the money obtained for the pig, the goat, or other flock raifed about their huts in the negro yard.

r fall

Was

1.50

WOT

I po.

t the

s the tome

lange

and

We

uinea

they

"Me

IVS!

uinea

Gai

inel

2m.#

them

Care

iency

They

sof

01

A mels of pottage, or very hot foup, called pepper-pot, is one of their favorite difhes, and one indeed which is generally effeemed by the inhabitants, and by ftrangers. It is prepared by flewing various kinds of vegetables with a bit of falt meat, or falt fifh, and feafoning it very high with capficum, or fome fpecies of the red pepper. The vegetable, called fquashes, is much used in these pepper pots. Bread, which is esteemed fo effential, and held as the ftaff of life by the people of Europe, is unknown among the flaves of the West Indies: nor, indeed, is it in common use among their masters, but they find very excellent fubftitutes in the yam, the caffada, and the eddoe.

The common round of labour of the flaves is from fun-rife to fun-fet, having intervals of reft allowed them, at the times of breakfaft, and dinner.

The negroes are generally fad thieves; they appear to know no fense of honesty. Ignorant of all moral principle, they steal without feeling any fenfe of wrong, and without any apprehenfion, except that of being de-The planters are obliged to employ tected. one or two of the most trusty of them in the capacity of watchmen to guard, by close and conftant attention, the orchards, plantain walks, provision stores, and the like, from the depredations of their own and their neighbour's flaves. Although they have no remorfe in ftealing whenfoever and wherefoever opportunity offers, still they feel peculiarly prone to robbing their mafters; and this they do not even confider a theft, as is too evident by an expression very common among them, viz. " Me no tief bim: me take bim from Maffa."

Character and a self to share with manage

IN

Bar

Tac

off

ton

fubji

fon

del

and

but

the sone proves to be incutable. To any

Ves

Ay.

tal

ploy

1 the

and alks,

Die-

IES

in

NE

OBE

do

1E

em,

的符

Concerning the elephantiasis, or endemial malady of Barbadoes.

April 9.

In fpeaking to you of the exemption of Barbadoes from great and deftructive ficknefs, I remarked that, although it escaped fome general ills, it was visited with an afflictive malady peculiarly its own. As this forms a characteristic feature of the country, and cannot but attract the notice, and excite the curiofity of strangers, you would not excuse me were I to neglect offering you a few words upon the fubject.

The difeafe is the elephantiafis—called by fome the "glandular difeafe," but, by the many, defignated fimply the "Barbadoes difeafe." It commonly appears in the form of an enormous and frightful enlargement of one or both legs; but occafionally affects other parts, particularly the forotum, which becomes increafed to a furprizing bulk. When once established, it is extremely difficult to remove, and for the most part proves to be incurable. It affects the general health, lefs than might be expected, and frequently exifts for many years without feeming materially to impair the conflitution; often, indeed, the perfon attacked with it bears it about throughout the remainder of a long life. It is mostly feen among the negroes, but it is too common alfo among the creole whites, and even fuffers not the Europeans to escape. Although fo frequent in Barbadoes, as to be held in a great degree peculiar or endemial, it is not wholly confined to this country : fome inftances of being feen in the neighbouring iflands.

It would feem not to have been fo prevalent as it now is from any very diftant period of time; for about the year 1760 died at Barbadoes a man named Francis Briggs, more commonly known by the fictitious appellation of Chriftopher Columbus, who, from the uncommon and monftrous appearance of his legs, had been reprefented as the bug-bear or object of terror for the purpofe of frightening children. 10

ey

山 ti

IC do

In

pe

W

U

Male and female, young, middle-aged, and old, black and white, are now all fubject to its attack; and, in walking the ftreets, the eye is diffreffed, at almost every corner, with the appearance of this hideous deformity.

mon

2.92= C

Ly allow

leem -

; of

earsi

glife

titis

hites,

ape.

o bei

al in lome

ring

era-

riod

at ore

tion

the

his

r or

ing

The difease usually begins with an affection of the inguinal glands, from whence a red streak, or line of inflammation extends down the limb, in the direction of the lymphatic vessels; the part affected becoming tumefied, and taking on a shining and œdematous appearance. * The fwelling gradually occupies the whole of the leg, increasing until, in many instances, the limb is more than double its ordinary fize. The skin assumes a morbid appearance, grows rough and fcaly, or is covered with irregular wart-like rifings. In some cases deep belts or indentations appear in various parts of the tumor, as if formed by the preffure of ligatures: in others the fwelling bulges out in a number of irregular protrusions : sometimes, from extreme distenfion, the skin ruptures or breaks into cracks and fissures, and a watery fluid oozes out, which on exposure to the air grows gelatinous upon the furface. The foot frequently partakes of the difeafe: but in many cafes the immenfe tumor of the leg terminates abruptly at the ancle, hanging over the foot in knotty, and fealy excrefeences. The deformity thus becomes diverfified—the enormous bulk of leg appearing under a variety of unfeemly and difgufting forms. As the enlargement increafes, the whole extremity becomes hard and fealy; and the diftended fkin, which, at firft, indented, grows thick and corneous, and wholly refifts the preffure of the finger.

It has been found on diffection that, from the effufed lymph which originally caufed the tumor having become coagulated and hardened, the fubftance of the enlarged limb has affumed an appearance not unlike brawn—the morbid fkin, and the cellular membrane under it, having grown into a tough, horny, and almoft cartilaginous confiftence.

From this unlightly malady being moftly accompanied with fever of an intermittent type, we often hear it termed "the fever and ague." Indeed from the periodical returns of the paroxylms, and from the tumefaction fucceeding to them, the difeafe has been very Bei fra

he

for

hi

e

generally confidered only as an effect refulting from intermittent fever. The practice, faid to be fuccessful in removing it, feems also to be founded upon this view of it. Regard being had to the fever as the original affection, the elephantiasis is confidered only as a sequel, and the curative means are directed folely to the removal of the febrile fymptoms : which being effected, by antimony and the bark, the patient is fent for a time to fome other island, by way of change of climate, in order to prevent a relapfe. No particular attention is paid to the tumor, which, on the fever being removed, is expected gradually to fubfide. But fometimes, instead of receding, it remains stationary, or is increased; or if it did subside, is renewed on any future recurrence of the fever.

Often a return to Barbadoes brings a return of the intermittent, and a confequent addition to the enlargement of the already thickened extremity; and from the attacks of the difeafe recurring in frequent repetition, there remains no way of preventing it from being eftablifhed into an unfeemly deformity, but by feeking the remedy of a more temperate climate. Frequently the diforder feems

12201

Wy and 了地

La Cor

y ane

nt in-p dand

: fat

200

3.161

from

the

len.

ias

the

der

nd

ly

to be entirely fubdued by a few years refidence in England, yet again recurs on the patient returning to Barbadoes.

Some regard the difeafe in a directly oppolite point of view, confidering the glandular tumor, with its attendant inflammation of the lymphatics, as the primary affection, and the fever merely as fymptomatic. It is not confiltent with my prefent purpofe, nor does experience warrant me to enter more minutely into this queftion; but I may offer you a few extracts of cafes wherefrom you will be enabled to collect a more juft and accurate idea of the commencement, and the progrefs of this fingular and diffreffing malady.

"Mr. Daniel Maffiah, aged fifty-three, of the Jewifh religion, was a very healthy boy till eighteen, when he was attacked with a difeafe, which at that period was very unufual indeed. Without any known caufe, he complained of a forenefs, and fwelling of the left groin. When he had felt this about a quarter of an hour, he was feized with the cold fit of fever; a burning hot fever fucceeded, which was followed by profule fweating. The whole paro

pain ar th

tack

Fro

ha

01 ie

in

in

I

62

10 paroxysm was accompanied with violent pains of the head and back, and great fickness at the stomach, and reaching. This first attack left very little fwelling in the left ancle. From this fit, for the four following years, he had this difease in the same manner about once a month, with a gradual increase of the left leg; fo that it became eighteen or twenty inches round the calf. After he was twentytwo years of age, the attacks were five, fix, Giv a and in Da

oft

and the ot con

ES ES.

utely

a fen

this zz, ol

boy

dil

ifual

1001-

: left

mi-

dA

lich

feven, or eight times each year. From the year 1764, being then about thirty-fix, he has been irregularly attacked, fometimes in the right, and fometimes in the left leg; each time the legs were left larger and larger. At the age of thirty-nine the right leg was confiderably increased in fize. In the centre of the calf of this leg there arose a lump as big as a goofe's egg, which burft of itfelf, and difcharged a fluid as clear as water, in large quantity. The fwelling abated, but each fucceeding attack left the leg fo increased in bulk, that at this time it meafures thirty-fix inches in every part of the leg, from below the knee to the ancle. The feet of both legs are of their natural fize. The left leg measures twenty-fix inches. The fwelling is very fmooth, except on the right heel, where there are great excrefcences, which have the appearance of large corns, or warts. The increase of the legs feems to have been fo gradual, that he has not been in the least fensible of it; nor has he experienced any other inconvenience from the difease, except when he has been weakened by fickness, and then he feels his legs heavy."

"During the first fixteen years of his being fubject to the difeafe, the local affections were always evident. Since that time, i. e. for about twenty years pass, but more particularly lately, he has fcarcely been able to determine whether the local fymptoms, or the cold fit came on first. He fays, that lately he finds the first local fymptom to be a purple hue on the finger nails, and a great coldness in the palms of the hands. His appetite is very good, every function of life is uninterrupted, and he has been free from every other difease."

"Mr. P—, aged twenty-fix, a native of Barbadoes, has been fubject, fince the age of eleven, to the glandular difeafe. It first attacked him with a fwelling of the leg and thigh, which he perceived in the morning on rifin

Was

hel

glan wit

Th

da

Pa

fid

vio diat

fer

ali

vile

We

m wh

atta

a la

h

T

612

Lata

e leg

all to heer

加计 led 513 being

Were

for larly

mine

H fit

ads

00

the

od,

nd

of

ŀ rifing from bed. The fwelling of the extremity was uniform, and, except a little pain which he felt in the groin, where, on examination, the glands were found enlarged, was not attended with the least mark of inflammation, or fever. This enlargement continued for about fourteen days, when he was feized with the regular paroxyim of fever; which was however preceded by a red ftreak in the thigh, and a confiderable affection of the inguinal glands. A violent inflammation of the leg and thigh immediately preceded the hot fit, and continued for feven or eight days. This difease left a great degree of fwelling, which has continued with little variation ever fince. About two years after, the attacks being frequent, he was advifed to change his climate, and accordingly went to England, where his general health was much improved. During his flay there, which was about eight months, he had no fresh attack of the glandular difeafe; but the enlargement continued nearly the fame. Soon after his return to Barbadoes, he had a regular attack of the glandular difeafe, which lasted as long, and was as fevere as those he had experienced before he went to England. These returns continued for feveral years to be very frequent, but lately have been much diminished, both in number and feverity."

⁵

fro

oth

DOL

Eni

off

ed

OF

tic

for

T

for

PET

ofi

pea

from

of w tot

is

the

eale

V

"The hiftory of the patient's cafe, whofe leg I diffected, as far as I could inform myfelf, was as follows:—She had laboured under the glandular difeafe for ten years: the first attack was at fifteen years of age, and was attended with fever. At every return she found her leg much inflamed, increased in fize, stiff, contracted, and gradually enlarged, till it became so enormous as to be extremely troublefome. She then applied to me to perform amputation, of which she recovered; but was foon after feized with the same difease in the other leg, and died in confequence of it *."

Different opinions have been held refpecting the origin of this fingular affection. From it being most frequent, or first observed among the negroes, many have believed it to be imported with them from the shores of Africa. But this opinion is divested of probability, by the extraordinary prevalence of the diseafe at Barbadoes. Were it brought by the flaves

* Hendy on the glandular difeafe of Barbadoes.

3

] Inn

irit a

was a' foun

e, fiil

it be uble4

form

II Was

in the d re-

tion.

rved

it to

the

ity,

feale aves

11

from Africa, it would be equally common in the other iflands; and not being infectious, would not be feen among the white creoles, or the Europeans. It is undoubtedly the indigenous offspring of the ifland, and poffibly is connected with a peculiarly arid ftate of the atmofphere; for in the iflands fhadowed with thick forefts and vegetation, it is ftill unknown, and has only grown common at Barbadoes, in proportion as its woods have been removed, and the furface of the ifland left unfheltered.

Except on its early attack, or at the periods of acute relapfe, the difease is attended with little or no pain, and the enlargement fometimes proceeds fo gradually, as for the perfon himfelf to be in a degree infenfible He walks about as usual, and apof it. pears to fuffer but little inconvenience, either from the additional bulk, or the great increase of weight. Hence it is often less afflicting to the individual, than offenfive to others. It is extremely repugnant to the fight; and as the negroes go about the ftreets with these difeafed limbs exposed to every eye, Europeans, VOL. II.

but recently arrived, are extremely annoyed by their filthy and monstrous appearance.

Perhaps nature has not formed, nor can the human mind conceive an object at once fo difgufting, and fo pitiable, as an old half-famifhed negrowoman—of withered frame—tottering and trembling about with her loofe and naked fkin hanging fhrivelled in deep furrowed wrinkles; and dragging after her one or both legs grown into an immenfe bulk of hideous difeafe—her feet only toes, protruding from this huge mafs of diftempered leg. Yet fuch are the objects too often feen hobbling about the ftreets of Bridge-town !

Fal

18

in off

plan

guil

Bam

ipec

fron

the

bel

Ho

her

WOIt

Farms in Barbadoes termed plantations or eflates. Poor cottagers. Native Barbadians. Their extravagant opinion concerning the importance of the island. Examples in proof that the negro form and colour are not the mere consequence of climate and locality.

in can

fami

tteri

Daka

TOWE

orbot ideous

from fuch

April, 10.

AS planter here supersedes the title of farmer fo does plantation that of farm. The land is cultivated in a number of divisions, which in Europe, might receive the common name of farms, but in Barbadoes, they are termed plantations, or estates. Of these the distinguishing appellation is not derived from the name of the exifting poffeffor ; but from fome fpecific title long fince accorded to them, or from the name of the original poffeffor, or of the family to whom they have for many years belonged. Thus a perfon, going to vifit Mr. Hollingfworth or Mr. Waith, would not fay he was going to Mr. Waith's, or Mr. Hollingfworth's, but to " Colleton's," or to " Spendlove"; thefe being the names by which the eftates have long been known.

for

CEL

COD

fo

fer

10 fat

co

eve

are per

the

ha

th

pits.

Befides the great number of hospitable manfions found on the large plantations, in the different parts of the country-many humble dwellings attract the notice of the traveller, and improve the general scenery of the island. Of fome of these I have before spoken. They are the cottages of a poorer order of white people-of obfcure individuals, remote from the great class of merchants and planters, and who obtain a fcanty livelihood by cultivating a Imall patch of earth, and breeding up poultry, or what they term flock for the markets. They are descended from European settlers, but from misfortune, or milconduct, in fome of the race. are reduced to a state far removed from independence; often, indeed, but little fuperior to the condition of free negroes.

Curiofity has led us to vifit feveral of thefe families, and we find that, throughout many generations, their predeceffors have lived conftantly, in the ifland. Some have not been able to trace back their pedigree to the period when their anceftors first arrived, and there1Um velle

illan

The

white

fron

1 200

ting

try, c

They

from

TACE

inde-

DETION

theit nadi

con-

been nod

ere

fore have no immediate thought or regard, concerning the mother country; but abstractedly confider themfelves only in the detached fenfe of Barbadians, fondly believing that in the fcale of creation there can be no other country, kingdom, or empire equal to their tranfcendant island-to their own Barbadoes: and hence the adage "What would poor old England do, were Barbadoes to forfake her ?" The fame spirit of attachment, and of preference is also betrayed in the common expression, " neither Charib nor Creole, but true Barbadian" -thus proudly diftinguishing themselves as the true-born natives of the island which they confider fuperior to all others. They do not even admit themselves to be Creoles, but they are "Barbadians"-a fomething diftinct and fuperior-a fomething different from, and unlike the inhabitants of the other West India islands!

The pride attaching to this fentiment, I have before remarked to you, has diffused itfelf even to the negroes, who now loudly echo the boaftful term,—" me Badian !"

In the part of the island near the tar pits, we happened to call in at a small hut, or cabin, where we met with a large family of Barbadian cottagers; and, with all the inquifitiveness of strangers, we addressed the good people in a multitude of interrogatories, and were highly gratified with their replies. They were living amidst the mountains, apparently fhut from the world, and but feldom exposed to the intrusion of strangers. The old dame of the house was nearly seventy years of age. We found her occupied in playful attentions with two of her grand children-two, offeven, of the offspring of her daughter. Making inquiries respecting the old woman's history we learned that she could trace back her family in regular lineal descent, as far as her great grandfather, the fucceffors of whom have never removed from Barbadoes; fo that the children we here faw, were to a certainty as diftant as the fixth generation, and probably much more remote, in direct descent, from parents who had always lived in the torrid zone. One of the children was about fix-the other eight years old. In fairnefs of skin, in feature, and in figure, they might have been mistaken for children born in England, or any other temperate climate.

134

oth

fror

illa

Ta

1

b

D

g bi ola

po

m ne

Ve

ti

il

nily

inqu

gool-

il al

DI

Irent

spole

dan i f age T

Dtick

Wen.

king

ittor

r fa

he

IOR

that

int

pro-

ceni,

the bout

is of ighi

ing.

Near Hilloughby hill we met with another cottage family, regularly defcended from British parents, of long standing in the island, and having all the features, and general appearance of Europeans. The father of this family was fixty years old, and fome of his predeceffors had lived to upwards of ninety years. We could not trace the pedigree fo accurately as in the other familybut this probably was not lefs ancient, the old man having no knowledge but of his Barbadian predeceffors, and not knowing when they first came to the island. The occupation of this family was that of planting a small fpot of land with ginger, and raising flock to fell at Bridge-town market. They were poor, like the others, and compelled to labour much in full exposure to the fun. Like the negroes, too, their diet confisted chiefly of vegetables.

At the fort, commanding the entrance of Carlifle bay, are living a man and his wife, both natives of Barbadoes, whofe anceftors for generations, beyond all that tradition has traced to them, have refided conftantly in the ifland : fitting round the mother we faw five fine children-their offspring, of face and form as fair as the fairest Europeans.

These facts ftand in direct opposition to the speculative doctrines of those who derive the various colours of the human race from climate or locality of residence, together with the concomitant circumstances of diet, and mode of life. Confistent with such opinion it follows that the offspring of Europeans, living constantly in the torrid zone, and, more particularly, if using the same diet, and exposed to similar habits, and occupations, must degenerate, and, in future ages, become negroes.

The three families above-mentioned are, undoubtedly, of the fifth or fixth, or, perhaps, a ftill more diftant generation, in direct lineal defcent, from parents, originally, Englifh; but whofe offspring, through every race, to the prefent children, have always refided between the tropics. They have, moreover, lived in circumftances of mediocrity, exposed to labour, and to the full influence of climate; or have known only the abode of poverty, and by needy fortune have been compelled to use a diet very fimilar to that of the

30

01

th

R

fi

Ca

tic

Gir

2 21

ions

derive

fron

· mil

and inion

eany

nore

•23 muft

TOPS,

ire,

per-

die

illy,

ery

TC*

*916

訳 eof

of

of

the Africans. Yet is there not an individual among them, who, either in form, feature, or colour has made even the flighteft approach to that change, which a conftant refidence, through fo many generations, must have effected, were their descendants, of future ages, to become of negro form, and hue.

Allowing this change of our fpecies to be as flow and gradual as the warmest advocate of the doctrine might fuppose, it were impoffible for the mind to conceive a period, when the offspring of Europeans would be broiled into perfect negroes, if no fort of commencement-no mark whatever of deviation-nor any approach to the conversion, could be traced, either in the features, or the skin, of those of the fifth, or fixth, or perhaps of the eighth or ninth generation; after a refidence, too, in the fucceffive races, of nearly two hundred years under a tropical fun, and being exposed to most of the other caufes, faid to promote the expected revolution of their frames !

Children born in England have not fairer skins, nor features more correctly European. The younger have all the cherub face and form of the lovely fmiling babes of a temperate climate. Those more advanced are thinner, and bear about them more of that languor, which univerfally refults from long refidence in great and constant heat; but still have they no kind of approach to the thickened lip—the large mouth—the projecting countenance—the flattened nose—the lengthened head—the woolly hair—or the dark skin of the negroes.

The opinions of the gentlemen of the ifland feem to be all against the idea of fuch a conversion of the human body, and we are affured that multitudes of families, in addition to those we have feen, now live in Barbadoes, who in progressive descent, through successive five generations, for nearly two hundred years, have resided in the island, without the flightest change being perceptible in their offfpring of the present day.

To whatever age the parents may have lived, it is remarkable that, although the face and hands shall have become brown, from immediate exposure to the fun, the other parts of their bodies remain white and unchanged; and no

the mu

bei

th

3

C

A

be 561

П

çor

be

for lati

cife

iad

tu in

th

W

tha

SOIL

1d for

pera

E, and

State O

in griller

10 kir

e largo

hefa

WOOL

of the fuch (

18 2h

dition

toes.

iccel.

ndrei

H the

roff

have fact

110.

ti of

and not the fofteft fhade—not the flighteft tinge of the acquired darknefs of hands or face is communicated to the defcendants—the children being, invariably, born as perfect whites as those of Europe. If, therefore, it could, for a moment, be admitted that merely the tanned countenance were an approach to the negro flate, this being completely extinguished in each fucceeding race, it could never advance beyond the feeble change effected in a fingle generation.

But the very firong and incontrovertible fact with refpect to the American Indians, militates fo decidedly against this doctrine of conversion, that fearcely another argument can be neceffary to its refutation. Although living for unknown ages under the fame parallel of latitude as the Africans, and exposed to precifely fimilar habits and occupations, not an individual of them has ever been known to turn negro, either in skin or feature. Nor, indeed, would it be less reasonable to expect that the negroes of Africa, or those of the West India islands, should change to Indians, than that Indians, or Europeans, should be converted into Africans ! No accurate tidings at Barbadoes of the approach of the Portsmouth Convoy. Symptoms of the troops moving. Drs. Henderson and Cave ordered to remain in charge of the fick of the St. Domingo division. Author cautions his friend not to listen to the alarming rumours of sickness, and death. Great numbers in hospital—their maladies mild, and European—not endemic. Author witness a case of yellow fever in company with Dr. Jackson.

April 11.

let

Could it have been foretold that on the 11th day of April the people of Barbadoes would have remained wholly ignorant regarding the fituation of an immenfe fleet of fhips which failed for that ifland, from England, in the month of November preceding, the myfteries of the prophet Brothers had fcarcely been held more abfurd! Yet fo it is, for all here ftill continue in total darknefs refpecting the Portfmouth convoy! But fome fymptoms of moving are now exhibited, which feem to indicate that the troops already arrived will not be longer detained inactive. 20

6,0

3. Dr.

e of the

1 dent

Eu-D

n fever

11.

Tth

bluc

g the

which

the eries

held

Ail

ortl-

101-cate

be

Among other marks of approaching fervice, we have been called upon for a general return of the fick, and it appears in orders that Drs. Henderson and Cave, with a detatchment of our staff, are to remain at Barbadoes in charge of the hospitals appropriated to the St. Domingo division; and I may add, with regret, that we are likely to leave these gentlemen bufy duty, the fick-lift, particularly of the Cork division, being very numerous. In confequence of many of the fhips arriving in a fickly state, our hospitals became crowded as foon as they were erected, notwithstanding our having the further accommodation of converting fome of the barracks into fick wards. But we have now in fome measure relieved the hospitals, by forming a small encampment and putting the convalescents under canvafs.

We expect that you will hear from various quarters, and read in all the news-papers fad hiftories of difeafe and death, but let me caution you not to believe that we are all dying, or that the yellow-fanged monfter is let loofe amongft us. Should it be told you that more than a thoufand fick are already in the hospitals, be not deceived into a belief that fo many are about to become the victims of climate, and yellow fever; nor fuffer yourfelf to be perfuaded that the whole of us have "failed to our graves."

The hospitals are certainly thronged, and the number of fick is very confiderable, but this cannot be placed to the account of the climate, or of endemic difease, for, nearly all the men, now in hospital, arrived in fickness. They had been detained on Spike Island, or in crowded transports, during many weeks of inhofpitable weather, whereby extensive difcafe was generated among them ; and hence it happened that, upon arriving at Barbadoes, the troops in many of the fhips, although not actually ill, had approaching difeafe fo ftrongly marked in their features, that it became necelfary to remove every individual of them on fhore in order to have the veffels thoroughly fumigated and purified ; and from this circumstance it occurred that many flight cafes were thrown into the hospitals, which otherwise would not have appeared upon the lift. This will in fome meafure explain to you why the hospitals are crowded, although neither " yel107

Tel

lif

01

the 山山 per afte

We

exa for

> pi ha

Wi

WI

tain

low fever," nor any other malignant difease reigns amongst us.

La

ictic

YOUT-

SPECTE

d, an,

e, burg

of the uly a knels.

1, or eks of

e dil.

nceit

, the

not angly ecel-

1 01

gbly

üm-

TTETE

TH

Till

the

tela

Of the many hundreds now on the ficklift a very great majority are flight cafes, or convalefcents from difeafes they had fuffered upon the paffage. We have reafon to believe that very few of their diforders are of fatal tendency, and that a great proportion of the fick will very foon be able to return to their regiments.

While I am upon the fubject of ficknefs I may remark to you that I have had my firft opportunity of feeing a cafe of that deftructive malady, which has lately excited fuch univerfal alarm, under the term "yellow fever," but, perhaps, you are not prepared to hear that, after a refidence of fo many weeks in the Weft Indies, I have feen only a folitary example of that difeafe: yet fuch is the fact for, amidft all our ficknefs, and crowded hofpitals, only a fingle inftance of "yellow fever" has, hitherto, occurred. I vifited this patient with Dr. Jackfon, the author who has fo ably written upon the difeafes of Jamaica, and obtained his clinical remarks concerning the leading and more characteristic fymptoms of the difease. You will believe that I readily formed the idea of making this interesting and important case an object of very minute attention; and you will feel that the event has impressed upon my mind a very powerful fense of the subtle malignity of this devouring malady.

Furt

W

OUT

her

bade

Dearco

along

fleet v

be ftar

Il very fear th

Read

COnvo

B

licove

TOL.

The patient was certainly very ill, but, to those who had not before witnessed the difease, he did not appear to be in any immediate danger; nor did Dr. Jackson seem to think it a case of the highest degree of malignity; but, alas! on going to visit him the following morning, we found our poor soldier a cold and yellow corpse!

Wohn Indies, I. have feen only a foliary for between hat and helpede, this counded hof.

pitals only a lingle inflance of "sellow fever" has hifterto, occurred, 1 vifited this parient wich Dr. Jackim, the sutner who has to ably written upon the defension of Jamaka, and obtaiged his ellipted romaria concerning the LETTER VII.

Further hope—and further disappointment. Another division of the Portsmouth convoy reaches Barbadoes. Rumour of a secret Expedition. Concerning the probable separation of the author and his comrades. Expertness of Negroes in the water. One of their modes of Bathing. Negroes attentive to their teeth. Mode of cleaning them with sand and sea water.

Barbadoes, April 13.

WERE we in danger, as often as in alarm, our friends might, indeed, have ferious apprehenfions both for us, and for "good old Barbadoes." The enfign of alarm has again apbeared this morning at the feveral fignal pofts long the coaft, implying that another ftrange leet was in fight; and which was obferved to be ftanding directly for the ifland. We were Il very quickly on the look-out—our only ear that it fhould prove to be but a part, intead of the whole of our long wifhed for onvoy from Portfmouth.

By means of the telescope it was soon is is that many of the ships had troops VOL. II. L on board, and that they were dreffed in light-let uniform ; no doubt, therefore, remained of

Day

ead

Rit.

urin

tt, to

: Ш.

liate

nkit

but wing

and

on board, and that they were dreffed in fcarlet uniform; no doubt, therefore, remained of their being friends. As they came near we climed up to the main-yard, to enjoy the delighting fcene prefented by their gently failing into harbour; and as you know how often I have had to note our difappointments regarding this difastrous expedition, you will comprehend how eagerly I greeted the termination of them in the profpect now before my eye. Pleafed and delighted to witnefs what we beheld as the arrival of the whole fleet, we counted the ships in great joy as they came into the bay; when, having proceeded to the number of feventeen, judge of the mortification we felt upon discovering that still we had only welcomed a detached division of our expected convoy.

Standing upon the main-yard, numbering the fhips as they dropped into the harbour, I anticipated the pleafure of fitting down in the evening to inform you that the different fleets of our expedition were, at laft, fafe in Carlifle bay—but on taking up my pen I have only to tell of new difappointments, which, in TI

CC

10 dir

m

21

CHI

h

Bi bo

20

b

CI

det

80 ha

We

01 fro

th

11

of

at

PO

eizd

learo

IT

tde.

中国

Offer

ardi

ompr

natu

iy ey.

21 1

W P

r call

tot

tific

e hai

Ir es

beril

加

int

: Hà

Carl

の加り

1,1

truth, would feem to attach to thefe unhappy convoys in endlefs repetition. Inftead of announcing to you the union of the two great divifions of our forces, from Cork and Portfmouth, I have only to fpeak of the arrival of another fmall branch of Admiral Cornwallis's fleet, which feparated foon after leaving Spithead; and which, inftead of bringing us intelligence, has every thing to learn concerning the body of the convoy, not having fallen in with any part of it on the paffage.

A rumour is ftrongly prevalent among us, that a division of the troops, now affembled, at Barbadoes, is to be detached on fecret fervice. Should this take place, and the detachment be formed from the St. Domingo armament, it is more than poffible that our happy quartette may yet be disjointed before we reach our original deftination. Of courfe our expectations have always led to this: yet from having lived on board, together, and in the utmost harmony, during a period of many months, it would be matter of regret, to either of us, to be taken from our congenial mess, at the very eve of failing for our deftined port, and particularly as we must be separated under circumstances which would render it probable that we should never meet again.

L 2

This idea might lead me to expatiate very painfully upon the fituation of multitudes around me. But to indulge in fuch feelings would not be opportune: whatever reflection may teach—or whatever may be the event of the great fcene before us, with refpect to individuals, I truft that every Briton, embarked in the caufe, will meet, with all the firmnefs of his nation's character, whatever is defined to be his fate in war.

tel

the

di

-1

dr

fid

UI

Wa

thi

0

in

fel

I do not recollect to have noted to you in any former letter the great fondnels which the negroes have for the water, and their fingular addrels and expertnels in moving upon that element. In one of our late walks we witneffed a fcene ftrongly in proof of this, having met with a flave who was amufing himfelf by exercifes of uncommon agility in the fea. Not an otter, nor a beaver, nor fcarcely a dolphin could appear more in his element. He was quite at play in the water, and diverting himfelf in all kinds of antic tricks, and gambols. He dived to the bottom—fwam 11

72

DU-S ings

tion

it of 111-din

his

be

YOU

ich

pon

WE

av=

10-

the

cely

ent

F.

四

in a variety of ways—walked or paddled along like a dog—concealed himfelf for a long time under water—laid himfelf at reft upon its furface, and appeared as much at his eafe, in the ocean, as if he had never breathed a lighter, nor trodden a firmer element.

This expertnefs is much derived from an early habit of bathing, or, as it might be termed, exercifing in the water ; and it renders the negroes peculiarly ufeful in moments of diftrefs, fuch as in cafes of accident at fea, or in the harbour. Let them have a boat, or a canoe, and it is almost impossible they can be drowned. Even if they are upfet, and the boat turned keel upwards, they rife at her fides, and there continue to fwim and paddle until they again right her, then bailing out the water refume their feats and proceed as if nothing had happened.

A fenfe of cleanlinefs attaches to their love of the water, for we not only fee them often in the fea, but frequently alfo washing themfelves in the rivulets. It feems to form one of their favorite amusements to stand in the fea, or river, and to take up water in both hands and pour it over their shoulders down their backs. This is practifed both by the men and the women, and is one of their most frequent methods of bathing.

Another mark of cleanliness also prevails among them which was less to be expected; viz. that of paying great attention to their teeth. The chew-stick which is here employed for cleaning the teeth is far more in use among the negroes, than the tooth brush among the lower classes of people in England.

Our adroit negro, amidft his many gambols in the water, dived often to the bottom of the fea, and brought up a handful of fand. With this rough dentifrice he foundly fcrubbed his teeth, and by way of effence to wafh it off, plunged down, for another handful, with his mouth wide open; thus, alternately, repeating the rubbing, and fea water wafhing, until he felt that his pearls were duly contrafted with his ebon countenance.

T

for

to der

my

per

W

D

tin

fro

02 bab

LETTER VIII.

Author feparated from his long affociated comrades. Embarks on board the Grenada, on a fecret expedition. Conjectures regarding its defination. Embarkation of troops on board the Grenada. Accommodation of the officers and feldiers. Rapid accumulation of filth on board. Troops preferved from ficknefs by bathing, and by keeping a great proportion of them always in the open air. Force employed in the expedition. A fleet arrives at Barbadoes at the time the expedition fails. Author addreffes his friend from the oppofite fide of the fun.

Ship Grenada, at Sea, April 17.

THE apprehended division of our long affociated mess has taken place! It has fallen to my lot to join the reported expedition under General Whyte, and I am separated from my friends, perhaps, soon to meet again, perhaps, to meet no more! To what quarter we are bound is held in secrecy. Curaçoa, Demarara, St. Eustatia, and various other deftinations have been severally conjectured, but from the course we are at present steering the coast of Guiana would seem to be most probable.

L 4

D. Wer. D. D. Contractory

all of E Line Looking heir

ind

Valia

led;

ecth.

d for 1000

the

am•

n of

nd.

bed

hit

前 tely,

2h-

100

We were ordered away at very fhort notice. On returning to the Lord Sheffield after my vifit at the hofpital on the morning of the 14th inft. I received inftructions to embark on board the Grenada transport before 12 o'clock ; and to take upon me the direction of a detachment of the hospital staff, appointed to attend a division of the army, which was to fail that afternoon, on fecret service.

Being advifed to take with me as little baggage as poffible, and affured that I might expect foon to return, in order to proceed with General Whyte, to St. Domingo, I made up a foldier's kit of apparel, and left all my heavier packages, under the care of my late comrades, in the Lord Sheffield.

The Grenada is a very fine veffel, and fails remarkably well. Like the Lord Sheffield, fhe is a Weft India trader, engaged as a tranfport only for the paffage out, and as foon as fhe has completed her voyage is to return to England laden with fugar, cotton, or other Weft India produce.

4 1

I thought myself fortunate in being ap-

PO

00 diff

mi

th

e?

pi

01

28

10

CTE2

te

fo

lea

仙

IV

be 10

25 th

4

2

17

T

IT IL

after

the

ire II

1000 point.

which

ice,

bag-

spect

JEDe.

a fol-

amer

des,

and field,

10-

1 25

9 to

the

p.

pointed to fo good a fhip ; and, hearing that troops were to be thickly flowed on board the different veffels of the expedition, anticipated much of comfort upon the paffage, by obferving that the Grenada was free from the crowd I had expected to meet. But my felf-gratulations proved to be fomewhat premature. Upwards of three hundred troops arrived quickly after, and a scene of crowd and confusion was introduced furpaffing all that even fancy had created. Many of the men were intoxicated -most of them were up to their knees in water, in the boat, and fome as wet from head to foot as if they had been dragged through the In the hurry of fcrambling up the fea. fhip, two of them fell overboard, and narrowly efcaped being drowned. The decks foon became fo crowded, as to render it impoffible to pafs, and amidft the throng of living flowage a further inconvenience was produced from the hatch-ways being obliged to be opened for the reception of cannon, ammunition, baggage, and other flores, which the fhip's company were hoifting in on all fides.

Negroes, failors, foldiers, and officers all mingled together, in one hurried and anxious mafs—fome hard at work—fome curfing and fwearing—fome reeling in drunkennefs fome fcrambling for a knapfack, or a firelock fome lofing their hats—fome hoifting baggage up the fhip's fide—fome jumping on board fome hawling in provifions at the ftern—each feeking individual or general accommodation —and all adding to the common confusion.

In the afternoon we were vifited by the General, who came on board, to fee if every thing was embarked ready for failing in the evening: but the time required for getting in the guns and other heavy ftores, and the numerous impediments occurring from fuch multitudes of perfons crowding on board at the fame moment, rendered this altogether impoffible however, by the great exertions which were made, we were able to get under weigh at an early hour the following morning.

The Lieutenant-Colonel commanding the regiment, the commanding officer of artillery, and myfelf, are the only officers who have the accommodation of feparate births: all the others are obliged to be crowded together without beds, or mattreffes, upon the naked decks of the 10

m

21

di

10 ça

W

lier

300

b

19 fel

WE

W

be 20

E

n

ti

th ani

ls-

1 m

E Co

ard-

each

ation

1.

the

ity

the

the

IOUS-des

118

-

ere

21

the

Th,

the

h

of

the cabins, and even there, they are compelled to clofe-flowage to make room for them all.

On the upper deck the foldiers are still more thickly fpread, they lie down without any other covering than their clothes of the day, using the arm, or the knapfack as a pillow : and fo well do they flow that not a foot can find place between them. Happily the wind is very favorable, and we are led to believe that wherefoever we are bound the voyage will not be long. Having the fleady breeze of the trades on her quarter, the ship is worked almost wholly by the helm, and we feldom require to shift the fails-occasional bracing being all that is neceffary. Had the weather been bad and the wind against us, you will readily imagine the ftate we must have been in, with fuch a body of men, fick, and ill, and crowded in every quarter of the ship. Even as it is we have much difficulty in keeping them fufficiently clean to preferve them in health. They lie down in their clothes at night, where they have been standing or fitting the whole of the day, and from making the deck at once their fitting bench, their dinner board, and their bed, all about them foon grows filthy and offenfive: pieces of broken food—floppings of broth, or grog, bits of meat, old bones, crumbs of bifcuit, and various other kinds of filth collect under them, and about their clothing; and, from the great heat of climate, and fill more unpleafant heat of crowd, this dirty commixture foon becomes four and fetid; and would, in a fhort time, generate difeafe, were not fome rigid rules of cleanlinefs ftrictly enforced.

Befides those who fleep upon the open deck above, there is another crowd in a more confined fituation between decks. Observing this place to be very close, and not fufficiently ventilated, I have recommended that the men fhould be divided into three watches, and that two of the three divisions should be kept conflantly upon the open deck, relieving those below every four hours. Likewise as a further means of prevention I have advised that all the men should bathe every morning, while the decks are thoroughly washed and cleaned. Fortunately I am supported in this by the approbation of Colonel Tilson, who is exceeding

fer

his

th

W

121

de

the 10 bott

de

b

12

ed

att

Af

fo

11

1

1

to

ingly zealous to do every thing that can preferve the health of the foldiers, and has iffued his orders accordingly.

th

Ces

Tthe

le gre at he

SCOM2

'time

ules di

ODer

more ving

otly

men

that

(0D+ thefe

fur-

that tile

1128

Re

de

We have contrived a method whereby the bathing is effected with lefs trouble than was at first apprehended. The men are regularly affembled by companies upon the quarter deck, at an early hour of the morning, and there undreffing, two at a time, they go down to the waift of the ship, and remain at the bottom of the step leading from the quarter deck, until two or three buckets of water have been dashed upon them by some of their comrades standing directly above them upon the edge of the quarter deck, others being stationed at the fides to draw up water for the purpofe. After being thus washed, they move on to the forecastle to drefs themfelves, others following in fucceffion until the whole are bathed.

We find fome difficulty in eftablishing this practice, but I hope in a few days to fee it brought to the regularity of a military movement : the benefit of it is not confined fimply to cleanlines of person, for while the bathing is going on, the decks, where the men fleep, are thoroughly fwept and washed, and it is matter of furprize to us to fee the prodigious quantity of dirt, of remnants of food, and various other species of filth which collect within four-and-twenty hours. Its utility is also further extended, in the general movement it creates, and the refreshing coolness it brings to every one on board. Were the voyage to be long, our experience of the few past days feems to assure us that this daily washing would not merely be our best, but, perhaps, our only prefervative from fickness.

The expedition confifts of about thirteen hundred men of the 39th, 93d, and 99th regiments commanded by Lieutenant Colonels Tilfon, Hiflop and Gammell, and a party of artillery, under command of Captain Bagot. The fquadron of the fleet employed with us is commanded by Commodore Parr, and confifts of the Malabar of 50 guns, La Pique, Le Babet, and the Undaunted frigates—to which are added, the Grenada armed transport, with feveral floops, and fchooners.

At the time we were failing from Carlifle bay on the morning of the 15th, an alarm T

2

di

TE

was fired, and the fignal hoifted, denoting the approach of a fleet; but it was too diftant, and the weather too hazy for us to afcertain diftinctly what fleet it was—perhaps the long expected convoy; or poffibly only another fevered division of it. Even should it prove to have been the body of the fleet, bringing in the great bulk of the armament, it still is an extraordinary instance of delay, from adverse weather, that a convoy which failed from Spithead early in November, should only have reached Barbadoes on the 15th of April following, and it must shand as a striking example of the incalculable uncertainty of all maritime expeditions.

I muft not forget to note to you that I am now addreffing you from the opposite fide of the fun. This day in latitude 9° 27' we paffed immediately under that burning orb, receiving his perpendicular rays directly upon our heads. I have nothing further to tell you on this occasion. His fouthern face feems neither hotter, nor colder, brighter nor darker, than his northern. The only striking peculiarity arifes from the novelty of looking to the north at noon, to take our meridian, and

di

dign d, an collec

TOT!

Inela

le voi

W PL

12hi inten

ggi

lonels

ty of

Bagot.

ith 15

COD

ie, Le

which

with atile

ITE

habit will be required to reconcile this feeming inconfiftency. While you at mid-day look fouth for the fun, I fhall look north, and although our noon will be different, this circumftance will often mentally place me with you. The effect, I would flatter myfelf, will be reciprocal, and, attracted by his oppofite fides, the cheering fun will be the medium of frequently affociating us in warm and mutual fympathy.

in the instal distant while a that barning orb, then his northern. The only fightion picts at it's if the them the much of looking to a underson Kani attend

Du

1701 muc

hor

ever

mo yel

till.

LETTER IX.

11-

CTR.

108

ITE.

tial

Destination of the expedition. Ships come to anchor in shallow and muddy water. Tops of trees appear, but no land in fight. Common marks of land on approaching the shore. Author continues to make notes for his friend, without knowing when he may be able to send them. Troops prepare to disembark.

At Sea, April 20.

Our defination is no longer a fecret! The Captain went yesterday on board the Commodore, and received his instructions—when the Dutch colonies upon the coast of Guiana were avowed to be the object of our expedition.

In the evening we came into thick and muddy water indicating our approach to the fhore; but nothing of land could be perceived even from the top-gallant-maft head. This morning the fea was ftill more muddy, of a yellowifh colour, and, comparatively, very fhallow. Land was unqueftionably near, but, ftill, not vifible. In the courfe of the day trees were feen from the maft head, and we came to anchor only a few leagues from them VOL. II. M but, even yet, without being able to fee the land. It is common to defery a peculiar ftreak at the horizon, or a kind of line, or fixed point in the clouds, denoting the land which a veffel approaches, long before it reaches the coaft; but, here, we are in thick muddy water, near the fhore, and with trees in view, without being able to diftinguifh any other mark of the territory before us. It feems to be a peculiar fhore, the water being very thick and fhallow at a great diftance from the land.

My pen is continued to your idea, without knowing when I may be able to fend you my letters; but I like to think toward you, and to addrefs you, amidst all the variety of fcenes as they pass before me.

The prefent would appear to be an important moment. Orders are iffued for three days' provisions to be cooked, and for the troops to hold themfelves in readiness for immediate debarkation: They have, confequently, been paraded this evening upon deck; their arms and accoutrements cleaned and inspected; and all put in a state for action. The foldiers are forewarned in general orders 山

10

W

th

ba

10

and leavi

att

take impl

be th

hope

ings

hirth

e lanke

Areal

fixed

The

acs the

modł

Vien

other

emst

yhid

land,

with id yes

t vou,

ty of a imi

three or the orim

queak

decki

diad

tion

rden

that all irregular conduct, towards the inhabitants on landing, will fubject them to certain punifhment and difgrace; and plunder is prohibited on pain of death. The field-artillery, with carriages, fponges, ammunition, and all the neceffary apparatus have been put into boats this evening from our fhip, preparatory to being conveyed on fhore with the troops in the morning, and after a day of great hurry and labour all is, now, quite in readinefs for leaving the veffel.

Orders are iffued concerning the plan of attack by the troops, and the flation to be taken by the different fhips; and all feems to imply a bufy morrow, but, as mine will not be the most prominent post of danger, I shall hope to note to you the detail of our proceedings in a future letter. At present, I feek my birth, cordially bidding you good night !

tide, and the frighten, with the Grenada, and the flave thip, were direfted to take their flations before the fort, at the cultance of the river.

An unbappy accident had occurred, der

LETTER X.

Author again upon terra firma. Capture of the united colony of Effequibo and Demarara. An accident occurs during the night. Troops fent on flore in fmall veffels. They run aground. Grenada and other floips anchor at the mouth of the river Demarara. Flag of truce returns, and is difpatched again on flore. Capitulation of Fort William Frederis. Soldiers fall fick on the paffage. Effect produced on the fick by the idea of going into action. Landing in Demarara. Appearance of the town of Stabroek, and of the country. Hofpitality of an Englifh fettler. Author proceeds upon duty. Fortune throws him into good quarters, without a billet. Surgeon Carrol attacked with an alarming malady.

Stabroek, April 23.

W

Wa

L

er

be

go

th

tr

th

I HAVE again the pleafure of addreffing you upon terra firma, and of telling you that the united colony of Effequibo and Demarara is ours. All being in readinefs for landing on the morning of the 21ft, the troops were ordered to proceed on fhore, with the earlieft tide, and the frigates, with the Grenada, and the flave fhip, were directed to take their flations before the fort, at the entrance of the river.

An unhappy accident had occurred, during the night, which might have been the caule of much inconvenience, but, fortunately, it was foon remedied. The two long boats, with all the neceffary implements for working the guns, that were to be landed with the troops, broke from their lafhing, and had gone adrift from the fhip. You will imagine that it was not a late hour of the morning when the accident was difcovered. Men were fent out, immediately, in fearch of the boats, and they were found drifted out to fea far down to leeward, but with all the things fafe on board. Luckily they were brought back in time to accompany the troops, the tide not ferving at an early hour, for attempting the difembarkation.

Will

100 the state

201 dian.

ign.

ballag

atin

f Sta

etter.

a good

1 dil

1 23.

YOU

the arall

g 01

Will

arlie

ation

121

di-

the

At length the little fleet of floops, fchooners, and other fmall veffels, calculated, as it was believed, for the fhallow fea they had to pafs, got under weigh, and ftood direct for the fhore. The larger fhips were unable to approach near enough to give any protection to the landing.

The small light veffels into which the troops and stores were removed, were some of them brought with us from Barbadoes for the purpofe—and fome taken after our arrival upon the coaft; but, unfortunately, it proved that even thefe, light as they were, drew too much water for this muddy fhore; for, about five o'clock, we had the mortification to learn that our little fleet was faft aground deep fixed in mud. Finding the fmall veffels in this dilemma, our fhip, together with the others which had failed through a very confined channel towards the fort, came to anchor near the entrance of the Demarara river, having the fort, alfo a Dutch frigate, and a number of fhipping in full view before them.

This was a more unhappy accident than the breaking loofe of the boats with artillery ftores, and might have proved of ferious confequence, as the troops were compelled to remain until the next flood of tide, being equally unable either to reach the fhore, or to return.

In the events of this day we had a further proof of the extreme uncertainty of military operations, more particularly when connected with, or dependent upon maritime movements. In the morning we had every pri

123

即

pol

pe

10

TE

28

of

the back

25

Teli

to li nigh

nels

mig

of tu

reg

Wa

litt

he

Print

ed La

00 - F

12.1C

Canso

hx -

this cra

heurs

ined o chor [

ing

to 1

han

115

-10

1 10-

ally

16-farpil.

cos

-17-

I

profpect of feeing the troops on fhore, the fort taken, and the whole affair decided before we flept : but, in the evening, chagrin and difappointment, only, were our lot : the great expectations of the day having ended in bringing fome of the fhips to an anchor off the mouth of the river, and placing the troops in an unhappy dilemma, from which it was out of the power of man to extricate them, until the unerring operations of nature fhould fend back the waters of the ocean to their relief.

The fhips were anchored fo near the river as to prevent the efcape of any of the enemy's veffels, and the troops on board were ordered to lie on their arms, upon deck, during the night, to prevent a furprize; and to be in readinefs to act against the fort, at any hour they might be called upon.

At eight o'clock in the morning the flag of truce which had been fent off to the fort returned. Due fecrecy was of courfe obferved regarding the reply: and prefently the boat was again difpatched to the fort: but as the little fchooner fleet was ordered to return to the fhips, at the flood of tide, inftead of proceeding to land the troops; and as no orders were given to advance to the attack of the fort, it was prefumed that the anfwer had not been hoftile.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock the flag of truce again returned, and it was then announced that the capitulation was accepted, and that the fort was immediately to furrender to our troops. A party was accordingly detached, to take poffeffion of a poft agreed upon, and the whole garrifon was to march out at 4 o'clock. Confequently by evening we found ourfelves fully eftablished in Fort William Frederic, the strongest, and indeed the only defence of the colony.

fo

the 511

-

36 曲

pol

10 p

be 21

CI

(

200

1

W

Notwithstanding our strict observance of cleanliness, and all our care to prevent diffease, I am forry to remark, that numbers of the foldiers fell fick on the passage : but in mentioning this I ought to observe that the 39th and 99th regiments were mostly composed of draughts from various other young regiments, confisting principally of old men, and unseasoned boys, who had been collected together, not according to the best reguOrda of B id no.

s the accept

to in ording

agreet

march

venins/

in For indeelo

nce cit

at dif

iers of hut i

at the moft

othe

ofold

ED CO.4

MU=

lations of the recruiting fervice; and alfo, that multitudes of them had been fick on the paffage from Cork to Barbadoes, confequently many (of those now ill) are only fuffering from a relapse of former difease.

It is worthy of remark that, although upon the paffage, not a morning had paffed without a confiderable number being reported for the fick-lift, we had not one new patient the day it was intended to make the landing; but, on the contrary, the lift of the preceding day was diminished. The spirit of attack feemed to operate as a fpecific remedy. Many actually recovered, and were allowed to join their companies. Others stole off, without reporting themselves, fearful the doctors should not allow that they were well enough to be reported efficient : and others, far too weak to bear arms, feebly crawled from under the awning of the quarter-deck, which had been converted into a fick ward for their accommodation, and begged of me to permit them to go on shore to join their comrades in the battle. The idea of going into action proved a more falutary stimulus than could be found in the whole of the London or Edinburgh Pharmacopœia; and, ftrange to add, the found of the deftructive cannon promifed to be a more healing balm, then the mildeft emollient prefcribed by the doctor.

In adverting to the country, from whence I address you, I may remark that circumstances attended our landing, which were not the most calculated to create a favorable impreffion of the colony. The morning had heen clouded, and, it becoming wet, we were completely drenched with rain in the boats, and then set on shore in the midst of a heavy shower. From the landing-place we had nearly a mile to walk to the town; and fuch a walk, perhaps, could not have been found in any other country-Holland excepted. From the nature of the road it was almost impossible to maintain ourfelves upon our feet for a fingle step. Fatigued by heat, we had to drag along in the rain, either ancle-deep in mud, or flipping and fliding about upon a wet furface of dittion, and begged as me to putante ri .vala

We arrived at the town in a fadly drenched and befpattered condition; but here we found our feet relieved by ftepping on a go onthore to join their convertes in the l gari

edg

char

requ

cea

IOL

the

cie

-1

thro

hou

lik

re

hou

21 li

line

me

ha

h

th

th

Pai

湖

narrow caufeway, paved with fmall bricks put edgewife into the ground. This was a glad change to our trembling limbs, and now, from requiring lefs heed to our fteps, and the rain ceafing, we had an opportunity of looking round us to obferve the general appearance of the town and the country. I could have fancied myfelf in Holland. The land appeared as one wide flat interfected with dykes and canals —the roads mere banks of mud and clay, thrown from the ditches at their fides—and the houfes bedaubed and painted in tawdry colors, like Dutch toys, giving the whole a ftriking refemblance to the mother country.

The town is fimply two long rows of houfes, built very diftant from each other, with a wide green in the middle, by way of ftreet. It is more than a mile in length, running in a line from the river back to the foreft—the moft inconvenient form perhaps that could have been contrived, as it throws moft of the houfes far away from the river, and deprives them of the great advantages, for trade, which they might have had by erecting the houfes parallel with the courfe of the water. To remedy this defect canals and ditches have

of

mon

t pre-

Anction

reum.

101 97

e in.

g had

Were

i, atsot

neavy

e had uch a

any

the

e to ingia

long fip.

e of

dr

1

been cut, at the backs of the houfes, which are perhaps the worft poffible neighbours the inhabitants could have near them, for being filled with mud, and all the filthy drainings of the town, and only partially emptied by the reflux of the tide, they become highly offenfive, and tend to generate difeafe. The caufeway of bricks is continued throughout the whole length of the town; but the carriage way, like the road we travelled from the fort, is of mere clay and mud.

We could not difcover any place bearing the appearance of an inn or hotel, but, two other officers and myfelf had the good fortune to meet an English fettler, in the street, who very kindly conducted us to his house, and, with great hospitality, not only provided us with the means of drying our clothes, and cleaning our persons, but, also, set before us fome fine Dutch herrings, with wine, punch, and other refreshments.

After waiting upon the General, at the government house, I lost no time in proceeding upon duty; and, without delay, went out in fearch of some building to convert into an holp

This

War

杨元;

fortu

den

fervi

clay

Aaves

the I be a ther,

me

IW

been

with fered.

after anda

invita

2001 tlem

ma

vic

bro

me

hospital, or place of accommodation for our fick. This would have led to a new journey, by way of the wet and flippery road, to the fort ; but, among the happy events of the day, fortune threw me in the path of another gentleman refiding in the town, who, upon obferving me fcrambling through the mud and clay, infifted upon my taking his boat and flaves to convey me to the fort, by way of the river, affuring me that to walk it might be a dangerous excels of fatigue; and, further, directing his negroes to wait, and bring me back, to his house, to dinner. Perhaps I was little inclined to refuse, but it had been difficult to refift the preffing civility with which the accommodation was offered, accordingly I accepted the boat, and, afterwards, returned and ate of boiled fowl, and a roafted kid. During dinner the friendly invitation was extended to a request, almost amounting to a demand, from both the gentleman and lady of the table, that I would make that house my home so long as the fervice should require my continuance at Sta-Thus has fortune, at once, established broek. me in good quarters in the enemy's country, 山

the

tor be

1 Gr

empli

High

T oughe

he cr

iomil

beam

it, thi

ortun

who

and

ed ti

8, 201

in 210

unch,

自由 cet-

JUDI

) an without a billet, and even without the trouble of feeking them.

po

ani

per

fel

te

Fat

fat

703 fe

cl

cale

est

tit

174

Poor Carrol the furgeon, who accompanied our ftaff, having been directed to proceed with the troops, who were to have landed previous to the furrender of the fort, is, unhappily, a fevere fufferer from long expolure to heat in the boat. After being away upwards of thirty hours he returned to the Grenada, with a very alarming attack of hæmatemefis *. He left us yefterday morning in ftrong and florid health, and is, to-day, brought back with a death-like pallor of countenance, and in a ftate of almoft inconceivable debility and exhauftion. A veffel having ruptured in the ftomach he vomits up pure blood in furprifing quantities.

With a faint and languid, but most penetrating look, he cass his eye up to me, and in a faultering voice expressed himself conscious of the very imminent peril of his fituation, affuring me that he was well aware how few hours he bad to live, and requessing me to take his pocket-book and money into my poffeffion, and to fee that his property was difpofed of, after his death, as he had directed. Never perhaps was witneffed a more interefting, or more afflicting fcene ! You will form to yourfelf the beft reprefentation of it by placing before your imagination a dead corpfe, and fancying its pale lips to move, while its funk flattened eye turns, feebly, towards you.

* Vomiting of blood.

is, up fure:

Ware

enali

mate.

g in

D-day

CODD.

南战 up-

bed

p.

did

. 11= But I do not wholly defpair of his recovery. Being now placed in an eafy and fettled position, with the ship quietly at anchor, I am not without the hope that the bleeding and vomiting may cease, in which case he might probably be recovered from the extreme debility occasioned by the great quantity of blood already lost.

It avitic feate pollefion of the colony of Effequilto and Demorara, a division of our amaziment has been detached to the attack of the adjoining fettlement of Ferbilche, which feparates us from Surinum.

de en harring the cover of a flare, ander planter of Romon & flats attaching the light matter - shallow

LETTER XI.

176

A detachment of the expedition proceeds to Berbifche. Scarcity of fresh provisions. Author forestals the market. Purchases a basket of pines. Conduct of the Captain of a French privateer-of another republican citizen. Healthy appearance of the colonists. Demarara not less falubrious than the islands. Country flat, and like Holland. Author visits a coffee plantation. Alluring groves and avenues of fruit trees. Author severely attacked by their keepers. Welcomed by a kind nymph of the grove, and prefented with the garden's golden fruit. Meets a flave with a load of oranges. Obtains leave from Mynheer Meertens to gather fruit for the lick foldiers. Events favorable to the gratification of European curiosity. A fale of slaves. Parties of Indians. Author has a flave placed at his elbow during dinner. Is complimented with one at his bedchamber door. Commencement of the wet feason. Western bospitality not confined to Barbadoes. Author folicited to purchase a female flave. Remarks of a lady on hearing the cries of a flave under punishment. Prize money.

Demarara, April 28.

clea

efta

Der

oth

pee

the embi

calcu

coalt

Rerb.

ing

gre

Die

leag

to I

colo

arm

a fu

משמ

nic

Or

her

Y

HAVING fecure poffeffion of the colony of Effequibo and Demarara, a division of our armament has been detached to the attack of the adjoining fettlement of Berbische, which separates us from Surinam. Staria urshin Ka tri

山田 ijan s

fruit

timed

egar.

調視し for the t Eur

liant. B

mile

山市 niff

28.

10

NI

f

1

cleared of its wild woods, no regular road is eftablifhed between the two colonies, although Demarara and Berbifche lie contiguous to each other ; and hence this, like moft of our expeditions, is expofed to all the uncertainties of the wind and the ocean. The troops were embarked on board fmall floops and fchooners, calculated for the fhallow waters of this muddy coaft ; and it is expected that they will reach Berbifche to-morrow evening, or the following morning, the diftance between the two great rivers, which give names to the colonies, being but little more than twenty leagues.

We are taught that it will not be poffible to procure frefh animal provisions in these colonies, in the quantity neceffary for the army: but it is fuggested that we may obtain a fupply from the Spaniards, who have great numbers of wild cattle, in the island of Trinidad, and upon the neighbouring coast of Oronoko. Vegetables and fruits we find, here, in great plenty. The market, as at Barbadoes, is held on Sunday, and is supplied VOL. II. N by means of what the negroes either grow, or fteal.

bee

Care

that cali

est

100 ely!

mel

amp

cell

and pare, fick.

every

ings

cellit

that larg

2 n

of t toun

tor c

Being anxious to provide for the fick, in the beft way our fupply would admit, I became, on Sunday laft, quite a foreftaller of the market. Taking with me a party of flaves, and of orderlies from the hofpital, we went, at an early hour, to the fpot where the negroes ufually affemble with their loads; and finding that very few had arrived, we walked out to the different roads, leading to the town, and, there, made our purchafes in the grofs, as we chanced to meet the fupplies on their way to the market.

I know not whether you will hold this foreftalling and monopoly to be juftifiable; but I felt it confiftent with my duty to the fick; and if any of those who were well experienced a disappointment at the market, in confequence of it, my consolation was, that they would be much better able to supply themselves, by other means, than the poor fuffering objects for whom I had to provide: Perhaps it is profeffional, but it has ever been a principle, with me, to exert my first care for those who are in fickness, confcious that those in health will fuffer less from occasional deficiency: and the gratification I experience in feeing the poor objects, who are looking up to me, well supplied and contented, reconciles all difficulties, while it affures me that the maxim is correct.

Not having fresh animal provisions, an ample supply of vegetables is, absolutely, neceffary to diminish the faltness of the broths, and messes, which we are compelled to prepare, from barrelled beef and pork, for the fick. Had my purchase, therefore, engrossed every yam and potatoe of the market, feelings of humanity, no less than imperious neceffity, would have fanctioned the monoply.

It will, perhaps, furprize you to learn that, among our marketings, I purchafed a large hamper of pines, nearly as heavy as a negro could carry, for, only, the fmall fum of three bits. On counting them over, I found that I had feventeen fine large pines for only fifteen-pence, being fomewhat lefs

N 2

STOR.

e ide

inin, f iller to ity d

4, 17

re the

; and

ilked

OWD

grois,

their

this

blej

) the

eX=

in in that ply

1001 than a penny each. I thought to London ! and wifhed I could fend you a waggon-load.

ablet

andit

rate C

trave

feem

Peller

of the

that i cleme

havel

foun

and 1

of dil

merly

in Sta

in our

the co

preffic

not r

the ples

diftre

* H

tolony

I must not omit telling you that, among the veffels lying in the river at the time of our approach, was a French privateer, commanded by a furious revolutionary citizen of the great Republic-fans-cullottes de la premiere classe-who, in all the rage of wild democracy, refolved not to ftrike his flag to the " Tyrant-English !" Seeing no poffibility of failing from the harbour, without being taken, he ran his veffel as far as poffible up the river, and, there, funk her. One of our fchooners being sent in pursuit of her, found the veffel, with only her mafts above water; - the crew having gone on shore, in the boat, to feek their efcape, through the wild woods, leaving a most infolent and abusive letter in a bottle, tied to the mast-head. This specimen of gasconade, and republican scurrility, began "You d-d inf-l rafcals," and, being continued in low and vulgar abuse, went on to affure us that, on our return to the islands, the brave Victor Hugues would " teach us the valour of true republicans."

We are not without the hope of being able to raife the privateer, and make her ufeful; and it is extremely doubtful whether her defperate citizen-commander may find it poffible to traverfe the woods to any place of fecurity. It feems far more probable that he may be compelled to take fhelter in fome remote part, either of the colony of Demarara, or Berbifche; and that it may, yet, be his fortune to feek the clemency of thofe whom his folly and temerity have led him fo grofsly, and unjuftly, to revile*.

181

1154

I the TI

abo

TIVality St

Citize

lap]

rild é la

to the lity c

taken

IP I

of or found

ater ;

boat,

woods,

erinı

cimen

, be

being nt of 13日的

15/2

In the town of Stabroek, likewife, we found another viclent republican, whofe rafh and revolutionary zeal outran all the bounds of diferetion. This was a citizen who formerly held a kind of tavern, or public houfe, in Stabroek: and although he was, entirely, in our power, policy did not lead this man to the concealment, nor even the moderate expreffion of his mifchievous fentiments. He not only avowed, but fought to inculcate the moft violent and revolutionary principles; and although he had much caufe of diftrefs, from domeftic affliction, he could not refift the pleafure of grofsly abufing the " English aristocrats," and indulging in loud political declamation! His wife had died the very evening the Dutch garrifon furrendered, but the colony becoming fubject to the "monarchical English," was deeper grief to this modern-feeling-this high-patriot republican, than the lofs of his better-felf! Next morning the corpfe of his deceased wife was carried to a fhort diftance out of the town, and this citizen leveller, without prayer or lamentation, committed the body of his late partner "to the crabs." Religion, and even its forms seem to be, here, dispensed with, for they have neither a place of worfhip, nor of interment. Citizen M- followed his poor unlamented wife to the fields, and there configned her to a hole in the earth, uttering his grief in loud curfes against the ariflocrats !

* He fell into disease, and died before he reached the colony of Surinam.

A few days fince I had an opportunity of dining in company with feveral of the planters of this colony, who have eftates upon the fea-coaft; and I could not but remark a ftriking difference between these gentlemen, and those who, conftantly, reside in Stabroek, 0

新

pa

00

60

10

I

51-

1000 these

the figure

C. ALB

to ET

bher 1

OFTIN

CALLE

is cit ation,

44 to 如竹

H, fa

or of 1000

COD-

g his

, the

mity moa dia.

ED,

jek,

or in Bridge-town; compared to whom they would feem the more robuft inhabitants of a temperate climate. Both in countenance and in general ftamina, they are very unlike the fallow cachectic-looking fubjects of the towns. To find any of the colonifts of fo ftrong and healthy appearance, was matter of gratification to me, having been impreffed with a contrary expectation, from the very difcouraging reports I had heard regarding thefe fettlements.

From all that I had collected upon the fubject, I had underftood it to be a very generally received opinion at Barbadoes, and the neighbouring iflands, that the climate upon the coaft of Guiana was, fingularly, unhealthy: but the appearance of the gentlemen alluded to is fufficient to refcue it from a prejudice fo unwarranted. Judging, indeed, from what I have yet feen, there feems no caufe to believe that the air of this coaft is fraught with any thing of peculiar infalubrity; or that it is, in any degree, more noxious than the atmofphere of the iflands.

An opportunity has, alfo, occurred to me of viewing the general face of the colony, by making a ride of fome miles into the country, in an open carriage; but, without attempting to give you a more minute defcription, at prefent, I may, fimply, confirm the remark I made at our first coming on shore—that the whole of the land is one wide-extended plain, thickly covered with cotton-bushes, and every where interfected, with ditches and canals, like the low territory of Holland.

I have, likewife, made a visit of curiosity to a coffee plantation, near the town, where I faw an extensive display of the riches and luxuriancy of the foil of Guiana. This eftate differs from the wide fields upon the coaft, only in being a flat furface of coffee, instead of cotton; but it is rendered rich and inviting, from being traverfed with green walks, shaded with fine rows of trees, whofe loaded branches bend under the various species of tropical fruits, ferving, at the fame time, to delight the eye, regale the olfactories, and refresh the palate. A pleasant path, more than a mile in length, and of fufficient width for carriages, leads down the middle of the eftate, the fides being decorated with mangoes, oranges, avagata pears, and many other kinds of fruit.

thick

chidi

fragi

gold

the D

how

thus quifite

fcorch

and gale

ever

the of

fuppo

leek

are, t

myria

ing

and nues

had

Wa

Units

pting

pre-

No No

hickly

where te the olity

lere

and ftate

0.311,

of

ng,

ded

bes

ical

the

the

in

R

15

Croffing this walk, near the centre, is a thick grove of many hundreds of orange trees, clad in all the variety of umbrageous foliage, fragrant bloffoms, unripe green and ripe golden fruit.

In the genial climate of Europe, under the mild fun and foft breezes of England, how delightful would be fields or gardens thus planted, and how gratefully—how exquifitely enjoyed! But, here, under the fcorchings of a torrid fun, while the eye, and the olfactories, and the palate are regaled, the tortured fenfe of feeling precludes every poffibility of enjoyment. If exposed to the open fun, the excess of heat produces infupportable languor and fatigue—and if you feek the protecting fhade of the fruit trees, you are, there, tormented with the fharp bitings of myriads of mulquitoes,

Invited by the grateful odour, and thinking to enjoy the cool fhade, I left the broad and heated path, to ramble in the fweet avenues of the orange grove, but ere my foot had traced its fecond ftep in the cool grafs, I was befet by the thousand ftings of hoftile keepers, fcarcely lefs fierce or lefs watchful, than the fleeplefs guardian of the delicious fruits of the Hefperides; and, it requiring more than the power of Hercules to fubdue them, I foon difcovered that my beft remedy was a hafty retreat.

⁷

In my efcape I experienced more courteous fare; for, upon turning from the grove, a gentle nymph, who had efpied me from the manfion, approached, in graceful ftep, to bid me welcome; nor did fhe withhold, like the Hefperian maids, the garden's golden produce; but, kindly, prefented me with its fweeteft, choiceft fruits. In plain terms a very fine mulatto woman of the houfe, feeing me walking, and obferving me to be a ftranger, came out, with a plate of the fweeteft oranges of the grove, and, inviting me to eat, with much gracefulnefs and urbanity, kindly bade me welcome.

Prefently afterwards I met a robuft negro carrying a heavy bafket of fruit upon his head, and afking him how they disposed of the immense numbers of oranges growing upon the eftate, he replied "gib 'em to de ne

to.

205

fra

A

50 EY

pro

272

M

ket

I

M el

112 wi

to

neighbours, Maffa." My mind, again, hurried to my friends in England, and I wished I could convey to you a dozen chefts as fresh, and as fragrant as they were, then, before my eye. Although in this wifh I could not hope to be gratified, it occurred to me, that to many of my countrymen, not so far distant, they might prove highly grateful and refreshing; therefore, availing myfelf of the information, I wrote to Mynheer Meertens-the attorney of the estate, and have obtained permiffion to gather bafkets of oranges for the fick foldiers, whenever I pleafe. To have had this the refult of my walk, I could have extended it to the extremeft depth of the grove, although the fanguinary mulquitoes had intoxicated themselves with deep draughts from my veins.

I fhould feel it an unworthy omiffion not to give you a copy of Mynheer Meerten's obliging note to the manager, after reading my requeft. It was as follows: "Monfr. Keller, à l'habitation Vleffingen aura la bonté de procurer, de tems en tems, pour les militaires qui font malades, les fruits tels qu'ils s'y trouvent. Il obligera, fon très humble ferviteur.

A. MEERTENS."

icial

mon

200

TIG

DUIN

grow mth

the

pic

11

VEN

me

ger,

ogä

TID

1201

During the few days, fince our arrival here, events and circumftances have occurred, as if they had been planned for the gratification of our curiofity, or defigned expressly to place before us what was likely to be most ftriking to Europeans.

Already have we witneffed the humiliating, but very interefting fight of a cargo of feveral hundreds of human fubjects being landed from a flave-fhip, and exposed to public fale; and on the other hand, naked beings, who range in the utmost freedom of human nature, have prefented themfelves in crowds to our observation-parties of copper-coloured Indians, from the wild woods, having come down the river in their canoes to visit the It has also chanced to occur to me to town. be addreffed by an unhappy flave, ftrongly entreating me to purchase her from her master; and I have further witneffed with furprife, the more than apathy, perhaps I might fay, the exultation of a white lady, on hearing the cries of a negro fuffering under the whip, Likewife the honor has been done me of having a young flave placed by my elbow at dinner time, with a fragrant bough to defend me from

TITI

Irred

fica-

iltro

f mol

nilia.

of le.

land.

ublic

188, man

disto

ured

mę

the

e to

en.

ter;

the

the

TIES

ke-

ing

1

the flies; and I have been complimented with a negro to fleep at my bed-room door, in order to be in readinefs—in cafe I fhould require him to beat off the mufquitoes, or to bring me any thing in the night.

It proves that we are here just in time to witnefs the fetting in of the rainy feason; it having announced itself by the falling of heavy showers almost every morning fince our landing: and, amidst all the other delights and novelties of this moment, I must not forget to note, to you, that I now experience the fiery fensation of having my whole skin thickly beset with prickly heat.

We find that the Weftern code of hofpitality, fo prominent at Barbadoes, is not confined to that ifland. It extends equally to the coaft of South America. The planters, whom I have had the pleafure to meet at Stabroek, have invited me, in the most cordial manner, to their feveral homes, offering me every accommodation at their plantations in the country, whenever I may find time to vifit them. Inclination ftrongly impels me to avail myfelf of fo pleafant a method of feeing, and acquiring a knowledge of the colony; but, at prefent, the calls of duty are too urgent to allow the abfence of a fingle day; and as it is intended that I fhall return with the General, to head quarters, in order to proceed to St. Domingo, I fhall probably have to lament the impoffibility of embracing the occasion offered to me of better knowing Demarara, and its hofpitable inhabitants.

I fhould tell you that the poor unhappy flave, who came to me to entreat, that I would purchafe her, was a very decent young woman, here termed a "houfe-wench *." The hardfhips and ill treatment fhe had fuffered, had created, fhe faid, fuch an entire diflike to her prefent home, that if fhe could find no "good Maffa" who would buy her, fhe had refolved to try and efcape from her mifery by running away. The poor creature fluddered as fhe mentioned this expedient, fenfible that if fhe fhould be retaken, her fufferings, great as they were, would be fadly multiplied. Still fhe declared fhe was firmly refolved to hazard

* A domeftic flave-not fent to work in the fields.

the

Th

tea

the

He

fel.

more

the

the

reg

for diffe houl

only

perfo

Will

redr

how

no r

the

ficap

the attempt, rather than continue her present wretched life, hopeless of relief.

1412

and

DL at

tode

15 iti

nend

to SI, it the ffered shof.

appy

bild

WO-

he

ed,

eto

10

R-

by bs

jat.

12

1

She wept as fhe fpake, and the heavy tear fwelled on her ebon cheek as fhe related the feverities to which she had been subjected. Her tale was at once interefting and diftreffful. It needed not the aid of eloquence to move compassion. The simple narration of the hardfhips imposed, and the punishment inflicted for only trivial faults, inftantly reached the feelings, and in ftrong appeal begat a new regret that whole hofts of human creatures, for the of lucre a few of their fellow beings, differing only in the colour of their skin, fhould be degraded to a fituation, which not only deprives them of the command of their perfons, but, alfo, robs them of all the powers of will.

Divefted of every right, a flave has no redrefs,—not even against the bitterest wrongs: however oppressed—however injured he has no refource—no means of relief! Not having the power of changing his home, he has no escape from ill usage or cruelty; but is condemned to travel the long journey of life in hopeless discontent.

lation

willop

KIT

ervice

Ic

humanit

inued, a

y cried

Cad bly

Maffay

a'might

founde

t's very

Pre

AVE W niftrefs

tim. I

doubl

n beha

ever im, wh

lithe cr

-"Aye

ng he w

YOL.

The corporal punifhment of flaves is fo frequent, that instead of exciting the repugnant sensations, felt by Europeans on first witneffing it, fcarcely does it produce, in the breafts of those long accustomed to the Weft Indies, even the flightest feeling of compassion. The lady I have above alluded to appears of good natural difposition, and in no degree disposed to general cruelty; but the frequency of the fight has rendered her callous to its common influence upon the feelings. Being one morning at her house, while fitting in conversation, we fuddenly heard the loud cries of a negro fuffering under the whip. Mrs. -- expressed furprize on observing me shudder at his shrieks, and you will believe that I was in utter aftonishment to find her treat his sufferings as matter of amufement. It proved that the punishment proceeded from the arm of the lady's hufband, and fell upon one of her own flaves; and, can you believe that on learning this, fhe exclaimed with a broad fmile, "Aha! it will do him good ! a little wholefome flagelation will refresh him.—It will sober him.—It vill open his skin, and make him alert. If I was to give it them all, it would be of ervice to them !"

19 16 (

itp.

on f

int

e We naffior

ofgoo

Ipoleo

of the

mmos

mom

fation,

negro reffed

at He

in tt.

lerings

at the

of the r own

rainj

Ab!

fiele

I could not compliment the lady upon her umanity. The loud clang of the whip connued, and the poor imploring negro as loudv cried "Ob Maffa, Maffa—God a'mighty— 'od blefs you Maffa ! I beg you pardon! Ob ! Aaffa, Ob ! I beg you pardon ! Ob ! God 'mighty—God blefs you !"—Still the whip ounded aloud, and ftill the lady cried "Aye, 's very neceffary !"

Prefently I learned that this unfortunate ave was punished for drunkenness, having ecome intoxicated, in consequence of his nistress treating him with money to buy um. I could not but remark that in fuch case doubly became her to petition her husband, n behalf of the poor man; observing, that at Il events, it must be quite useless to punish im, while he was in a state not to be fensible f the crime. To this the tender lady replied, -" Aye but if Y— was to spare him till mornig he wouldn't give it him then !" YOL. II. O

The Bart Lit

Such is the effect of habit in fubduing even our moft amiable feelings. Could this lady have known how much her remarks deformed her, policy had, no doubt, led to a different expression, although humanity had not taught, nor habit allowed her to feel a different fentiment ! m la ca rei wi be des

hee

11 .200

Let me ask you, my friend, what you would fay were you to fee me return home as rich as a West India planter, or an Eastern Nabob? Know that fanguine whilper fondly augments the value of our captured property to upwards of £200,000! What if I should chance to share to a weighty amount, and, in the event of our proceeding to new conquests, return to my friends with a Benjamin fack! We hear of various ships, of extensive stores, of large estates, and of whole gangs of flaves, all public property, to be confiscated for the benefit of the captors. Knowing with what facility prize money finds its way into the foldier's pocket, you will fmile at the riches of your friend, thus acquired; and, perhaps, would deem it a hazardous fpeculation to offer a £5 note for my whole share of profits. Still, being here, in the direction of a departfubdi uld t

the stand

dtozta

hadie differ

OU WOR

2 25 nt

Nabobi

Ugmes.

upwar

hance t ie evel

turn t

n facts

re ftore

f lan : del sur opinioni interna l fort l

the first - mit - start - start and a start - start peripti servoriro a vite interio talla - presentati di alla mater supervisitor Brage Street and and and the second and the ment, I am really told, that I ought to calculate upon receiving a fum by no means defpicable. My expectations, however, do not run very high, being aware of the clofe meltings, which fuch kind of property ufually undergoes, before it becomes fufficiently refined for the pockets of the captors *.

* It proved that confiderable property was actually condemned and fold; but not the fmalleft dividend has yet been paid to those entitled to it. January 1806. upon receiving a fum by no means defpi-

LETTER XII.

which fuch kind of property ufually undergoes before it becomes fufficiently refined for the Barbadoes the metropolis of the West Indies. News, letters, and tidings of the army reach Guiana, viâ, Barbadoes. Great body of the armament fails from Carlisle bay. Sir Hugh Christian arrives at Barbadoes. Colony of Berbische surrenders to the English. Roads of mud and clay. Dutch euifine better than the English. Dutch devoted to the pleafures of the table. Slaves sent to cut grass for sale. Punishment of a flave. Author and a party make an excursion to Mr. Osborn's. Visit to Mr. Dougan's. Happy condition of Mr. Dougan's flaves: — of Mr. Osborn's. Negroes in the West Indies sit round a fire in the evening. Musquitoes and fire flies.

Stabroek, May, 6.

thet

Indi

mr, a Barba

and in chi

2110

Jeft Ba

wheth

St. Lu

arma

nion

ed di

edjuft

bringi fels, L

which

Nove

which time

conv

Barb

PREVIOUS to giving you the intelligence which reaches us at this place, it were fit to inform you that the ifland of Barbadoes is now become, as it were, the London of the Weft Indies—the great capital to which we anxioufly look for events, and for news. Removed to a greater diftance from you, and without any direct communication, we feem dependent upon this fub-metropolis; and we learn the tidings of England, of Europe, of the Weft India Islands, and of the great body of our army, only as conveyed to us, indirectly, viâ Barbadoes.

Two veffels have arrived from thence, and by thefe we learn that the Commander in chief, and the troops did not fail until the 21ft of April, being fix days after the time we left Barbadoes. It was not publicly known whether they had gone againft Guadaloupe, or St. Lucie; but, from all the circumftances of the armament, it feems now to be the current opinion that Guadaloupe is not likely to be attacked during this campaign.

Bertia

y. Duta

a the pla warned

1 contes

. Ma

May

ewhit

infon

owh

Teft b

DISION

107.4

vidoui

lepen

lead

We are told that Admiral Chriftian arrived juft before the troops failed from Barbadoes, bringing with him twenty-feven fail of veffels, the remnant of the immenfe fleet with which he originally failed, in the month of November : and it now appears that the fhips which were in fight off Carlifle bay, at the time we left it, were only a division of the convoy, and that the Admiral did not reach Barbadoes until fome time after.

03

We hear that the colony of Berbifche has furrendered to the troops detached from hence; but the intelligence is not yet officially confirmed. thar

gou

Zeps

palm

renu

may

Eng

dert

differ

in Eu

Vatio

taut

char

them

compi

ate ha

or th

they

imme

37 amor

pam atten

good

the m

Holla

You will not envy our walks in the neighbourhood of Stabroek, when I tell you that the wet feafon is now completely fet in, and that, from the whole foil being of pure mud and clay, we can fcarcely move a ftep from the door without being ancle-deep. Such roads furely were never feen; and, not yet having an opportunity of purchafing a horfe, I am daily compelled, either to walk up to mid-leg in wet clay, or to drag my limbs through a path ftill deeper in mud.

Can you believe that, when dining a few days fince with a party of gentlemen, at Stabroek, I fhould have heard it afferted that we had nothing good in England but - - - - beef ! It was the opinion of a Dutchman ; and I felt fome furprize, on hearing feveral of my countrymen add, that the Dutch have certainly a better knowledge of the good things of the table, poffefs more of them, prepare them better, and are more devoted to the pleafures of the board than the English. I wished for some of our gouty friends, or our generous and portly citizens of London, to debate the question. The palm had not then, perhaps, been tacitly furrendered. More of stews and hashes they may have, but it were difficult to convince an Englishman that they have better food, or fonder stomachs *.

T COL

10 110

011 10,8 ure m fromth

th TOIL

havior

e. Izr

mid-lu

tought

z a fer

at Sta

tat m beet.

I fe

UNITEI

a le g

tably

191

fard

Something of novelty—fcenes and events different from all we have been accuftomed to in Europe, occur almost daily to our obfervation; but I am afraid of falling into a tedious tautology by detailing them to you as they chance to arife: yet I like to give you them as they occur; for, should I wait to compress them under regular and appropriate heads, you might never have them at all; or they might be divested of the only merit they posses—that of being fresh from the immediate feelings of a first impression: I,

* The author is affured by a friend, who has long refided among the Dutch, that the citizens of Amfterdam are more pampered than those of London—that they bestow more attention respecting the preparation of their food—that good eating and good cooking are more studied, and that the making of seasoned discussions is more a business among the Hollanders. therefore, proceed in my own way to tell you that, fince the date of my laft letter, I have been witnefs to a gentleman calling up one of his flaves, into the breakfaft room, and giving him orders to go with three others into the fields, the high-ways, or the woods, and cut grafs, to fell in the town, charging him to recollect that it was at the pain of a "good flogging" if they did not each bring him home four bits * at night, and adding, by way of encouragement, that, if they could gain more, they might keep the furplus for themfelves. They went out, each taking a long knife and a ftring, and returned, punctually, in the evening with the fixteen bits.

Unfortunately I am now enabled to fpeak of the punishment of a flave, which was far more fevere than that mentioned in my laft letter; and, I am forry to add, attended with fimilar marks of infenfibility, and want of feeling, on the part of a white female. Happening to call one morningupon a lady at Stabroek, in company with feveral Europeans who had been my fellow-paffengers hither,

* About 1s. 8d. fterling.

We

bl

CIL

flar

as

for

Fat

pug!

AP

upe

101

Jeac

QU

th

two wer

long

foll

piec

gui fior

low

7 Ins

(Carling

Ting in a

10,27

of the sta

ing Lo

1 " 840

ng h

ing, H

Y cours

us for ring

, DUM

Bitt

ed to

which ned h attensi

7, 201

email

adyt

peal

油码

we were fcarcely feated before we heard the bleeding clang of the whip, and the painful cries of a poor unfortunate black. The lady of the house, more accustomed to scenes of flavery than ourfelves, pointing to the fpot, as if it were a pleasant fight for strangers, or fomething that might divert us, afked, with apparent glee, if we faw them "flogging the negre?" Truly we faw the whole too clearly. A poor unhappy flave was firetched out naked, upon the open street, tied down with his face to the ground before the fifcal's door, his two legs extended to one ftake, his arms ftrained out, at full length, to two others in form of the letter Y, and, thus fecured to the earth, two ftrong-armed drivers *, placed at his fides, were cutting his bare skin, by turns, with long heavy-lashed whips, which, from the found, alone, without feeing the blood that followed, conveyed the idea of tearing away pieces of flefh at every ftroke.

Confistent with the freedom, and im-

* Slaves fo termed from being promoted to the diftinguifhed office of following their comrades, upon all occafions, with a whip at their backs, as an English carter follows his horfes.

partiality I have always obferved in offering you my "notes," I am extremely happy to be able to relieve you from this painful fcene, by presenting to you one of a very opposite nature -one in which I am fure every feeling of your heart will warmly participate. A party of recently arrived Europeans went by invitation to dine at "Arcadia"-the plantation of a Mr. Ofborn, about eight miles from Stabroek. Five flaves were fent, with a handfome covered boat to fetch us, in which we had a most pleafant fail, about fix miles up the river, and, then, coming into a canal, which led to the eftate, we were drawn about two miles further, by the negroes running at the fide of the canal, finging all the way, and pulling, in merry tune, together. On our arrival at Mr. Ofborn's, we were prefented with wine, fruits, and various refreshments; and, afterwards, were amused till dinner-time in viewing the coffee plantation, the negro yard, and the different premises. At dinner we shared all the good things of the colony, and, in the afternoon, were conducted across the canal to vifit the eftate, and happy home of Mr. Dougan, a neighbour whom Mr. Ofborn had invited to meet us .- Here we found a rich fugar

T

Ins

pli

pi

曲 foi

br

2

be pla

CHARLES .

y tob

ne, by

THE R

d pago arty (

itatin

faMe

abrost

2 mon

nver,

ted to mils

lide of m

lling,

al at

WILL!

after-

iew.

250

ared

the

in

T

plantation bordered with coffee and fruits. Leading to the fugar fields, were fine rows of fruit trees, laden with oranges, forbidden fruit, fhaddocks, and citrons—the fhaddocks and forbidden fruit very fuperior to any I had before tafted, indeed fo exquifite, that perhaps I might fay they were the fineft fpecies of the two fineft fruits produced in the whole garden of nature.

I cannot express to you how much we were gratified—how peculiarly we were delighted with all we faw at this happy abode of Mr. Dougan. The plantation is laid out with much tafte, and having every advantage of culture, it exhibits, in high perfection, all the luxuriancy of a rich tropical eftate. Utility, pleafure, and convenience, are here most happily combined. A private canal leads through the middle of the grounds, and ferves, at once, for ornament and pleafure, as well as for bringing home the copious harvests of coffee and fugar.

At its fides are fmooth walks of grafs; and between these and the sugar canes are borders planted with all the choice tropical fruits, rendering a promenade upon the water, or its banks, most fragrant and inviting, and offering to the eye and the palate all the variety of oranges, shaddocks, limes, lemons, cherries, custard apples, cashew apples, avagata pears, grenadilloes, water-lemons, mangoes, and pines. The other walks, which traverse the plantation, are also cool and fragrant avenues of fruit trees.

But however great the richnefs, beauty, and fragrance of the eftate, its canals, and its walks, ftill I am fenfible that I fhall more firmly fecure your attachment to it, by mentioning the fimple fact that, to flavery, it affords a happy home !

85

dy

12

1

2

fe

DE

I know not whether, upon any occafion, fince my departure from England, I have experienced fuch true and heart-felt pleafure as in witneffing the high degree of comfort and happinefs enjoyed by the flaves of "Profit." Mr. Dougan not only grants them many little indulgences, and fludies to make them happy, but he generoufly fofters them with a father's care; and they, fenfible of his tendernefs towards them, look to their revered mafter as a kind and affectionate parent; and with undivided—unfophifticated attachment cheerfully devote, to him, their labour and their lives.

Not fatisfied with beftowing upon his flaves mere food and raiment, Mr. Dougan establishes for them a kind of right. He affures to them certain property, endeavors to excite feelings of emulation among them, and to infpire them with a fpirit of neatnefs and order, not commonly known among flaves : and I am happy to add that the effects of his friendly attentions, towards them, are ftrongly manifested in their perfons, their dwellings, and their general demeanour.-Perhaps it were not too much to fay, that the negro yard at "Profit" forms one of the happiest villages within the wide circle of the globe! The labouring poor of Europe can attain to no state at all adequate to fuch flavery, for had they equal comforts, still could they never be equally free from care.

The flaves of Mr. Dougan are not only fed, and clothed, and tenderly watched in ficknefs, without any perfonal thought, or con-

1401

Heing

er a

Perry

町田山

VEIL

HEADIN ...

and

DOR

men-

itat

0003-

1, 1

plea-

2 01

larel

raoli

曲

out

明

W.

cern, but each has his appropriate fpot of ground, and his cottage, in which he feels a right as facred as if fecured to him by all the feals and parchments of the Lord High Chancellor of England, and his court.

D

ce

pr

I

Happy and contented, the flave of "Profit" fees all his wants fupplied. Having never been in a flate of freedom, he has no defire for it. Not having known liberty, he feels not the privation of it; nor is it within the powers of his mind either to conceive or comprehend the fenfe we attach to the term. Were freedom offered to him he would refuse to accept it, and would only view it as a flate fraught with certain difficulties and vexations, but offering no commenfurate good. "Who gib me for gnyhaam Maffa," he afks "if me free ?" "Who gib me clothes !" "Who fend me doctor when me fick ?"

With induftry a flave has no acquaintance, nor has he any knowledge of the kind of comfort and independence which derive from it. Ambition has not taught him that, in freedom, he might escape from poverty nor has he any conception that by improving lot o

els

line

In.

rofi:

DEVE

defire

s not

WETS

end

free-

tcept

yht.

but

gib

11

I

inte

ind

ive

121

1

50

his intellect he might become of higher importance in the fcale of humanity. Thus circumftanced, to remove him from the quiet and contentment of fuch a bondage, and to place him amidft the tumults and viciffitudes of freedom, were but to impose upon him the exchange of great comparative happines, for much of positive misery and diffres.

From what has been faid you will perceive that to do juffice to the merit of Mr. Dougan, would require a far more able pen. His humane and liberal conduct does him infinite honor; while the richnefs of the eftate and the happinefs of the flaves loudly proclaim his attentive concern. We were pleafed with all around us, but to witnefs fo happy a ftate of flavery gave us peculiar delight.

The cottages and little gardens of the negroes exhibited a degree of neatnefs, and of plenty, that might be envied by free-born Britons, not of the pooreft clafs. The huts of Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany, nay, many, even of England itfelf, bear no comparifon with thefe. In impulfive delight I ran into many of them, furprizing the flaves with an unexpected vifit, and, verily, I fay the peafantry of Europe might envy these dwellings of flavery. They mostly confist of a comfortable fitting room, and a neat, well-furnished bed room. In one I observed a high bedftead, according to the prefent European fashion, with deep mattreffes, all neatly made up, and covered with a clean white counterpane; the bed-pofts, drawers, and chairs bearing the high polifh of wellrubbed mahogany. I felt a defire to pillow my head in this hut for the night, it not having fallen to my lot, fince I left England, to repose on so inviting a couch. The value of the whole was tenfold augmented by the contented flaves being able to fay-" all this we feel to be our own."

8

Too often in regarding the countenance of a flave, it may be obferved that

" Dark melancholy fits, and round her throws A death-like filence, and a dread repofe."

but throughout Mr. Dougan's happy gang the more striking features are those of mirth and glee; for, here, the merry dance and jovial 山

be

all

俞

the

his pric

Dat

mer

The

uf co

being 211 11

ind , tilti

their

the

went

long

VO

fong prevail, and all are votaries to joy and harmony.

Dave

[Lay these confit

Deila

lerve -

refer

25, 29

Citan

Wers,

well-

illow

hav.

d, 10)

e of

-00

s we

ance

Before the doors of the huts, and around these peaceful dwellings were seen great numbers of pigs, and poultry, which the flaves are allowed to raise for their own profit; and from the stock, thus bred in the negro yard, the master usually purchases the provisions of his table, paying to the negroes the common price for which they would fell at the market.

The conduct of Mr. Ofborn to his flaves, and, indeed, of many others I might mention, is alfo very highly commendable. The negroes at Arcadia have much caufe of contentment; their happinefs and welfare being guarded with a parental care. Were all mafters kind and humane as Mr. Dougan, and his neighbour, flavery might have few enemies; and the peafants of Europe, amidft their boafted freedom, might figh, in vain, for the happinefs enjoyed—by flaves!

As we were leaving Mr. Ofborn's, in the evening, we faw a numerous party of his gang grouped upon their haunches round (VOL. II. P a large fire, feeming to enjoy it as if it relieved them from freezing cold. Remarking upon the fingularity of this, with the thermometer at nearly 80°, it was obferved to us that they required it for roafting their plantains, flewing their pepper-pot, and preparing their other little meffes for fupper; and, moreover, that the negroes were always chilly in the evening, and would be quite comfortlefs without a fire.

Owing to the tide being out, at the time we returned, there was not fufficient water in the canal to admit of our going down in the boat, we, therefore, were compelled to walk nearly two miles before we embarked. During this walk, we were in danger of being devoured by those annoying infects the mufquitoes, which attacked us in fuch daring hosts that we were obliged to walk with small boughs in our hands, and to continue, the whole time, beating them from our legs and faces.

The fire flies were, scareely, less numerous than the musquitoes; but, although we were annoyed by their flying against us, we fuffered no pain from them. They neither tormented T

11

i

t

h

WE

面

如

The.

of

Tellen

ng up

BOR

hatth

IL AN

eirot

er, ti

tvenin

ut a fin

he tin

ater in

int

to wa

Dor

bein

e mul

daring

h loi

ne, th

COS 20

mercr

re mit

(infect

us with bites, nor flings—but in fuch myriads did they dart and play about us that we appeared to be moving in an atmosphere of twinkling flars. One piece of coffee, in particular, had its whole furface fo illumined by these infects, as to convey the idea of the field being fpread with a sheet of fire. After we went into the boat, and had proceeded towards the middle of the river, both fire flies and musquitoes forfook us; and we were, pleasantly rowed down to the town by four of Mr. Ofborn's contented flaves.

by marshar with the order of marshare wan noy painte in estilite or our miny ton

Man, are manual to Domaran, loaving 4,14

Colony Justing description on an telefamo teral

LETTER XIII.

Terms of capitulation of the colonies on the coast of Guiana. Dutch foldiers enter into the British fervice. South American Rangers. Situation of the captured colonies. Beef brought from the Spanish woods. Generosity of some of the planters towards the sick foldiers. Troops on board ship a great annoyance to the captain and his crew. The Grenada returns to England. Mr. Porter and family passengers. A sale of slaves. Scarcity of mechanics. Extravagant wages of labour. Case of yellow fever. Impropriety of the term "yellow fever."

Stabroek, May 8.

20

田

Do

fol

10 8

mit

We

font

reat

the

garri calle

will

the

effec grea

the

of

Ber

the

CONSISTENT with the order of narrative you wifh me to obferve in offering you my notes, I may now tell you that the general, and part of the detachment that accompanied him, are returned to Demarara, leaving the 93d regiment, in garrifon, at Berbifche—that colony having capitulated upon the fame terms as Effequibo and Demarara. The commerce of the colonies is to be directed to the ports of England; in return for which fhe offers them protection and defence. All that concerns the military proceedings is to reft with the Englifh; but, in all that regards the civil bleer not fits a but in main real nies.) Jone fin

hand Joy he Grann polleogen ntrendge ring of th

k, Mayr

arratin

ou m eneral

panie

ring d e-th

le tern

nmen

e poi

e off

21 00

am

RATE

213

the eftablished laws and form of government, until the end of the war; and the present Dutch governors are not to be removed.

Under these conditions most of the Dutch foldiers, who were in garrison, have confented to enlist into our service, and to act conjointly with our troops in defence of the colonies. We thus acquire the aid of a corps well seafoned to the country, in good discipline, and ready, at all moments, to act in concert for the general benefit of the settlements.

It is likewife intended to ftrengthen the garrifon by forming a corps of negroes to be called "The South American Rangers." This will be a valuable addition to our force, as thefe men are not fubject to the debilitating effects of climate, but are most active in the greatest heat; and are capable of fupporting the most fatiguing duties under the direct rays of a vertical fun.

The Dutch colony of Surinam borders Berbifche, on our right, and a little further up the coast is the French colony of Cayenne. With fuch reftless neighbours about us, we shall require to be watchful and alert. On our left we approach the river Oronoko, and what is termed the Spanish main : and not far from the coast of Essequibo is the Spanish island of Trinidad. From this quarter we hope to procure beef—from the other we expect only blows.

A communication is to be opened directly with the Spaniards, in order to negociate the purchase of cattle from the woods which, we are told, they will be glad to fell at fix or seven dollars per head.

70

the

(2)

H

in

J

1

We are now very much in want of fresh animal provisions; for, fince the time of our arrival, I have only been able to purchase two or three small sheep, for the use of the hospital. But, as the guardian of the fick, I owe much gratitude to the gentlemen of the colony, for some liberal presents of bees and mutton, which their humanity has induced them to fend to the hospital for the comfort of the suffering soldiers. Two neighbouring gentlemen, in particular—Mr. T. Cuming, and Mr. Waterton have the prayers of the fick, and the best acknowledgments of their 215

REA

OUT

the trop

d of T

Proce

blom

med &

0 0.630

roods-

to fel

ant a ime of rchale

of the

fick, l

ofthe

far

one

un

田

H

Fruits are given to us from various eftates, not only by gallons and bufhels, but by cartloads and boat-loads, at a time; and, by thefe generous aids, we have been able to improve the comforts of the fick, beyond all that money could have obtained.

Until the 28th of April we continued to have a fick-ward on board the Grenada; but we have now, to the great joy of Captain Richardfon, taken the whole of the men on fhore, and placed them in hofpital, at an eftate called La Bourgade.

Mr. Richardfon is a good failor, and, moreover, a very refpectable man, and of more improved manners than many of his colleagues. He is not only captain of the fhip, but has alfo a fhare as owner. He frankly tells us how much he is rejoiced to have done with us, and affures us that his fhip fhall never, again, while he commands her, be incommoded with fuch a troublefome crowd. I can feel what a fad annoyance it must be to the master of a vessel to be driven out of his cabin to feek a birth in any hole or corner he can find, and to have his ship stowed, for many weeks, with an useless and helpless throng, who, every moment, interrupt the working of the vessel, and are, perpetually, in the way of the tiller and the ropes.

Being now releafed, the Grenada proceeds to take in a cargo of cotton or fugar, in order to return with all fpeed to England. Her cabin is already engaged by a Mr. Porter, who is about to quit the fatigues of a tropical world, and to retire to Europe with his family. This gentleman was one of the earlieft planters who ventured to direct his labours to the cultivation of the fea coaft, inftead of the banks of the river, and who has turned his induftry to a profitable account; his well-merited fuccefs enabling him to return to England poffeffed of a very large fortune.

400

30

TU

the

A few days ago I had the opportunity of being prefent at a more regular fale, or market of flaves than I had feen before, and here I witneffed all the heart-rending diffrefs attendAbe

tafy

TDE

red, h

help

ipt di

ally, is

IDERA D

rder to cabin

tho is

world,

This

Who

tiva-

13 01

ecels

Feffel

ityd

erel

al.

terton i

ant upon fuch a fcene. I faw numbers of our fellow beings regularly bartered for gold, and transferred, like cattle, or any common merchandife, from one poffeffor to another. It was a fight which European curiofity had rendered me defirous to behold, although I had anticipated from it only a painful gratification. I may now fay—I have feen it !—and while nature animates my breaft with even the feebleft fpark of humanity, I can never forget it!

The poor Africans, who were to be fold, were exposed, naked, in a large empty building, like an open barn. Thofe, who came, with intention to purchase, minutely inspected them; handled them; made them jump, and ftamp with their feet, and throw out their arms and their legs; turned them about; looked into their mouths; and, according to the ufual rules of traffic with refpect to cattle, examined them, and made them fhew themfelves in a variety of ways, to try if they were found and healthy. All this was distressful as humiliating, and tended to excite ftrong averfion and difgust; but a wound, still more fevere, was inflicted on the feelings, by fome of the purchafers felecting only fuch as their judgment led them to prefer, regardlefs of the bonds of nature, and affection ! The urgent appeals of friendfhip and attachment were unheeded; fighs and tears made no impreffion; and all the imploring looks, and penetrating expreffions of grief were unavailing. Hungry commerce corroded even the golden chains of affection; and fordid intereft burft every tie of nature afunder. The hufband was taken from the wife, children feparated from their parents, and the lover torn from his miftrefs : the companion was bought away from his friend, and the brother not fuffered to accompany the fifter.

I

er

DI

En de

TE

101

H

DY

tion

tra

T

of

be al

t

t ha

to 311

In one part of the building was feen a wife clinging to her hufband, and befeeching, in the ftrongeft eloquence of nature, not to be left behind him. Here was a fifter hanging upon the neck of her brother, and, with tears, entreating to be led to the fame home of captivity. There ftood two brothers, enfolded in each others arms, mutually bewailing their threatened feparation. In other parts were friends, relatives, and companions, praying to be fold to the fame mafter ufing figns to fignify that they would be content with flavery, might they but toil together.

he brad append

heed

and expo

TYCLE

is of

iy ieo.

en froz

kir po

els:-

m hic

accoma

leen a ching.

not t hang

d, will

hom

13, EF

erral

othe

nim

Atom

The

Silent tears, deep fighs, and heavy lamentations befpoke the univerfal fuffering of thefe poor blacks, and proved that nature was ever true to her feelings. Never was fcene more diftrefsful. Among thefe unhappy, degraded Africans fcarcely was there an unclouded countenance. Every feature was veiled in the filent gloom of woe; and forrowing nature poured forth in all the bitternefs of affliction.

A whole hoft of painful ideas rufhed into my mind at the moment. In fad contemplation all the difforted images of this abhorrent traffic prefented themfelves to my recollection. The many horrors and cruelties, I had fo often heard of, appeared in their worft fhape before me; and my imagination was acutely alive to the unmerited punifhment fometimes inflicted—the inceffant labour exacted the want of freedom—and all the catalogue of hardfhips endured by flaves. I endeavored to combat the effect of thefe imprefions by attaching my mind to oppofite images. The kind treatment of negroes under humane mafters occurred to me; I recollected the comfort and harmony of the flaves I had lately feen at "Profit." I contemplated their freedom from care, and the many anxieties of the world; and I remembered the happiness and contentment expressed in their fongs and merry dances: but-all in vain ! The repugnant influence would not thus be cheated. With fuch distrefs, before my eyes, all palliatives were unavailing. The whole was wrong, and not to be juftified. I felt that I execrated every principle of the traffic. Nature revolted at it; and I condemned the whole fystem of flavery under all its forms and modifications.

When purchafed, the flaves were marked by placing a bit of ftring, or of red or white tape round their arms or necks. One gentleman, who bought a confiderable number of them, was proceeding to diftinguifh those he had felected, by tying a bit of red tape round the neck, when I observed two negroes, who were flanding together entwined in each others arms, watch him with great anxiety. Prefently he approached them, and after making his

of

difa

cha

hav

200 light

ftrob

DETE

whi

his

him

for ша

affet

and

War

not poi

TO

be

CO

low

pre

his examination affixed the mark only to one of them. The other, with a look of unerring expression, and, with an impulse of marked disappointment, cast his eyes up to the purchafer feeming to fay-" and will you not have me too ?"-then jumped, and danced. and stamped with his feet, and made other figns to fignify that he, allo, was found and ftrong, and worthy his choice. He was, nevertheless, passed by unregarded; upon which he turned, again, to his companion, his friend, brother, whichever he was, took him to his bofom, hung upon him, and, in forrowful countenance expressed the ftrongest marks of difappointment and affliction. The feeling was mutual :--- it arole from reciprocal affection. His friend participated in his grief, and they both wept bitterly. Soon afterwards on looking round to complete his purchafe the planter, again, paffed that way, and not finding any one that better fuited his purpose, he, now, hung the token of choice round the neck of the negro whom he had before difregarded. All the powers of art could not have effected the change that followed. More genuine joy was never expreffed. His countenance became enlivened.

anet

14 607 -

di

eit bar

itid Er

apping a

i long c

There

chestal

d No

ole wil

that 1

c. No

ned th

s form

marke

will be ne ga mber

hole

Grief and fadnels vanished, and flying into the arms of his friend, he careffed him with warm embraces, then skipped, and jumped, and danced about, exhibiting all the purest figns of mirth and gratification. His companion, not less delighted, received him with reciprocal feelings—and a more pure and native sympathy was never exhibited. Happy in being, again, affociated, they now retired apart from the crowd, and fat down, in quiet contentment, hugging and kissing the red fignal of bondage, like two attached and affectionate brothers—fatisfied to toil out their days, for an unknown master, fo they might but travel their journey of flavery together.

In the afternoon of the fame day I chanced to be prefent when another gentleman came to purchafe fome of the flaves, who were not fold in the morning. After looking through the lot he remarked that he did not fee any who were of pleafant countenance; and going on to make further objections, refpecting their appearance, he was interrupted by the vendor who remarked that at that moment they were feen to great difadvantage, as they looked worfe "from baving hft

ing

rer,

REDS

wer

COL

山口

(cene peate

rem

kin

OF C

afpel

gener

Tema

bele

NOT

HOF

apri

the tho

heir

far 1

Iram

lost their friends and affociates in the morning." Aye! truly, I could have replied—a very powerful reafon why they are unfit for fale this afternoon! If to be of fmiling countenance were neceffary to their being fold, it were politic not to expose them for long to come. Still, fome were felected, and the mark of purchase being made, the distressful fcene of the morning was, in a degree, repeated.

A few of the most ill-looking, only, now remained, who were meager, and of rough fkin-not thoroughly black, but of a yellowifh, or dirty brown color-of hungry, unhealthy aspect, feeble, of hideous countenance, and in general appearance fcarcely human. Thefe remained to a future day, and would, probably, be fold, not to the planters, but to the boatwomen, tailors, hucksters, or some of the inferior mechanics, or shopkeepers of the town, at a price fomewhat lower than that demanded for the more robust, and well-looking; and, alas ! though least able to bear fatigue, these feeble beings would, most likely, be subjected to a far more heavy flavery than those of fironger frame, for it is, commonly, feen that the labour in and

ila we e puide

田村 and not

Happy

Teline

a quia

te ret

nd af.

it their might

her,

lav I

entle

flaves,

After

coul-

er ob.

Wai

面

ing

exacted by the poorer orders of people, from their few and weakly flaves, is more fevere than that required by the opulent planter from his regular, and better-appointed gang: although, in theory, the circumftance of being always under the eye of the mafter, inftead of being left to the mercy of a hireling, would feem to be an advantage much in favor of the flaves of those owners, who possible but few.

TTO

aft

path

the 25]

ION

emp

tera

ever

deal,

mero confi

for a

Ifin

beit

merc

6 fri

tid r larm

YO

You will not be furprifed that we should find it extremely difficult to procure a fufficient number of workmen and labourers, in this colony, for the fervices required. Although the wages of labour are extravagantly high, an extraordinary number of hands for any emergency cannot be obtained, without having recourse to a fystem of coercion. The work required to be done at the fort in conftructing new batteries, and improving our means of defence, being urgent and extensive, it is found neceffary to detain the mechanics, who are employed, by very clofe watching; otherwife, although they are exorbitantly paid, they could not be relied upon for a fingle day. It has been found neceffary to procure the mere labourers by requifition—a certain number of negroes being demanded, for a given number of days, from every gang in the colony.

We feel the effect of this fcarcity of workmen, very much, at the hofpital, for after using every exertion of which I am capable, I have to lament that we do not yet fee the accommodations, for the fick, so complete as I had hoped. As a great indulgence I have now obtained a party of fix carpenters to be employed, exclusively, at the hospital, until they shall have finissed such repairs and alterations as are required. But the claims of every department, and almoss every individual, upon this class of workmen, are so numerous and prefsing, that I quite despair of confining them to the work of the hospital, for any two days together.

It is with real forrow and affliction that I find myfelf enabled to inform you of our being likely to become acquainted with that mercilefs yellow fury who has, of late years, fo frightfully ravaged the Weft India colonies; and regarding whom fo much of dread and alarm prevails in Europe.

VOL. IF.

ê (mr ler fr

age 1

, With

avori els F

houi

266 ters, i

A.

gantly

or any naving

work

ucting

of de

found

10 213

rwilt

the

A few days fince a foldier was feized by this hungry devourer, and, in defpite of all our efforts to refcue him, he fell a facrifice to her infatiate thirst for European blood.

fartisty of

COI

cal

I

der

pali

low

hes

CUI

rec

char

any laffer

derg

difea

from

Mor

rive

fyn

cula

tend picio

tist

VOL. IL

This was the first patient admitted into the hospital with the direful malady of the country, called "yellow fever," and it had afforded us peculiar fatisfaction had we been happy enough to have faved him : but the difease had made great progress before he was brought to us, and he died on the 6th day after his admission.

The body was examined, with a view to afcertain the changes produced by the difeafe, but the appearances were not precifely fuch, as from converfing with other practitioners, and reading a variety of authors, we had been led to expect. The ftomach was found to be the organ which exhibited the ftrongeft marks of derangement. The inner toat was furcharged with blood, appearing very red, and at one fpot near the upper orifice it was of a livid hue, and its texture fo weakened, that the finger was paffed through it, by only a flight preffure. I fincerely hope that frequent opportunities may not occur, but if, unhappily, they fhould we fhall avail ourfelves of them, in the hope of afcertaining, correctly what are the difeafed appearances caufed in the different vifcera by this fatal malady.

50

227

THE C aller

toly

ato te c

COUL

afford.

happy

ale hai ight 10

is ad.

iew to ifeale.

fuch,

ioners,

re had

h was 司山 einne

pearity

er of

ure A

wigh

hop

The name commonly given to this diforder would seem to be highly inaccurate. Our patient, although feveral days ill, had no yellowness of the skin, until a few hours before he died. If, therefore, his diffolution had occurred only a fhort time fooner; or if he had recovered previous to the period when this change of colour took place, we could not with any correctness have called the fever he had fuffered a yellow fever, although he had undergone all the characteristic symptoms of the disease, so termed, except the casual one from which it has been improperly named. Moreover, affixing to a disease a name derived from a fymptom, and particularly a fymptom which is not always present, is calculated to deceive, and may be of dangerous tendency, by rendering the practitioner unfulpicious of the real nature of the diforder, until it is too late to check its destructive progress.

LETTER XIV.

The author is left in the colonies of Guiana, instead of proceeding to St. Doningo. Regimental medical staff employed in general hospital. General Whyte attentive to the sick. The hospital and quarters for the medical officers established at La Bourgade. Author annoyed by insects. Tenderness of a Gentleman towards a musquito. Author makes a fauntering ramble to " the bush." His contemplations on being arrested by deep and impenetrable woods. A lady folicits the Author to make a complaint against her flaves.

Demarara May 12.

au the vi ty rei the

lies

I HAVE already troubled you with too many fpecimens of the uncertainties attaching to my prefent mode of life, for you to feel furprize at any new inftance I may have to relate. Know then that I have experienced a fad difappointment, in having to make my congé to the General, on his return to the iflands; and, after all my expectations of being foon at St. Domingo, am left behind with inftructions to continue in the direction of the medical department of these colonies, until our detachment of the St. Domingo hospital staff, fhalt be relieved from the staff of the Charibbee Islands.

Inftead of my being permitted to proceed with the General to head quarters, it is found requifite that the detachment of the hofpital ftaff, ferving here, fhould be augmented. I have made out a return of the medical eftablifhment, which feems neceffary for thefe colonies, and ftill hope that we may foon be relieved, and allowed to proceed to our original deftination: but I begin to have fome apprehenfions left the many uncertainties, which befet us, fhould prevent me from following my friends and my baggage, and I feel a ftrong regret that I was prevailed upon to leave the latter behind me.

nel in

Tak

hel at La

nefi of 1 Juanter

the party

新井住

May IL

many

ing t

to fel

tave l

enced

ny con

flands

foon

ution

icali

F. Ital

In confequence of the fick-lift becoming numerous, and the hofpital being deprived of the fervices of poor Carrol, who, though a convalefcent from his late attack, is unfit for duty in this climate, and has obtained leave to return to England, we are compelled to employ the medical officers of the regiments in the duties of the general hofpital.

03

2:9

I have great pleafure in remarking to you, that General Whyte has been particularly attentive to the comfort of the fick, and the general accommodation of the hospital department. In every thing proposed for the benefit of the fuffering foldiers, we have always been happy enough to meet with his full and ready acquiefcence. It has only been neceffary to point out what was required, and every attention was immediately given to the reprefentation. You will believe that this has been highly gratifying to me, and the more fo, when I add that the measures proposed have not been indifferently acceded to, but examined with a degree of attentive confideration, not lefshonorable to the General than fatisfactory to myfelf.

in fic

m

T

b ft ab

fide

fer

10 20 ot

to tha

or

lick

It is also with much pleafure that I am enabled to add that Colonel Hillop, who fucceeds to the command, is a man of great humanity and benevolence, and that we have every prospect of finding him defirous to follow the General's example in promoting the comfort and well-being of those who are in fickness.

Before he left us, General Whyte gave orders that a large cotton logis at La Bourgade

-of the resiments in the ite-

should be given up to the purposes of the hofpital, and that a house near to it should be appropriated to the use of the medical officers. Thus have we the fatisfaction of feeing the fick, and the whole of the department, very convenientlyaccommodated-thepatientsbeinglodged in a fpacious and well aired building; and their attendants having commodious quarters immediately near to them, with convenient offices, and, what is of confequence in this climate, a large ciftern for water adjoining- the whole poffeffing the further advantage of being feparated from all other buildings, and ftanding within a square of ground of confiderable extent, enclosed with private gates in front, and a deep ditch or canal on every fide.

Here are we flationed, as a diffinct department, quiet, and fecluded—free from the noife and hurry both of the town and the fort, and nearly equidiftant from the one and the other. The public road, from the fort to the town, paffes clofe by the gates; and within lefs than a hundred yards from the road is the fea, or rather the opening of the river, fo that the fick are brought to us conveniently on either

Fortunately m

data La

the of

1 dese

18 Dene

275 591

ad re

effare

T atter

prefert

tahigi

when

lot bee

with shong

myfell

at I as ho fu

rat h re ha

jckne

te gan

urgadi

24

fide, by land, or by water. Perhaps another fituation equally commodious for the purpofes of the hospital department could not have been found in the colony.

afa

TIR

fer co

this

the toes,

our ea

andt

Wiet

eftat

my I

out th

of loc

candle

lee if

and 1

enem

ately toa

have 11.1

temp

Already have I changed my quarters from Stabroek to our new home at La Bourgade, and in future I fhall be fpared the neceffity of dragging my legs through the deep mud, twice or thrice each day, in my vifits to the hofpital ; but it does not feem probable that I fhall long remain flationary, for I have received inftructions to proceed to the colony of Berbifche, to make arrangements for the hofpital department there, as foon as I fhall have brought thefe at La Bourgade into a proper eftablifhment.

Fortunately my bedding was not left behind with my other baggage, and this is now put up in the windward apartment at our hofpital barrack, where I look forward to much comfort, from the protection of my mulquito curtain *.

* A kind of gauze net without opening, thrown over the whole of the bed and bedftead, and fhut clofe at bottom, by means of a heavy border of lead, which falls upon the floor. I find the diftreffing annoyance of infects a far greater evil than the increafed temperature, or any other ill of climate. I now fuffer confiderably from the "prickly heat," but this would be very fupportable were it not for the additional, and greater torment of mulquitoes, ants, centipedes, jack-fpaniards, * and the multitudes of other infects biting, buzzing about our ears, crawling upon every thing we touch, and filling the whole atmosphere around us.

TS fre

argue

Sity of

, twin

Epital .

ll long

Aruc.

bifcher

tepart

their mt.

ft ba

s non

t off

much

fquite

at his

即

My nights have lately been made fo wretchedly comfortlefs, that I have now eftablifhed the habit of burning wet ftraw in my room, before I go to bed, in order to fmoke out the infects. I likewife practife the habit of looking under my netting, with a lighted candle, after it is let down for the night, to fee if any ftragglers have been left withinfide, and if I find any there, I confider them as enemies lurking for my blood, and, immediately, put them to death. Selfifhly looking to a good night's reft from his deftruction, I have no compunction in taking away the life of a mulquito! Without contemplating the poffible extent of his utility in the great fcale of creation, I crufh him with as little mercy as a chambermaid cracks a hopping flea. If you knew the acutenefs of his bite, you would feel affured that he is not tortured with a lingering death. Nothing can be more prompt than his execution, and I think I might venture to affert that he fuffers not a fingle moment of pain.

* A large species of wasp.

While my pen is employed upon this mighty fubject, it occurs to me as a question whether even the rigorous principles of the most devoted Brahmin would so discipline his mind in religious and philosophical forbearance, as to induce him, deliberately, to brush from his skin a flea, or a musquito, that was inflicting fharp pain upon him, and robbing him of his blood? I do not remember ever to have feen, or heard of a perfon whofe humanity led him to spare the life of a poor flea, although he is a very innocent little fellow, when compared to the fanguinary mulquito : but it has occurred to me to fee a gentleman, from a pure regard to the life of all created beings, tenderly and carefully put away a mulquito that was bleeding him by the nofe. He is a man whofe general conduct is guided

55

13

fat

20

00

THE

hu

DE

de

the

Tu

001 this

m

IR

olu

ħ

行

i

the

by the most exemplary humanity, and whose talents command universal respect. He confiders the little animal as only following the dictates of inftinct, in procuring his food, and feels that he ought not to deal his vengeance against nature ;---or to take away the life he could not give. " Excellent philosophy," methinks I hear you exclaim !- He may have brilliant talents, and vast acuteness of mind; but he has no fenfibility of nose!

From the houfe we now occupy, at La What had Bourgade, a fine avenue of fruit trees leads down the whole depth of the eftate, back to the wild foreft; or what is here termed " the Bu/b," from which the plantation is feparated only by a wet ditch and a bank. Rambling this afternoon in a folitary and penfive promenade, amongst the oranges and other fruit trees, protected from the mulquitoes, by thick gloves and pantaloons, I, fuddenly, found myfelf arrested, at the distance of a mile and a half from the houfe, by the deep woods which, in heavy gloom, oppose an impenetrable barrier to the eftate. My fauntering walk being thus interrupted I became fixed in contemplation, and, with my eye refting upon the foreft, him

The last

uten

in, au he fui

i noqu

quefti

s of th

pline

forber

to bries

hat w robbie

ever

oor fis

felker

iemisi

CTEL

my mind dwelt on the folemnity of the scene, until I fell into a fort of contemplative reverie. The state of man on our globe; his furprifing powers in changing its furface; the immenfity he had done; the extent of his influence; the great proportion of the earth yet unknown to him; the states of freedom and flavery; the wide difference between man living in the woods, and in polifhed fociety; the various stages of favage, and civilized life; all paffed in mental review before me. The varied appearance of different parts of the globe; the diverfity of climate; the extent of thefe wild woods; their removal by the allfubduing arm of man; their remaining for ever unexplored, and the undifturbed retreat afforded to their wild inhabitants; all paffed and repassed as subjects of my contemplation. Monkies, favages, tigers, ferpents, and all the infinite variety of animals poffeffing the woods traverfed my thoughts. The grand purpofe of life and being; the utility of man; wherefore placed on the globe; and the whole hoft of fuch-like fuggestions, multiplied by tenfold difficulties, prefented themselves to my imagination. External objects ceafed to impress my fenses, and, becoming absorbed in the gre

the eve

that

that pur

1.1

deri

(wo

the

the.

Nes

Cr

pil

of .

and

ay

lies floc let

ger

ful

m fid

hat

tha

福

Ettel

globe; globe; mace;

t of h e card

edom

ten t locie

lized

Dê, J

of the

EXICILIS

the dy

hing t

retre

palle

1140

WOO

ourper

The

ie hare

tentio

risd.

reat queftion of creation, I felt humbled at he idea that, in the wide fcale of worlds, even man might be of little more importance han the minuteft infect—perhaps not more han the very flea or mulquito whole only purpofe in creation feemed to be that of

. . . tormenting him ! Purfuing its wanlerings my mind ranged into the infinity of pace, and there roved amidft the ftars, until he very globe itself became as infignificant as he smallest ant that moves on its surface. Next occurred the infinite wildom of the great Creator -- I faw every thing perfect, and hapbily ordained, glanced at the inferutable ways of Providence, and was loft in profound awe and reverence, when I was fuddenly roufed from my reverie, by the loud fcreaming of monkies, and the aftounding fhrieks of a large flock of parrots .- It inftantly ftruck my recollection that there were other, and more dangerous animals in the woods, and with the full strength of the impression, as in the moment of waking from a dream, I felt that befides monkies and parrots thefe woods gave habitation to tigers and favages, and, worfe than favages-to Bufh-Negroes, to whom the scalp of a backra man would be an object of gratification. You will believe that the foliloquy I had fallen into was quickly at an end. Senfible of the peril of my fituation, I took up a rough ftaff for protection, and turning from the dark foreft, and its favage inhabitants, haftily trod back my path into cultivated fields, and civilized fociety.

As I am to note to you all occurrences, and particularly fuch as are in any degree novel or interesting, I must not omit the following,-although it may feem to border upon the incredible. It is, neverthelefs, a fact that a few days ago I was applied to by the wife of a colonist to request that I would make fome complaint against the flaves of the house, to her husband, very bumanely urging as a reafon for imposing upon me fo grateful a task, that she wished " to get them a good flogging !" I trust that neither you, nor any of our fair friends, on the temperate fide of the Atlantic, will condemn my want of gallantry in refifting the folicitation. Perhaps, in the brighteft days of chivalry, the most adulatory knight had not been obsequious enough to have devoted to gallantry, at fuch an expence of humanity. It was not even conten

mi

tot

whi

led

the

at they

14.14

id this

2 11

cultin

Urrente

y dere

it the fel

ed to b

I would

of the urging

a good

nor any fide a

of gab

ne mai

a linh

acon=

At an a d S

tended that any specific fault had been committed to justify the punishment, but this was to be invented, and merely because fome idle whim—fome fit of caprice, or ill humor had led the mistress of these poor flaves to wish them "a good flogging !"

al and the Jury against teams the for of fident and an woods of ficie calonies there are boores of main willed " Buff Negross!" Theile are motils runsation faves why have revolted gether in the Foreft, have there formed them i felves into bodies, sinder certain 'captains orde leaders ; and have effablished various habita?

and are become alere holder of urigands or tion, out, blood thirty and revenueful men, whole crimes in Parapaki, and all

LETTER XV.

Il hamor had 240

rendes that hav fpecific fault had been committed to jufiffe the punifirment, but this was to be inviented, and morely because fome lidle

Buf Negroes in the woods of Guiana. Fate of Dutch foldiers fent into the forest against them. Corps of slaves accompanied by a party of Indians subdue them. Punishment of a Bush Negro, named Amsterdam.

Demarara, May 16.

T

W

hal

inc

plan

OWI

deli

men

foreft

and ofr

lieu

there

aves

going

hes,

from

Were .

BOTE

tatio

10 de

aftati

(ET) speed

VO

IN my laft letter I mentioned that in the woods of thefe colonies there are bodies of men called "Bufh Negroes." Thefe are moftly run-away flaves who have revolted from their mafters, and having collected together in the foreft, have there formed themfelves into bodies, under certain captains or leaders; and have eftablifhed various habitations and encampments in the thickeft parts of what is termed "the Bufh;" where they now live in all the worft habits of favage nature; and are become mere hordes of brigands or marauders.

They are negroes of the worft description, cruel, blood-thirsty and revengeful: men, whose crimes in European, and all wel ordered states, would have been punished with death. Many have murdered white inhabitants, massacred their massers, or revolted in combination, plotting the destruction of the planters, in order to take the colony into their own possession; but being frustrated in their designs, have faved themselves from punishment, by flying into the hidden recesses of the forest; from whence they issue only to ravage and plunder.

the fille

I alin

Benent

May the

in the les of fe are volted

ed to-

hem-

ns or abita.

arts of

DOW

ture;

is or 啊 仙:

21

They had fubjected themfelves to a fort of regular discipline under their captains and lieutenants, and the lower orders of them (for there are diffinctions even among run-away flaves) were compelled to toil in the night, by going out of the woods, in plundering parties, to fteal plantains and other provisions from the eftates; but the labour to which they were exposed, by this night-duty, was fo much more fevere than that required of them, in their common duty, as flaves upon the plantations, that fome of them have been known to defert back from the woods, and return to a state of flavery, after having run away from their mafters to live in idlenefs, as they had expected, with their brethren in " the Bufh." VOL. II. R

I wish I could repeat to you, as eloquently as I heard it related, the very interefting detail of an expedition fent into the woods against these Bush negroes, last year, under the command of major M'Grah, and captain Dougan. Many perfons had been robbed, and had their property otherwife injured by their predatory excursions ;- indeed the whole colony was diffurbed, and, from the increafing number of these fanguinary hordes, was threatened with eventual destruction. It was therefore refolved that a body of troops should be fent into the woods to fearch for their places of refort, and to endeavour to fubdue or exterminate them. A party of the Dutch foldiers of the garrifon was, accordingly, equipped for this duty; and marched in due military order into the foreft.

But this was not the fpecies of force calculated for fuch an expedition: and from not having observed all the minute precautions required, in this new and hazardous kind of warfare, they were furprized and defeated by the negroes; and very few of the foldiers escaped with their lives-most of them being killed, and their fcalps, or bodies, fixed against 山

ha

es

dife

Ba

been

KADE

this

groei

Lare

part

for abho

prii

expe

lepar

into

Upor

of th

fides

-

out of ahave

243

2

BIL

leed o n the

Thorde

tioa,

f troot

anh

r to for

of bi narcha

1.3

603 of form

nd from caution

kind !

eated by felters

THINE

arainti

The government and the colonifts having difcovered, from this fatal experience, that the Bufh negroes were more formidable than had been expected; and finding that regular European troops were not the beft fitted for this kind of fervice, raifed a corps of negroes from among the moft faithful of the flaves; and alfo engaged in their intereft a party of Indians from the woods, who, happily for the planters, hold the Bufh negroes in great abhorrence.

Well provided and equipped, this fecond expedition, commanded as above-mentioned, feparated into two parties, and boldly advanced into the wood to form a combined attack. Upon their march they paffed the dead bodies of the Dutch foldiers tied to the trees at the fides of a narrow path. Not deterred by this

* Upon this occasion one of the officers was carried out of the wood by a faithful flave, who, afterwards, refused to accept his freedom as a reward; and only begged to have a filver medal to wear on days of festival. horrid example, they proceeded onward, having the fagacious Indians on their flanks; by whofe acuteness and penetration they discovered the various fituations, where the different companies of the Brigands had taken up their refidence, and, by well concerted attacks, defeated and routed them wherefoever they met them. As an encouragement to the able and new raised troops, a premium was offered for every right hand of a Bush negro that should be brought in; and when they returned from the expedition, they appeared with feventy black arms difplayed upon the points of their bayonets, caufing a very fingular and fhocking spectacle to the beholders. Three hundred guilders each had been fixed as the price, but it was found necessary to reduce the premium, left the flaves fhould kill their prifoners, or even deftroy each other to obtain it.

The exertion and fatigue required in fuch an expedition cannot well be conceived by those who are accustomed only to regular and systematic warfare: nor is it probable that fuch a fervice could have been supported in this climate by European foldiers. In addi-

3

in 113 前日

liat

THE

tree

FRD

the

EUN

ma

bar

pen

in t

CALLY

3000 edf

back

the

ed

the

teyo

who

rd ha

brill

Perel

ent m

the

is, dei

they a ables

s offen

gro th

they p ppeare pon é

fingel

, This

as the aceth

leir par

to di

in fac

ived b

ilar an

ble that min

aldie

245

through the unknown and almost impenetrable woods, they knew not where to find the enemy's posts; and were, at every minute, liable to be fallen upon by furprize.

At first entering the Bush, the march was continued to a great distance, nearly knee-deep in water; and when further advanced, the troops had to feramble through the thickets; or follow each other by a confined path in Indian file; and, after the haraffing march of the day, to lie down at night, on the bare ground, under the trees—the officers fufpending their hammocks from bough to bough in the open air. They had, moreover to carry the whole of their provisions, arms, ammunition, and every other neceffary required for the fucces of the expedition, upon their backs.

But for the affiftance given by the Indians, the brigands had probably never been fubdued; perhaps not found! The expertnefs of thefe men, in fuch a purfuit, is peculiar, and beyond all that could be imagined, by thofe who live in crowded fociety. They not only hear founds in the woods, which are imperceptible to others, but judge, with furprifing accuracy, of the diftance and direction from whence they proceed. The position of a fallen leaf, or the bending of a bramble, too flight to be noticed by an European eye, conveys to them certain intelligence respecting the route taken by those whom they purfue. From conftant practice and obfervation, their organs of fenfe become highly improved, and they hear with an acuteness, and see with a precifion truly furprifing to those who are unacquainted with their habits, and their vigilance. With fuch guides, the expedition moved in confidence, and was conducted in fafety. Seven encampments of the brigands were difcovered and completely routed; fome of which had existed during fifteen years, concealed in the profoundest gloom of the forest.

The following was the mode ufually obferved in eftablishing these places of residence and refort. Having fixed upon the spot most convenient for their purpose, a circular piece of ground was cleared of its wood, and, in the centre of this, they built huts, and formed the encampment, planting round about the build10

an

10

缸 gar

gri

山

the mbi

the

fer

pat

fe

fr

an pir

of

to

iI

pi

20

ings, oranges, bananas, plantains, yams, eddoes, and other kinds of provisions ; thus, in addition to the trees of the forest, procuring themselves further concealment by the plantations which gave them food. The eddoes were found in great plenty, and had feemed to conftitute their principal diet. Round the exterior of the circular spot was cut a deep and wide ditch, which, being filled with water, and fluck, at the fides and bottom, with sharp pointed stakes, ferved as a formidable barrier of defence. The path across this ditch was placed two or three feet below the furface, and wholly concealed from the eye by the water being always thick and muddy. Leaves were ftrewed, and fteppings, fimilar in their kind, made to the edges of the ditch, at various parts, as a precaution, to deceive any who might approach, refpecting the real fituation of the path. But the proper place of croffing was found out by the acuteness of the Indians, who foon discovered that to attempt to pals at any other part, was to be empaled alive.

It was found that the Brigands had eight of these encampments, or points of rendezvous in the woods, one of which is supposed still

R 4

Pala

gain I

from da fil

10 Time

OIN

19 E

Fit

orgen id the

Unac

ilance

Se

fifco-

which led in

F ob-

leng

TER

piar

he

he

100

to remain undifcovered. After much fatigue in endeavoring to find it, the fearch was relinquifhed, in the idea that fome of the prifoners, either by indulgence or torture, would be induced to make it known: but this expectation has only led to difappointment. All the means ufed have failed, and the prifoners, faithful to their caufe, have fuffered torture and death without betraying their foreft-affociates.

a formidable barrier of defence.

The cruel feverities inflicted upon thefe miferable blacks have been fuch as you will fcarcely believe could have been fuggefted or practifed by any well-ordered government : for, however ftrongly punifhment was merited, the refinement of torture with which it was executed ought never to have been tolerated in any ftate profeffing to be civilized. Humanity fhudders at the bare recital of it.

Moft of the ring-leaders were taken, and brought to Stabroek, where they were afterwards tried and executed, the majority of them fuffering with a degree of fortitude and heroifm worthy a better caufe. One in particular, named Amfterdam, fupported the exRE

21

助 gira

Call

fev

前

too

TEN

hot

nil

led

and itec

tead

10 2

ing

her

plac

the

the

ho

lor

isf

and the second

Telin

Onen,

te in-

spar.

All

lones

torter

-21103

TVE

theles

OU WIL

ted or

ment

nenit.

ich it

olerate

TIZEC

fil

1, 21

afige

ityd

ett

-

長

treme of punifhment with a firmnefs truly aftonishing. He was subjected to the most shocking torture, in order to compel him to give information regarding the remaining encampment—but in vain ! He despised the feverest suffering, and nothing could induce him to betray his late companions, or to make known their yet undifcovered retreat.

He was sentenced to be burnt alive, first having the flesh torn from his limbs with redhot pincers; and in order to render his punichment still more terrible, he was compelled to fit by, and fee thirteen others broken and hung; and then, in being conducted to execution, was made to walk over the thirteen dead bodies of his comrades. Being fastened to an iron-stake, furrounded with the confuming pile, which was about to be illumined, he regarded the by-ftanders with all the complacency of heroic fortitude, and exhibiting the most unyielding courage, refolved that all the torture ingenuity or cruelty might invent should not extort from him a fingle groan : nor a fyllable that could in any way impeach his friends.

MONTH A

With the first pair of pincers, the executioner tore the flesh from one of his arms. The sudden infliction of pain caufed him to recede, in a flight degree, from the irons; and he drew in his breath, as if to form it into a figh, . but he inftantly recovered himfelf-his countenance upbraided him, and he manifeftly took fhame for having betrayed even the flighteft fenfe of fuffering-then, refuming more, if poffible, than his former composure, he patiently waited the approach of the next irons, and, on these being brought towards him, he stedfaftly caft his eye upon them, inclined a little forward, and with an unshaken firmness of countenance, deliberately met their burning grafp! From that moment he shewed himself capable of defpifing the fevereft pain. Not a feature was afterwards diffurbed, and he preferved a degree of composure implying absolute contempt of torture and of death.

Finally, when the deftructive pile was fet in flames, his body fpun round the iron flake, with the mouth open, until his head fell back, and life was extinguished. I am told, by a gentleman who had the melancholy task to attend the execution, that the most hor

通 froi

foft

mak

from day.

Ariki

miat

might

Whi

W2S

unde

been

him

cam

from

that

his

horrid ftench continued, for many hours, to iffue from the roafting body, and was extremefy offenfive throughout the town, penetrating fo ftrongly into the houfes to leeward, as to make many perfons fiek, and prevent them from taking food during the remainder of the day.

TROST O

22

1021

115 000

tly to flight

Daties

03 200

e itert.

à ille

inels d

rimfelt

Not a ne pre-

ablatur

ile was ie in itad ill

milly wholy.

molt

The conduct of this negro furnishes a striking example of the powers of the human mind in subduing our bodily sufferings, and might seem, even, to corroborate the doctrine which maintains that all pain is ideal.

Another of the chiefs, or captains, who was taken, is still in confinement at the fort, under fentence of death. His execution has been delayed in the hope of learning, from him, the situation of the yet remaining encampment; but, hitherto, to no purpose; and from his present conduct, it may be expected that he will die as relentles and inflexible as his comrade Amsterdam.

These and the others and not reached.

States and the drive build tought are see the

LETTER XVI.

Description of house and furniture occupied by the medical staff at La Bourgade. Entertainment given to some gentlemen of the navy. Provision-excursions. Arrangements concerning prize-money. Benefit and importance of musquite eurtains. Stability of temperature, and of the breeze in Guiana. Singular application made to the author for an appointment in the medical department.

La Bourgade, May 21.

Wel

on

No

TOON

min

100 ings

11/10

cielin

many

free a parlot

bed-

belo

10 ti

with a coa

legs

toh

20 35

No.

Daje

non

I HAVE before informed you that the barrack allotted to the medical officers is a very commodious houfe, fituated near to the hofpital; but I gave you no account of the furniture; nor did I defcribe to you what we here efteem a comfortable dwelling. Let me, therefore, tell you that our manfion is built wholly of wood, and is of the fimpleft conftruction. Being fet upon low pillars, it is fo raifed from the ground as to leave fufficient fpace for dogs and fmall pigs to pafs under it. Chimnies and fire places are not required. The windows are naked holes in the wooden fides, and are neither clofed with plate glafs, nor well-fitted fashes, but hung with heavy shutters on the outfide, to protect us in time of rain. No fine flucco plasters the walls, nor are the rooms hung with rich paper or tapeftry. No painted cloth, nor foft carpet fpreads the floor, nor do any rich cornices, or figured plasterings decorate the cieling. Above, below, and at the fides, all is plain wood : the walls, the cielings, and the floors are alike of naked boards; many of them fo joined together as to allow free admission to air and light. Sitting in the parlour, we fee through the openings into the bed-room above; and to the pigs routing below. The roof is also of wood, and open to the bed-chambers, which are hung only with the well-fpun tapeftry of industrious spiders. An old bench, or form, with three or four chairs of rough wood, and a coarse deal board, laid upon a pair of cross legs by way of table, complete the furniture.

Thus accommodated, you will be amufed to hear that, we have had company to vifit us at our dinner table. Ladies! did you afk? No, not ladies! but a party from one of his majefty's fhips of war, who were led, by curiofity, to fee how the "foldier officers," (as

- Igv

0.Fr

DOD

THEF

gente

terty .

FRIE

海岸

町日

batrat

7 COM

(pital;

iture ;

efteen

refore

ollya

oction.

l fra

Chin

The

(ites,

100

they term the gentlemen of the army) were accommodated on shore. They did not express themselves violently envious of our comforts; but were much diverted in forming conjectures what might have been the remarks of fome of our friends in luxurious London, could they have glanced an eye upon our humble banquet, and the general order of our manege. A piece of hard falt beef graced one end of the table, a heavy lump of falt pork the other, and falt-meat foup supplied the place of the rich plateau in the middle. Such is our daily repaft, and fuch was our feast; for we gave to our visitors the most fumptuous fare of the larder. Fresh animal provisions are dainties we can very feldom procure, and indeed, were it not for the daily allowance dealt out to us by government, we fhould be confined to a diet of yams and plantains, like the flaves. During the paffage from England, and while we were lying at Barbadoes, we difregarded our falt allowance, nor did we, till now, comprehend the high value of a government ration ; but it is here become of the greatest importance, and forms, to us, as well as to the foldiers, the principal fupply.

plan

the pin

6 00

have negic

erper

affere

purch

have fuite

a fin

mel

pene litter

when tune keep

UDAS

from

were

of leav

Wer

pork

tted

We often difpatch negroes to the diftant plantations upon the coaft, or the borders of the river, in fearch of fowls, ducks, roafting pigs, or any other fresh provisions; but they fo commonly return empty handed, that we have been led to suspect them of idleness or neglect, and have been induced to make the experiment ourfelves, by going in a boat to different estates up the river, with a view of purchasing poultry or other stock. But we have been equally unfuccessful; sometimes failing altogether, and at others procuring only a fingle chicken, or a roafting pig to ferve a mels of fix perfons for the week. It happened one week that we met with a whole litter of young roafters to the number of fix, when we thought ourfelves in high good fortune; but as we had no convenient means of keeping them fat or in condition, we were unable to economize the use of them, and from cating pig, pig, pig, every day till they were all confumed, together with the accident of our black and flupid cook, occafionally leaving a little favoury stuffing within, we were not only in danger of growing into porkers ourselves, but became so entirely fatiated with pig as to make it extremely doubt-

201 8 15

of one ming

Marter.

Londer

ton to

Of the grace

of the

uppliel

aiddler

100 25V

e moi

Shima

eldom

taily

t, ne

] plan-

efion

Barba.

e, 101

Tales

服務

The second

ful whether we shall ever be able to eat it again.

118

Pa

and

of

Gall

fert

We

inte

Win

that 新.

teces

spea

nd n

then

T88 F

re E ields

thick

lown init.

ST.

TOI

256

Beef, veal, and mutton are luxuries beyond our reach. This colony does not fupply them in fufficient quantity for its ordinary confumption: we do not therefore expect them, except by way of an occafional feaft. The great additional demand for frefh provisions, fince our arrival, has likewife taken off all the furplus of fmaller flock, and left fearcely a fpare duck or a chicken in the colony.

In one of our provision-hunting excurfions to the weftern coaft, we had the good fortune to fall in with Captain Dougan, whom we found reliding there, in command of the remnant of the black corps, which was raifed laft year for the expedition against the Bush negroes. From this gentleman we experienced every mark of polite and hospitable attention. In our conversation we discovered that he was the fon of the gentleman I had feen at "Profit;" and, on his learning that I had visited his father, we were at once old acquaintances. But this was not required to call forth the captain's hospitality, for he had previoully infifted upon our dining, and paffing the remainder of the day with him ; and he gave us an excellent dinner, and plenty of good wines, with the most cordial welcome. Caffada cake and roafted plantains were ferved instead of bread, and with our fowls we had a fauce prepared from the caffada juice, which lofes its poifonous quality by boiling and evaporation, and becomes fomewhat like the effence used under the name of foy.

On taking our leave, in the evening, we received many polite and liberal invitations to repeat our visit; had our boat loaded with fruit, and were defired to fend for a further fupply whenever it might be acceptable. The eftate was rich in oranges and plantains, beyond all But we had vifited; and fo univerfally were the enthe fields interfected with rows of fruit trees, that whichever path we purfued, the eye looked down a fine avenue loaded, and yellow with Ind I fruit. an fil Is soullournos

Let me announce to you that I have lately been called upon to give in a return of the officers of the hospital-staff entitled to VOL. II.

O EN

ites be.

timet

expe

I feat

th pro

e takea

uid Litt.

CXCHI-

whom

of the railed

overed

o the

cept

itt

r he

1

prize-money, in order to enable the agents to make the neceffary arrangement for the diftribution of the property. This would feem to augur favorably : at all events it is fatisfactory to have our claim eftablished, and to fee things placed in an equitable train ; but we are not fo fanguine as to expect our shares thus foon, should we be fortunate enough to receive them at all *.

You will be pleafed to hear that although we are fiill fadly annoyed with mufquitoes during the day and the evening, our nights are paffed, at our new home, in all of reft and comfort. In Carlifle bay, and at Stabroek, notwithftanding that I flept with the door and windows open, I always felt heated and reftlefs in bed; and, too commonly, rofe with a painful and fpotted fkin in the morning. At La Bourgade I am free from thefe inconveniences, and it were difficult to imagine the great and genuine comfort I derive from paffing my nights in reft and compofure. I lie upon a hard mattrefs, without any bedding under it,

* It has been already remarked, that not the fmalleft division of this prize-money has yet been shared by the captors. COVE pro

mul

Wil

Aff

with mul

Dig

repole

the (

weel

Juxu

nels,

nút I

Rerui

refpec

errite

EVET

creat

the e

10rn

1 20

前时 leen:

theto:

St Carrol

alem

US ha

TRUE

although u nigi

reft aus

tabrock

cor and

id reft

e with ng.

coaves

the gre

fing 1

upot

undera

y fallen

stopth

covered only with a thin cotton fheet, and protected by my friendly and most valued musquito curtain. Even with the door and windows shut, I can rest without feeling myfelf unpleasantly heated; and, furrounded with my netting, I quietly regard the host of musquitoes and other infects buzzing about me, without the fear of their disturbing my repose.

Lying thus in coolnefs and fecurity, after the diffurbed and unpleafant nights of late weeks, I do verily enjoy my bed as a great luxury. Inftead of rifing wearied by reftlefsnefs, and exhausted by excess of heat, I now quit my pillow, in the morning, refreshed, and recruited for the bufy round of the day.

From the fituation of these colonies with respect to the sun and the ocean, and from the territory being a continued flat, we are scarcely ever without a free and steady breeze, which creates an equable temperature, and renders the climate peculiarly uniform. At fix in the morning the thermometer is usually between 74 and 77 degrees, and at noon it has feldom varied more than from 81 to 84 degrees. It being now the wet feafon, much rain commonly falls during the night; and, frequently very heavy fhowers in the courfe of the day; fuch as quickly find their way through all the garments of thofe who happen to be exposed to them, for the heaviest thunder storms of England are fearcely sufficient to give you an idea of their force and rapidity.

As I am to commune with you upon all fubjects, and all occurrences, I may tell you that a few days ago I received a very fingular and unexpected vifit from a dirty-looking, illdreffed man, who was an entire ftranger to me; and who, stalking abruptly into the room, addreffed himfelf to me, faying, without any preliminary falutation, "I am just called to fee you," then asked if " the flaves still remained upon the eftate;" and, following up his queftions, without waiting for any reply, went on to a train of interrogatories, defiring to know " if the army wanted a doctor"-very liberally tendering his fervices, provided he " could obtain a good appointment."-Had his abilities been confummate as his affurance, he might have been a valuable, acquisition to us; but, as appearances did not exactly bespe

git

his 272 tit

un no o

CQUE ST

heiner

11,8V

Cetring D

Acres-

e you

Upon a

tell yo fingula

king, il

anger h

IE TOOTS

ut any

d to fe

emaine

went of

o know very l

ided h

Hatti

Time;

tion to

ly be

fpeak this, I had only to bow, in humble regret that we had no appointment adequate to his merits, and to lament that we could not avail ourfelves of the diffinguished honor he had intended the department.

and the statistical and a start and and rear to deal of the deal who may be our

for the accounted ution of merick," mall more billing in order to make the needfary bolynth ed or whether Andereby to be

LETTER XVII.

Author's duties lead him to the colony of Berbische. Establishes a comparative inquiry respecting the diseased appearances after different disorders, with a view to ascertain what are the changes produced by yellow fever. The more robust most liable to be destroyed by the fever of the climate. An example in the superintending cook at the hospital. Execution of a Bush Negro. Public punishment of a party of blacks. Unjust punishment of a Negro Carpenter.

Demarara, May 25

Arc

ella

rea

jeet

101 teron

fions

they

Amo

fortu

holp

VOIC

uled

whole

Was al

mulci

The

facril

(OTIS

the

mar

beer

carly

inxie

of the

THE hofpital at La Bourgade being now eftablifhed, and placed under proper regulations for the accommodation of the fick, I fhall proceed, without delay, to the fettlement of Berbifche in order to make the neceffary hofpital arrangements for that colony.

It grieves me very fincerely to be able to tell you, that we are likely to have an ample opportunity of profecuting our inquiries refpecting the flate of the vifcera after yellow fever : but in order that we may not be deceived by appearances, we purpofe, likewife, to examine the bodies of those who may be de-tent thin, I had only to bow, in humble te-erer that we had an er pointment adequate to ftroyed by other maladies, whereby we fhall be enabled to judge more accurately what are the real changes induced by that difeafe.

1011 dan

109

INTE PIN

es Ann

, May 25

ow ett

hation

ll prof Ber.

ofpitz

e abli

1 21

rellit

-10-

1,10

der

To offer you any details upon this fubject would not only be premature, but foreign to my present purpose. Suffice it therefore to know that we shall avail ourfelves of the occafions which may occur, and that in number they promise infinitely to exceed our wishes. Among the late fufferers we have had the miffortune to lofe our fuperintending cook, at the hospital. He was a man of peculiar ftrength, voice, and appetite. The fick on board-fhip ufed to complain that he ate up almost the whole of their food : when he fpake, his voice was as the roaring of thunder; and in point of muscular strength, he was quite Herculean. The attack was fevere, and he quickly fell a facrifice, experiencing all the inveterate fymptoms of the fever, with the exception only, of the yellowness of the skin,-that uncertain mark from which the name of the difeafe has been, erroneoufly, taken. The diforder was early marked with uncommon reftlefsnels and anxiety, an indefcribable fenfation at the region of the ftomach, and an almost inceffant vomit-

s 4.

ing of a black fluid refembling the grounds of coffee.

Aal

his

Id

soin

him

fet

halp

ingu

man

COUL

10 67

mer

legal

N VC

the man

aller

Was

it a

fron

Among the diffressful fcenes it has lately been my lot to witnefs, I may tell you, that a few mornings ago, I chanced to be at Stabroek at the time of the execution of the captain of the Bufh Negroes whom I mentioned to you in a former letter. He died faithful to his cause, and no information could be obtained from him regarding the encampment still remaining in the woods. He was fentenced to be fuspended by the neck for a fhort time, and then taken down, while yet alive, to have his head fevered from his body. The executioner was a negro, who, without any feelings of compunction, or of forrow for his countryman, exulted in the adroitness with which he took off the head at a fingle blow.

After the execution I fat a fhort time with the officers, at the barrack of the 99th regiment; when another painful fcene was exhibited to our obfervation, in the flogging of a party of negroes, before the fifcal's door, upon the public ftreet. Upon one of them being releafed from the ftakes, to which he had been tied down, with his face to the earth, during his punifhment, I thought that I recognized his features, and on going out to afcertain the fact, I difcovered him to be one of the carpenters, who had been fet apart to work, under my directions, at the hofpital. It happened, too, that he had diftinguifhed himfelf by his induftry, and was the man with whom I had most conversed, on account of his speaking English, and being able to explain my instructions to his fellow-workmen.

later

Att -

and d ptagen

10 50-1

to beint

ne, and

ave hi nes of rman.

e took

t tine

e goli

Vas er.

in,

You will believe that I felt an intereft regarding him, and that I was anxious to learn by what offence he had brought upon himfelf the fevere punifhment we had witneffed. To this end, in company with Major Say and other officers, I followed the poor bleeding man to his home, where we learned that the alleged crime for which he had been punifhed was——ftriking a white man; although in fact it appeared to have been a refufal to get up from his bed, at 9 o'clock at night, to work for a white inhabitant of the town, after labouring at the hofpital during the whole of the day. It was further hinted by those about him, that fomething of pique or prejudice, on account of the poor man expressing himself pleased with his employment at the British hospital, might possibly have operated in deasening the ear of justice against him.

266 bee

of

fis

bu

tiel

200 gel

100

HICO

200

TR

at ba

翻 plat

frea

upo

bro tio

trea

lea

-

ter

per

and

These circumstances gave additional interest to his case, and we felt ourselves called upon, no less by humanity, than inclination, to ascertain the truth of it; and if the poor man had been unjustly punished, to endeavor to bring the authors of it to shame.

A Dutchman who happened to be prefent at the time we were making inquiries, in the carpenter's fhop to which the negro belonged, told us, with an air of confidence, that he had been punifhed for ftriking him, and cutting his elbow with a large chiffel; fhewing us the very chiffel with which the wound had been made, and the precife fpot whereon it had happened, at the fame time exhibiting his arm fupported in a fling. All this being focircumftantially ftated, four of us, Major Say, the furgeon of the 99th., another officer and myfelf, begged to fee this frightful wound which had been cut in the elbow : fome objections were offered on the ground of disturbing the dreffings, unfewing the bandages and the like: but as Mr. Blackader promifed to replace all these in fit order, we perfisted in the request; and the Dutchman finding that we were urgent, and rather inclined to be peremptory, at length fubmitted : but the coat was faid to fit inconveniently tight; the fhirt fleeve to be tied in a hard knot, and other little difficulties and delays were thrown in the way. Still we determined to fubdue them all; and when, at laft, we fucceeded, lo ! inftead of the many bandages, and complex dreffings we had been taught to expect, we could neither find a plaster, nor the wound. Instead of a deep cut from a chiffel, a flight bruife only appeared upon the elbow, the fkin being neither cut, nor broken. This feemed to ftrengthen our fuspicions that the poor flave had been unfairly treated; and by profecuting the inquiry we learned the following hiftory.

nal in

i calle

ination

LOI IIII

Nor to prefect

in the

nged,

e had

THE 明雄

been

it had

is and elle

山

had

The Dutchman had gone to the carpenter's fhop in the evening in fearch of a carpenter to do fome work at a houfe in the town; and finding this negro fleeping in the room over the workshop, infisted upon his getting up to go with him. The poor fellow pleaded that it was night, that he had toiled through the whole of the day, and further that he was ordered by the commandant to work only at the hospital until that was completed. The Dutchman, nevertheless, infisted upon his going. The flave unhappily refused. Words ensued; and the white man, feizing the black by the hair of his head, dragged him down into the workshop; where, in the fcuffle, the Dutchman happened to receive a bruise of the elbow.

The following morning a complaint was made to a public officer, high in power, flating that the negro had flruck the Dutchman, and wounded him; and it being an offence utterly unpardonable for a black man, under any circumflances, to lift his hand againft a white one, the poor flave, without further inquiry, was fentenced to receive the punifhment we had witneffed.

We could not feel fatisfied that the proceedings had been conducted with a due regard to justice, and therefore we waited upon the per

in

tol

11/0

and dee

dif

178 2

had

OWA

depi

tim

per

the nail

hel

ed

fad

dun

ed,

ye

pu

107

Perto

hugh

e Wi

they at

Te

on La Wora

e black

domo

le, the

of the

of was

ating

, and tterly

y cir.

e one,

, mas

had

TH.

10

the

perfon who had decreed the punifhment, to inquire further into the merits of it; and were told by him, that the negro had been punifhed "for ftriking a white man, with a heavy flick, and a large nail in it, and therewith cutting a deep wound in his elbow." As this account differed from that of the Dutchman himfelf, we afked this man of power, if the fentence had been pronounced barely upon the man's own report. Certainly not, he replied ; the depofition was further fanctioned by the teftimony of four refpectable witneffes who appeared in evidence, having feen the negro flrike the white man with the great flick with a great nail in it.

We then ufed the freedom of afking if he had taken the trouble to look at this wounded elbow himfelf. He had, he faid, " and a fad cut it was." Had we not been ftricken dumb with the reply, we might have exclaimed, " Alas! unhappy blacks! what hope have ye of juffice, if not only private, but alfo public punifhments be thus awarded."

As foon as our furprife and indignation would permit, we informed this man of justice that four of us had minutely examined this frightful cut of the elbow, and that, with all our eight eyes strained as wide as they could ftare, we had not even been able to difcover the wound ; adding, for his further information, that the Dutchman had, himfelf, affured us that it was cut with a large chiffel : but that, in fact it had neither been cut with a chiffel, nor with a nail in a flick, nor cut at all; being only a flight bruife which had probably happened in the ftruggle, when the Dutchman was pulling about the negro by the hair of his head. We also ventured to add that the whole tale of this mighty wound was a fcandalous impofition; and the punifhment which had been inflicted upon the negro a grofs injuffice. We then appealed to this arbitrary guardian of the laws, very earneftly demanding whether, in justice to the injured negro, to the public, and to himfelf, who had been thus deceived and imposed upon, he would not feel it incumbent upon him to inflitute an inquiry regarding the fact, and to have the cruel wretch, and his four perjured witneffes, feverely punished-but of course we made no remark upon his having feen the fad cut in the elbow with his own eyes ! Whether arel

great

acrost

but e

by e

hold

dingen

inftanc

againt

to hi

Aron

vileg

it W

aapr

a let

Natur

and t

fit of

than

of th tore.

whe

tain

to i

done

ther from feeling himfelf implicated, or from a reluctance arifing from any other caufe, this great officer of justice did not feem to be of accord with our fentiments upon the fubject ; but endeavored to divert us from the question by expatiating upon the high neceffity of holding flaves in fubjection, and the great danger and impolicy of overlooking, in any instance, the crime of their lifting the hand against a white man. We readily conceded to him that upon the prefent fystem-it was ftrongly neceffary to be tenacious of the privileges affumed, but we could never agree that it was either just or wife, to punish a poor unprotected man upon the falle acculation of a fet of perjured wretches, merely because Nature had covered him with a black fkin, and them with a white one; nor that it was fit not to expose fuch wanton malice to public fhame, whenever the falfehood and injustice of the testimony should be detected; therefore, pledging ourfelves to appear in evidence, whenever called upon, we left the office obtaining a promife from this man of power, to inflitute an inquiry, and to have juffice done to the poor injured flave !

Tel bit

Y CU ST

ilcoves o

11731- U G

didy o

el: tor

with

ECEL

ind piles o

to the

by the

to add v

ind wait

(hmeni _ gro a

this mefty munat

ho ha

n, k)

to inter?

id

The-

Whether our endeavors in his behalf may be crowned with fuccefs, is extremely doubtful, but the unhappy hiftory of our carpenter's punifhment will convey to you fome idea of the kind of juftice to be expected by flaves. The alleged offender is not heard in mitigation, nor are any of his colour admitted in evidence, although they might be able wholly to difprove the charge; hence, whenever a white man is bafe enough to perjure himfelf in accufation, the flave can have no hope of efcaping from punifhment.

famile field winter autice to public whenever called upon, we lob ther off a ob :

mining a promite from this man of power.

Auto

inc depri

frip cabin

ture.

Vor inte Haj

Expl

this c writi

velle

accor

rea

leed

Wa

Tive

hur t

273 confident with the uncertaindes to which I am always doomed, whenever my parken is entrufted to the fickle ocern, this thort parts fage, from a multitude of adverte circumflances,

LETTER XVIII.

Author embarks on board a Commissional floop to proceed from Demarara to Berbische. Expects to complete the passage. in a few hours, but is detained at sea four days and nights, deprived of almost every necessary and every comfort. Description of the Voltigeur and its accommodations. The cabin a wretched hole of filth and vermin. Its furniture. The library. Expedition of passenses in the boat. Various and tormenting delays. The captain enraged and intemperate. View at the opening of the Berbische river. Happy sensations on arriving at Fort William Frederic.

Berbifche, May 31.

EXPECTING a paffage of only a few hours to this colony, I left Demarara the day after writing to you my laft letter, on board a fmall veffel which I had not feen previous to embarking for the voyage; and which offered no accommodation but that of being bound direct to the place of my defination. This, indeed, feemed to be all that was required, for I was affured both on fhore, and when I arrived on board, that, in lefs than twentyfour hours, we fhould be at Berbifche. But,

VOL. II.

tent

IT CE.

「「

int

Itedia

whally

ever

int

De of

confistent with the uncertainties to which I am always doomed, whenever my perfon is entrusted to the fickle ocean, this short paffage, from a multitude of adverse circumstances. was extended to a fadly tedious voyage; and. in many respects, the most comfortless and difagreeable I have known. Inftead of a few hours only, we were four long days at fea. A minute detail of the progress of each fucceffive day may, perhaps, be as tedious to you as the voyage has been to me: yet, to fay, merely, that we were four days making a paffage of only a few leagues, would convey to you no idea of the extreme difcomfort, and the various and multiplied annoyances to which I was exposed. Let me, therefore, give you the particulars in my own way, and, if it seemeth meet, you may take as many days to read the hiftory of the voyage as we did to make it; and then if you pleafe, you may commit it, as I would gladly have done the vessel in which it was written . . to the flames.

At eight o'clock on the morning of the 26th inft., I embarked on board the above floop to proceed from Fort William Frederic, 3

S

bi

0

101

and 201

thio,

pot t

did

the palle

entire

in har

afatte

bles,

whic

had (

piy,

to re

The

ban

igeur

totes

at the mouth of the Demarara river, to Fort St. Andrew, at the entrance of the river Berbische. The vessel was employed by the Commission to convey stores and provisions to the garrison. She was named Voltigeur, and if the term was meant to imply a rolling and tumbling vessel, in opposition to every thing of speed or expedition, it, surely, could not have been more correctly applied, for never did an unwieldy cask move more heavily on the water.

Poid

aces

ind,o

A H

2 12 5

at la

h fue

to ya

to lay,

king a ort, and

ices to refore,

Way, s many

25 17

le, you

re done

. 10

dite

tove

deric

Quite unexpectedly I met with five other paffengers on board, to all of whom I was an entire ftranger. I thought myfelf fortunate in having procured three fmall chickens, and a falted pig's face, with fome fruit and vegetables, as my fhare of ftock for the voyage; and which, I was told by my friends on fhore, who had often made the paffage, was an ample fupply, it being probable that I fhould not have to remain more than a fingle day on board. The other gentlemen, having more confidence, than myfelf, in the wind, the fea, and the Voltigeur, had embarked without provisions or ftores of any kind. The anchor was weighing when I arrived on board, I, therefore, had fcarcely any opportunity of feeing my fellow paffengers before we were under fail; nor had I time to become at all acquainted with them ere I was compelled to retreat, and to hide myfelf from their fociety; for, as ufual, my head became fenfible of the fea-motion before we had well efcaped from the river, and my ftomach fympathifing, violent ficknefs feized me, and I was compelled to hurry to bed.

Till now I had taken no thought regarding either cabin or couch, the shortness of the voyage, and the warm and fleady temperature of the climate had fuperfeded all concern refpecting a birth for the night-every accommodation being affured to me by fitting upon deck, or lying down in the open air. The ills of noon, and the unaccommodating nature of the Voltigeur had no share in my calculations. But I now discovered that no relief to the prefent fufferings could be had upon deck. To fit up was impoffible, the violence of the reaching being altogether infupportable, and, as the veffel offered no protecting shade, to lie down upon the deck, exposed to the full

p

CE

9 me

the 10 fe

cha

duć

dec líf

to

Ico

for

dept hef

de

affi

67

OP

qu

luc

Was

tan

power of a burning fun, was to invite almost certain difease; and, further, as there were no quarter-boards, nor any other defence at the fides of the floop, I must have been every moment in danger of being rolled overboard into the sea.

Centro

Tenga

ime to re l mas

becas

ch fra

ndlm

IEZZA

ls of the era re-

100001 g upple

B

g minis

calitie

ORAC

id upit

VIOLAR

17th the s e full

Under these circumstances I was driven to feek shelter in the cabin, fuch as it might chance to be; and, to this end, I was conducted to a kind of trap-door in the quarterdeck, called a hatch-way; and, the hatch being lifted off, a dark hole below was pointed out to me as the cabin, and the only place where I could recline my aching head, or hope relief for my fickened ftomach. Subdued by the depreffing languor of nausea, I was too ill to hesitate ;- to lie down was my only care. A death-like fickness impelled me on ; and, unaffisted by stairs or ladder, I dropped myself, by means of my trembling arms, down the opening into this murky cell. My feet were quickly arrefted by the old chefts, and other lumber scattered about this filthy place, which was not of fufficient depth to admit of my flanding upright, without being half out at the hatch-way; neither was there room to fit down, nor a chair, nor ftool to reft uponhence it only remained to me to crawl upon my hands and knees over the loofe chefts and barrels to the fartheft extent of the cabin, and there throw myfelf into a wooden birth fixed at the fide; which I found too fhort to admit of the full extension of my person, and too near the planks of the deck above, to allow of my remaining in any but an extended pofture.

T 3

Still the annihilating nausea I suffered rendering me infenfible to all other ills, I folded myself up, as well as the shortness and narrowness of my contracted birth would allow, and affuming, as nearly as I could, the horizontal polition, fought only to escape from the diffreffing fickness that overpowered me: nor was it until this had fomewhat abated that I discovered the horrors of the contracted dungeon into which I had crawled. Darknefs and nausea had concealed from me, not only the limited extent, but the many other ills of this wretched hole. At a moment when the all-concealing fickness had a little subfided, a failor with a light in his hand, dropped through the opening by which I had descended. It

Wer

esp

DOI

whi

and

I ha

tout

Scripti

fint i

ia wh

food,

fix f

and v

its die

worm-

low;

from ornar

ftand

Was t

Not

den

how birth,

Wthe

Waz

15 240

200 10

tid m

0.汕上

nd tead

o alim

tends affered

ills, I

refs and uld al.I.

d, the

from

d me:

ted that itrafted

arknek ot only

rillsd

加加加加 ingh

It

were impossible to describe the sensations I experienced upon difcovering the scene which now opened to me. The exectable neft in which I was lying was not fimply crowded and confined, beyond all that the annoyances I had felt had led me to fuspect, but it was a tout ensemble of nastines, that defies all defcription. Words can only convey to you, a faint idea of the dirty and abominable place, in which, for four long days, fick and without food, I had to live.

> This horrid cell, called a cabin, was only fix feet long, feven wide, and four in depth; and was further contracted to lefs than half its dimension, by the loofe old chefts, and worm-eaten coffers standing on the deck below; the thick fheets of cobwebs fufpended from the deck above; and the crowd of filthy ornaments hanging on all fides. To fit or to ftand appeared impoffible; fcarcely, indeed, was there room to lie down, or to breathe. Not only was I shocked to see the noxious den I was in, but was puzzled to conjecture how I could have steered my passage to the birth, where I was lying. Both the entrance to the cabin, and the path I had travelled to my couch were fuch as I could only have paffed during the infenfibility of a fevere fit of nausea. Descending from the hatch-way above, I must have alighted upon a heap of unfixed trunks and coffers, at the rifk of my legs being jammed between them; then I had to crawl, upon my hands and knees, over the old unfteady lumber, breaking my way through filth-thickened cobwebs, at the hazard of being entangled in the ftrong net-work of gigantic fpiders, whofe labours had known no interruption fince the building of the fhip; and who, by conftant toil, had manufactured sheets and cordage of almost sufficient strength to work it. But when compared to the many other offensive things which filled the place, these arachnoide hangings might be regarded as the rich tapeftry of the apartment. did and a wol from the deck above; and the crowd of filthy

> > T 4

I was really feized with terror on heholding the actual flate of this noifome prifon-hole, for, confidering its confined limits, and the multiplicity of foul and offenfive things that were crammed into it, it appeared quite miraculous that I fhould have efcaped the fate of our countrymen who were configned to the celebrated hole of Calcutta. fis

200

T

加 falt

tate

THE (Eliai

the then

with elle

110 fons

Tema

flood

11 fpil

mo eale

filt

an ftr

808

At each fide of this dark abode was a fixed fleeping birth which was narrow, fhort, and dirty. The centre was filled with barrels, tubs, old sea chests, greafy coffers, and other lumber. At one end flood a tub of flinking falt meat; at the other, one with rotten potatoes, and pots of rancid butter. The cabin was the general receptacle-the flore-house, cellar, pantry, and larder of the ship. Under the births, faluting the nofes of those lying in them, were filthy worm-eaten chefts, filled with dirty long-worn apparel, and other highessenced contents. One was set apart for unwashed knives and forks, dirty plates, bafons, and difhes; another for the odorous remains of yesterday's dinner. In one corner ftood a bag of musty bifcuit-in another hung an old grease-thickened lantern. Handspikes, marline spikes, dirty swabs, a broken, mouldy cafe with a compass-an old wormeaten ditto with a quadrant, two or three broken fishing lines, a battered old speaking trumpet, and a variety of other implements, hung, or ftrewed about, added to the furniture of the apartment. astal ada-olasion

But worft of all were the poifonous old us fullocition, and the danger

山山 letter (

ich-

heap of

Leiny-

ealist

OVer

throw

ofber

gigati

AUTISIA

ic who tets and to work

IT other

thefe

as the 1126 heholt

on-hel

and the

ite fie

frot

the

blankets of the fleeping births; and the myriads of infects and vermin crawling about, and making a public high-way of my body. Rats and mice, cockroaches, musquitoes, fleas, and ants formed only a part of the catalogue.

I

f

-

his 0

A

fr

D

6

1

Ca.

ch

7

1

n

You will believe that on difcovering how I was placed, I loft no time in attempting my escape from this wretched neft. But, on rifing, a violent and enfeebling fickness again feized me, and from the causes I have mentioned, it was impoffible to remain upon deck ; I therefore made the experiment of standing in the hatchway, with my head through the opening, fo as to catch the paffing breeze; but the intense heat from the perpendicular rays of the fun, and the death-like nausea and inceffant reaching produced by the erect polition, foon chafed me from this wholefome station, and left me only a choice of evils-either to extend myfelf upon deck exposed to burning heat, at the rifk of being rolled overboard into the fea; or, again, to throw myfelf into the deadly hole I had left. The former of these measures almost infured disease-the latter threatened a poifonous fuffocation, and the danger of being devoured by vermin.

In this dilemma—unable to decide which might prove the leffer evil, and almost finking from the languor produced by nausea and vomiting, I, at length, resolved to return to the manifold ills of the cabin; but continued at the hatch-way, supporting a degree of reaching, which almost inverted my stomach, while one of the failors removed the blankets, and other offensive things, that were in the birth, and swept and source it out, in order to give me the bare boards as a resting place.

I now drew on a pair of thick fustian pantaloons that reached down to my feet; buckled them fast in my shoes; put on a pair of ftrong gloves; covered my head and great part of my face, with my night-cap; and changing my coat for a loofe morning gown, rolled myfelf up fo as to leave fcarcely more than my nose acceffible; and, thus protected, tumbled again into the birth I had quitted, bidding defiance to the infects, vermin, and every annoyance around me. Fortunately my fenses were not, at this moment, very acute, for I laboured under a fevere catarrh which deprived me of the faculties of fmelling, and tafting, and almost robbed me of fight. By ali,

ing she

ny ba es, Ale

alogue,

ringla

Dinga

יצה הס

in feing

ioned

I then

gint

adenia

the in-

of the

cellant

, foor

on, and extent

heat, al

the feat

lly hole

realus

eatored

to a

ficknefs and want of reft, my fenfe of feeling was alfo become torpid; fo that the ear was the only organ which retained its full power of receiving offenfive imprefions. Situated as I was, all this might be confidered as fortunate, for I was compelled to remain throughout the remainder of the day, either violently reaching, or fickly viewing the wretched and difgufting fcene around me.

284

lyd

[uc

Aten

2 1

FION

tol

En

the T

leap

Ever

cont

mit

han

moc

ed U

加 bial

floc

rats

ly a

OUL

OVE

for,

the

Before evening poor old Mr. Serjeant, one of my fellow passengers, was likewise seized with fickness, and compelled to seek relief by reclining his head in the opposite birth of the cabin. I had now a companion in my affliction, but this brought no alleviation to my fufferings .- I felt that this old gentleman, who poffeffed a large property and all the comforts of an opulent estate, might be less prepared than myfelf, to encounter the hardships and annoyances we were exposed to; and this idea, in no degree, contributed to my relief. In painful fympathy we mutually bewailed each other's diffrefs, looking with anxious hope to a less offensive birth upon the open deck, when the fun should take his leave for the night, light to say borkier fromle bas guittel.

But in this expectation we were grievoully difappointed. The retreat of the fun was fucceeded by heavy torrents of rain; and instead of our being able to return upon deck, all the other paffengers were driven below, crowding both the cabin and hatch-way, fo as to threaten us with the pains of fuffocation. Every old cheft and trunk now cracked with the weight of fome one hastening down to escape from the rain; and, quickly, no less than feven or eight persons, were crowded into this contracted hole of spiders and vermin, committing depredations upon their net-work hangings, and tearing down the ftrong hammocks in which for years past, they had rested undisturbed. The whole host was thus put to flight. All the living things of the cabin seemed to be let loofe in alarm. Numerous flocks of old spiders, overgrown cockroaches, rats, ants, and other travellers, ran distractedly about the births, kicking up their heels in our faces, and scampering, without ceremony, over every part of our perfons.

Nor was this the worft of our troubles, for, on account of the rain, and from fome of the creoles, who were stationed about the open-

a fer

1 705

VET dipo

23 25 61

state

Teaching

dilaty

Serjer

ek retit

birthe

in et

IO m

a, who omfott

reparet

is The

ef l ed each

四

14

ing, complaining of cold, we were exposed to the ftill greater annoyance—to the extreme peril of lying with the hatch-way closed. But this I felt it totally impossible to endure; and therefore, loudly, and earneftly, entreated, that crowded and ftowed as we were, we might not, on any account, be shut from the breeze. Possibly it might have proved an effectual expedient for relieving us from the vermin, and infects; but, from being apprehensive of my own lungs, I was unwilling to hazard the experiment.

In a ftate truly deplorable did we pafs a long and wearifome night. I had taken no food; naufea ftill oppreffed me; my very bones ached; my cold was fevere; my eyes were fwoln from reaching, and from want of reft; my head throbbed with pain; the heat of the cabin was fuffocating; and I was almost expiring from want of air. With what anxiety did I wait the return of day; and when grey morning ftole in at the hatch-way, how joyfully did I hail its happy dawn!

My mind's eye now faw the fort of Berbifche close a-head of the floop, and I contemplat ant

had

air

face

the ful

FERE

hate

imp

ing

Mor

COL

mo

fron

ing.

expe

hith

on deta

Wa

lici

that lis,

M

plated a speedy escape from all the perils and annoyances of the exectable Voltigeur. We had been under fail during the whole of the night, and it was no unreasonable flight of fancy to expect that we approached near to the end of the voyage. But the term of our sufferings was not thus soon to close. New vexations arose, and disappointment again prevexations arofe, and difappointment again prefented its thorns. An old failor, who had been employed to take his watch at the helm, during the night, had devoted to all fubduing Morpheus, and fteered the veffel a wrong courfe; from which accident we had now the mortification to find ourfelves more diftant from Berbifche, than we had been in the evening. This was a cruel blow to my happieft expectations; and judging from the progrefs hitherto made, the warm hope of being foon on fhore, was fuperfeded by the fear of being detained another night on board.

One of the paffengers, who, it proved, was the owner of the veffel, obferving my folicitude, offered me confolation, by remarking that we were not far diftant from an eftate of his, upon the coaft, and affuring me that if the veffel should not be able to reach Berbische in apole .

Etter

ed, 2

e; an

12 that

TEN

DIR

tualtie

明日,行 of m

the exc

1130

We Ball

ken no

bones

Were

f reft;

of the

expir-

siety

grey joy:

21-

11=

the evening, rather than we fhould fuffer fuch another night, he would take us all off in the boat to fleep at his houfe on fhore. This was, indeed, a real comfort to me, and I fupported the fickness and other ills of the day, in the full confidence of being, one way or other, relieved from them at night.

AID DIC

Our heavy floop proceeded in dull movement, making flow progrefs, and fcarcely regaining, during the whole of the day, the diftance she had loft in the night. Evening again approached and our Captain faw no prospect of reaching Berbische. Finding this, the passengers upon deck kindly fent a message down into the cabin, informing me, that we were within fight of the eflate, at which we were to fleep. This was happy news indeed ! The prospect of escaping from the detefted Voltigeur, although but for a few hours, brought instant relief to my fickened stomach ! The afflicting nausea vanished, and, in high delight, I haftened from my hard bed of fickness to seek a sweeter birth on shore.

But vexation and difappointment were again our lot; and no alleviating remiffion of OU

th

go

the ala la

whi

lan

alt

he

appr

but.

une

DIOV

lead

Terc

to ab

lortu

poile

ing

lut.

Lot y

tor

in:

TO

our fufferings was allowed. It was discovered that we were too far diftant from the shore to go off in the boat; and moreover that it was the ebb of tide, which rendered it impoffible that we could traverfe the deep bank of mud, which extended from the water's edge to the land.

I fairs

Ey, in

The last

II more

cely me

the di

g agair

道住

mach!

n high flick

ere

o of

It was next debated whether it might answer our purpose to avail ourselves of the return of the tide, and of our nearer approach to the shore, at a later hour: but, again, our hopes were defeated, by the unexpected decline of the breeze, which most provokingly placed us upon the water in a dead calm. Prefently the evening closed, and it growing fuddenly dark, we were compelled ited to abandon the project, and to fubmit to the tette torture of paffing another night on board.

As my next refource I refolved to avoid the poisonous stench and filth of the cabin, by pillowing my head upon the open deck until morning: but I found that my measure of vexation was not yet filled, for I was quickly chafed from this well-aired couch, by the falling of heavy rain; and compelled to return to my neft of VOL. II.

fpiders. As the evil was without a remedy, I haftened below, and, keeping on my clothes and fhoes, tumbled in upon the bare boards I had left, cracking numbers of cockroaches, and other infects in my fall; for the whole multitude of creeping things feemed to have met in congress in the birth, not expecting my return; and in the alarm of fudden interruption fome were crushed, while the others paced and fcrambled their way over my person, even in greater droves than before.

The rain continued to fall, and from all the paffengers again crowding into the cabin, we were clofe-flowed in confined and offenfive heat, and paffed another fadly wretched night : which to me was more diffreffing than the former, on account of my cold being fomewhat relieved, and my olfactory powers in a flight degree reftored. How anxioufly did I wifh to place an additional feather in the wing of time—how pray, ere the night had well commenced, that morning would again appear !

The few hours absence of light seemed quite an age; for, annoyed and restless as I was, thro eye

ibv!

refi

Icea

athe

hole

WER

Comfo

Iglad

ratd

10 hav

night

out th

amain

gain

guid

we h

fellow

houl

wew

ind t

RE C

1 CO

Pull -

boath

168, 21

taulti-

記録で

Smith

TUN

REGIT

CTAL I

from

e cabin

fenir

night

in the

fome.

ts in l

v did!

e win?

d me

加軟 ned

1728

through the night, fleep was a stranger to my eyes. Indeed had the foothing deity of repole invited me to his foft bowers, I should have refused the offering, in the apprehension that if I ceased to keep watch, I might lose a finger, either of the hand or the foot ; or be eaten in holes by the herds of hungry vermin, that were feeking to make a prey of my body. Comfortlefs, wearied, and with aching bones, I gladly greeted the return of day, and without dwelling upon minor ills, felt it fortunate to have preferved myfelf in a whole fkin !

To prevent the accident of the preceding night, we had let go the anchor; and, without the rifk of fteering away from our course, remained near the fhore until the revolving fun again broke from the waters of the east to guide our path. It was now difcovered that we had been lying near to the eftate of our fellow paffenger, where it was intended we should have flept; and it also appeared that we were only a few hours run from Berbische; and that, unless fome new prevention occurred, we could not fail to complete our voyage in the course of the day.

U 2

But, unhappily, the proprietor of the veffel now defired to be fet on fhore, and we could not weigh anchor until the failors, who went off with the boat fhould return. At 7 o'clock Mr. — took his departure from the veffel, carrying with him the other paffengers, and leaving me to make the remainder of the voyage alone.

I before obferved that these gentlemen brought no provisions on board; and as my fcanty flock had only ferved the mess for a fingle dinner, we had already been reduced to the negro diet of plantains and water for nearly two days. This had, hitherto, been no inconvenience to me, for my fickened stomach refused equally every kind of nourissment; but my greatest distress arose from the other passengers having devoured every morfel of my fruit, while I was lying fick and ill below, not leaving me a shaddock, nor an orange, to moisten my lips, or cool my tongue.

On their leaving the floop, I earnefly entreated them not to detain the boat a moment after they landed, left we fhould be prevented from reaching Berbifche by night. T

de

fo

fic

如

100 del

bit

fil

DOT

api

mo

men

hane

h,t

tion

fent

tion

ina

req

one

15an

創

命

They in reply affured me that it should not be delayed a minute beyond the time neceffary for fending us " fome fruit, and fome provi fions for the captain's dinner." But, incertitude was still the maxim of the fickle element, and stern ocean remitted not his unsteady and despotic rule. Instead of the boat coming back, directly, we were kept waiting the whole of the day, under an anxiety which it were more eafy to conceive, than express.

ed upon the dock, pouring forth dreadful fen

1 28 1

reduc

ater f

to, be ed flo

mrith-

om th

r mork

nd ill be,

1 OF ALS

arakil

THE .

night.

The third night came on, and no boat appeared. Our fituation was now tenfold more diffreffing than before. Without the men who went off with the boat, we had not hands enough to work the veffel. No remedy, therefore, remained, but to wait for them, however delayed their return. The mortification of having to pass another night in my offenve den, was fadly aggravated by the vexation of lying at anchor, near to the place of deftination, more than double the time that was required to complete the voyage; and if ever one day of twenty-four hours was longer than another it was furely this. Only one idea occupied the mind. The delayed return of the boat excluded every other contemplation, and chaining our thoughts to a fingle link, the heavy languor of difappointed expectation lengthened a most wearifome day into more than a tedious week !

U 3

The poor captain, grown even more impatient than myfelf, became quite outrageous, and from no fatisfactory caufe explaining to his mind the detention of the boat, he fought not to reftrain his rage, but kicked and ftamped upon the deck, pouring forth dreadful fea oaths, in the full coarfeness of broad Barbadoes dialect, and with all the emphasis of unbounded execration. His curfes were really tremendous. They were unlike all that had before met my ear ; and were rendered doubly odious by the drawling accent in which they were pronounced.

Notwithstanding my determination to meet the rough and the smooth of life as they shall chance to fall in my path, this I confess was a day of trial to my philosophy. Being without food and drink, without society, or any other agreement, I was not able to beguile the flothful hours, either by conversation or the pleasures of the table; and was even different. app

fr

10

of 間 oat

he

TO 他

and

As

山

m

N

山

the itic

pai

01

W

20 ay

35

in

Wa

appointed in the hope of diverting my mind, from the fatigue of unremitted fuspense, by reading. Intending to make the trial, I begged of the stamping, raving captain to shew me his library-Aye, exclaimed he, with a broad oath, that I can foon do ! And, in truth, fo he might; for it confifted only of an old mouldy copy of the failor's Vade mecum, and the fecond volume of The Tattler, worm-eaten, and held together by a needleful of worfted. As I was not in humour with the fea, nor any thing appertaining thereto, I threw afide the musty old guide, and fat down to tattle with Mr. Bickerstaff, hoping in his fociety to forget the cares of the moment; but still the boatthe boat annoyed me at every page, and I found it impoffible to abstract my thoughts from the painful apprehension of passing another night on board the execrable Voltigeur. However, with fometimes tattling, fometimes thinking, and fometimes looking out, I contrived to wear away the torpid hours; and, flow and dilatory as they had feemed, I found that the tedious day had too foon paffed away; for the cheering god of light again funk into the western waves,-and no boat had arrived !

1400 der over the

taris

Data

tragen

ainin

e for d ftar

adful

d Bart

is of L

re real

that he doubl

h they

ation

e as the

I confe

Bein

ciety, of abyaile

iain or en dif

U 4

The veffel being at anchor, and near the shore, the motion was not confiderable; and, confequently, the violent fickness and reaching, which had hitherto diftreffed me, were a little abated, and I remained, during the greater part of the day, upon deck; but as is common, at this feafon of the year, heavy rain again fell at night, and I was driven below to pass the hours of darkness amidst the filth and perils of my former retreat. Defending myfelf, as before, against the enemies that befieged me, I, very reluctantly, committed my perfon to their attack. My head ached feverely; I was enfeebled and languid from former reaching, and the want of food ; and every circumstance, around me, tended to rob me of reft. But exhaufted nature fought relief. My eye-lids hung heavy, and did occafionally fall together; yet all repose was denied me, for no fooner was I off my guard, than I was again roufed by formidable troops marching across my face and my person, and inflicting sharp wounds in order to drink my blood. day had too hoon palled away: for th

The poor enraged captain, bidding defiance to the fhowers, remained throughout 唐

ftan

100.

pou

ofth

eve

前出

had I.

propi

REEL

82ge

but

Neil

whol

Ince

sonie

low-

conc

retu

hav

pear

W.

1997

the greater part of the night fwearing and ftamping upon deck; and, in his watchful look-out for the boat, kept himfelf awake by pouring dread Barbadian curfes upon the heads of those who detained it.

Ie.

rere

曲

130 belon

e fill

endia:

hat be ed my id for

from

; and]

to tob

elief.

nally

me,

120

tarch-

ndín.

107

i de

應

After a long and wearifome watching the eye of morning unclofed, and day again broke in at the opening of the cabin. Much rain had fallen during the night, but the fun fmiled propitious through his morning robes, and feemed to offer cheerful greetings. With eager anxiety I fought tidings of our boat, but could obtain no intelligence regarding her. Neither was fhe arrived, nor in fight. The whole round of a day and night had paffed, fince fhe left us, and we were wholly loft in conjecture what could poffibly detain her.

I now began to feel alarmed for my fellow-paffengers, and foon became more anxious concerning their fafety, than regarding the return of the boat. Something furely muft have happened. The tide and the mud appeared no longer fufficient to explain the delay. Still had we no means of obtaining, nor even of feeking information, and it only remained to us to continue the expectations of the preceding day, rendered far more anxious from our apprehensions respecting the fate of the gentlemen who had left us,

I had very early escaped from the cabin, and having exhausted all inquiries and conjectures, without discovering any possible remedy, it next became a question how to kill the heavy time. I had, already, travelled as far as Finis with Isac Bickerstaff; and had nothing left in the shape of a book but the dirty worn-out Vade mecum : therefore, great as was my aversion to the fea, a feeming necessity drove me to separate the dirty pages of the old guide. A Dutch dictionary had been nearly as entertaining. I, nevertheles, laboured through latitudes and longitudes, and meridians, and altitudes, quite to the end; and still . . . no boat appeared!

I, next, refumed my tattling with Mr. Bickerstaff, pursuing our conversation of yesterday, until about noon, when, to the great joy of all on board, our long-lost boat hove in fight. Both tattler and guide were instantly forgotten, and, leaping up, I asked, impulA

b

h e fo

伯 al

h bec

tid

1186

21

2

1

01

th

the 30

C

2

f

1 fi

fu

fively, if we had yet time to reach Berbifche by night. The captain affured me that we had; and you will believe that we kept our eyes, stedfastly on the boat, wishing her tenfold speed. At length, after an absence of thirty-two most tedious hours, she came fafe alongfide; when we learned that no accident had occurred; but that owing to the immense beds of drifted mud on the coaft, and to the tide making against them, when they first neared the shore, all the party had been kept at fea in the open boat, exposed to the full ardor of a vertical sun, and without a morfel to eat, or a drop to drink, during the whole of the preceding day, from feven o'clock in the morning until ten at night : fince which the boat had been kept on shore to give rest and refreshment to the poor failors, who were cruelly exhausted with heat and fatigue.

Elde)

同時に rela

200 000

ibm to a

ord ging of mingh

page ..

ed bai

efs, las

es, 225

nd;an 油油

of the

he part.

ina

小小

isput-

Thus did it appear that there were fituations even more diffreffing than being confined on board the odious Voltigeur; for those who had gone off in the boat had been greater sufferers than myself. But I was surprized to find that men, who had so recently known the ills of privation, did not experience some feelings of fympathy towards others. Although they knew that we were lying waiting in fad fufpenfe, and without food or drink, except fome ftale plantains and bad water, notwithftanding the boat remained on fhore full twelve hours after they landed, they had not the liberality—the compaffion, I might fay, to fend off either a bit, or a drop to the mafter of the veffel, whom they had kept waiting; or to the perfon whofe provisions they had eaten.

We could not but feel hurt at this negleft: but we recollefted that they landed at night, and in a flate of fatigue and difcomfort but little calculated to extend their confideration beyond their own perfons; and we hoped to feel it the lefs on account of fpeedily reaching the haven whither we were bound: but, as if the torments of this vexatious voyage were never to end, when the boat reached us, it was difcovered that the tide did not ferve for us to get under weigh; and, confequently, we were obliged to fpend two hours of more tedious waiting than all that had paffed, before we could open our fails to the wind. At length the boat, being hauled up aftern, and the

the

cie

Ka dan dilo

vel

ep

my t

I lea

furt

ata

this

lerva

in or

But

the

Vol

WET

WOU

fixe

equ

out

你们

ATC .

ak, and

1 10

~ 面

N/N

1674 mis

Waite

this na

nded a onfor

dera-

oped

reach-

: but royage

ied us, e ferre

Dat

4.3

At

and

the tide ferving, we again flood out to fea; the captain affuring me that we ftill had fufficient time to reach Berbifche by fun-fet. Knowing her talent for failing, I had ftrong doubts of this; but did not deem it wife to difcourage the commander by condemning his veffel. The fact probably, would, too foon explain itfelf.

fear outing delivered in the brouden fired with

The wind was not in our favor, and on my first venturing to ask how we came on, I learned that we were about half a league further from port than when we were lying Still I was enough a failor to have at anchor. this explained to my fatisfaction, by the obfervation that it was necessary to fland well out, in order to fetch the river upon the next tack. But very foon after, on attempting to bring the vessel about, new perplexities arose. The Voltigeur disobeyed the helm, and would not veer to the wind. In the failor's language, she would neither tack nor wear, but remained fixed like a log upon the water. I ftood equally fixed, obferving all that paffed, without hazarding a syllable of remark; for, however bad a veffel may be, and however much her captain may abuse her, himself, still every commander is fo tenacious regarding the veffel under his direction, that it were treafon for any other perfon to fpeak of her as a bad failor.

302

oreate

puttio

again

aWar,

in ord

Becel

tain

at Dig

ing 0

very furth

the n

S

and

floop fifted

bifch

for

Way

Atic

with almo

IWO

Wrat

volu

esha

The poor captain now flamped and fwore worfe than ever; and I had a full opportunity of hearing the whole catalogue of vulgar fea-oaths, delivered in the broadeft Creole dialect. He curfed the veffel's eyes, her heart, and her fides—uttered dreadful oaths upon her head, her foul, and her liver, and after loading her with all the dreadful imprecations that vulgar rage could invent, he completed the climax, by exclaiming to the failors "d ber, cut ber old throat, d—— ber !"

After much exertion, and a varied repetition of oaths, and enraged ftampings upon the deck, the veffel was brought about, and we ftood in for the fhore, failing for a fhort time in fteady approach to the river; but within lefs than a fhort half-hour, the bright profpect, which had fo recently opened to us, was again obfcured, by the Voltigeur ftriking upon the mud, and being nearly fixed aground. Fortunately fhe went about on this tack, with 1

100

bal

980

to-187

a-

II,

01 er

D$

2

- 10

1

d

+

11

greater facility than the other, and hence, by putting her round, fhe was foon fet afloat again: but it was now neceffary to fland away, and make a long reach, from the fhore, in order to get into deep water. This would neceffarily delay our arrival, yet ftill the captain infifted that we fhould reach Berbifche at night. But upon my next inquiry refpecting our progrefs I found that this was not very probable, for we were then fix miles further off than when the boat came to us in the morning.

Soon afterwards all hands were fummoned, and " about, about," re-echoed throughout the But the vexatious Voltigeur again refloop. She had a fad antipathy to the Berfisted. bische river, and on their attempting to tack for the fhore, she refused to turn her head that way. The poor captain, who had carefully stationed every man at his post, and prepared, with all due care, for putting her about, grew almost frantic. He stamped and raved, and fwore with all the bitterness of unbridled wrath; and, having gone through all his volume of oaths, he threw himfelf down, exhausted by his exertions and his fury, exclaiming—" Dammee if we shall get in to-night, for she'll neither wag one way nor t'other." For this I was not unprepared, my expectations for fome hours previous, having been of accord with the information : and although the epithets of old, rotten and leaky, used by the enfuriated captain, were, from all appearance, very correctly true, I was grown too refigned, or too callous to all the ills of my fituation, to experience any feelings of alarm respecting our fafety.

After fome delay the veffel did come about, and we again ftood on, boldly, for the land, making all poffible fail, the mafter and his crew not defpairing of being able to reach Berbifche by night. But, as if the very fates had combined with the elements, to throw every obffacle in the way of our paffage, the breeze fuddenly dropped, and we were befet in a calm ! Againft this impediment neither the oaths of the commander, nor the exertions of the failors could ought avail. The captain who had already opened his whole ftore of imprecations was about to repeat them with manful energy, but, recollecting himfelf, he beftowed one round curfe

304 upon

clofi

old to a this

inthis

74.71

again le

boot ha nd I to

tion,

and ex

from

ing al

ying i witer I

norning

I

u bef

tompan

reffed

lored

IVOT O

is had

ameme

ieeble ar

TOL.

upon the wind and the paffage, and as a clofing exclamation cried out-" D-n the old tub, it is not her fault neither-there is not a thimbleful of wind! Dammee if we shall get in this week !"

Thus ended the failing of the day, and we igain let go our anchor for the night. The poor haraffed man now became more tranquil, ind I took courage to address him in converation, when I learned, that after all the fatigue ind exertions of the day, we were further rom Berbifche than we had been the precedng night; but that we had the advantage of ying in deeper water, and, confequently, were setter fituated for availing ourfelves of the norning breeze.

the lan

and his

Rach

WIT

paliage

enti

diment to 10 9

1

arle

I refumed my hard birth, protected is before, and bade defiance to the many companions of my neft. Nausea had difrefled me throughout the day, and the retored power of my olfactories was not in avor of its removal. The very fevere reachng had ceased, but the want of food, and the xtreme heat of the atmosphere rendered me eeble and languid : yet I was more comfort-VOL. II.

lefs than ill, and feemed only to require reft to relieve me from perfonal fufferings. Unhappily this was denied me, and, in naufea, and difcomfort, I rolled out the tedious hours of night.

The fifth morning of this wretched voyage was ferene and clear, and I left my fleeplefs couch at an early hour to breathe a purer air upon deck; when, upon looking out, I perceived an island not far distant, and lying directly in our courfe. From the failors I learned that it was within the mouth of the river Berbifche. This was happy intelligence, and feemed to promife a fpeedy termination of our teemful voyage. When the captain came upon deck, he greeted me with a broad oath, affuring me that I should breakfast at Fort William Frederic. I wished it might be fo: indeed all feemed now within our reach, and it appeared to be fcarcely poffible that any new impediment could interrupt the completion of our paffage; but the experience we had had was fufficient to create doubts in the mind of the most fanguine, and to temper his warmest expectations to the fobriety of tardy and interrupted accomplishment-nay, to convince him

3

that neve

firm could suppli

immed

And .

lead o

diet.

that it

river.

at the

we fa

experie

Ger

getting comp

trikin

daime

worfe

cruel

mide.

訊;;

Miouc

ferrer

that the uncertainties of a fea voyage could never end until the foot was again upon terra firma. If any stronger conviction of this fact could have been required, it had been amply supplied to my mind by what followed.

15%

1 1121

ns Loi

chet

17 Aug

pun

nut, li

and li

acehi

307

At feven o'clock we weighed anchor, and immediately made all poffible fail, with the island difplaying its thick woods, directly ahead of the floop, and forming a very pleafing object. As we came nearer to it, I observed that it was fituated about the middle of the id | river, and nearly opposite to the landing place at the fort. All feemed now propitious, and we failed fmoothly on : but we had yet to ma experience a further trial of patience! An hour had not paffed, from the time of our all getting under weigh, before our progress was he completely arrefted by the Voltigeur again ende Ariking upon the mud. " By Heav'ns," exclaimed the captain, "she's aground! This is worfe than ever !" All his vexations were now cruelly aggravated by the mortification of his pride, in consequence of being seen from the fort; and he ran, stamped, stormed, and curfed in loud burfts of rage, which out-did all his former doings. I felt the lefs annoyed by this additional delay, from the opportunity it afforded me of contemplating the fcene before us—more particularly as the veffel could not fuffer any injury from her foft bed, and as we were near enough to reach the fhore in the boat, even fhould any accident render it neceffary for us to quit the floop. The beft exertions of the crew were of no avail—fixed in the mud we were compelled to let go the anchor, and wait until the flood of tide fhould again fet us afloat.

The view before us was that of a wild country, only juft opening into cultivation. It comprized an extent of wood and water, with fmall patches of land breaking into incipient tillage, but it had nothing of the bold and romantic fcenery of mountainous regions. The picture was foft and harmonious. We were lying a few miles out at fea, looking directly up the river; the quiet waters of which were ftealing, in tranquil ftream, to the ocean. No part of the territory of the ifland was visible, but from being flat and low, it appeared a mere clufter of trees, growing out of the water, and causing a pleafant break in the wide embouchure of the river. On the right

111 grad

fron

Panla

nigh

ofin

Opt

曲 ink

meler

with gaze

wild

accid

tefore

teolly

HOUT

wild malt a

Interr

the e h be

H W.

14 tir

副初

Tit

Delita

ould

id as mo

in this

il wif e belta,

-fixed in

1 20 th

de fhold

of a will

litivation

d water

into m-ie bold

regions

US. We

aters of

ni, to the

he illand

l low, it

wig out

icak in

On the

right was the western shore covered with one mafs of heavy forest, whose gigantic timbers, gradually elevating their crowded fummits from the water's edge, formed one wide expanse of interminable verdure, which fancy might eafily have converted into a green field of immenfe extent, gently floping to the water. On the left was the eastern shore, shaded also with deep forefts; but, on this fide, the river's bank was partially thinned of its woods-and prefented to our view the fort and batteries, with a deep favanna at the back of them. I gazed in earneft contemplation upon the folemn wildness of the scene, and lamented not the accident which had fo peculiarly placed it before me. For a moment my mind was wholly abstracted from every thing directly around me, and rambling in the fociety of the wild men, the monkies, and other animals that inhabit the bush, I was totally loft amidst these vast and unbounded forests. But I was quickly interrupted from my reverie and recalled from the endlefs woods, by a loud cry of " All hands to heave the anchor." The tide had supplied us with water to float the floop, and we loft no time in attempting to escape from our muddy birth.

The veffel now flood directly into the mouth of the river, and, being careful to keep the middle of the fiream, we again felt fecure of our passage. But the fates had not yet fufficiently schooled us in adversity. Before we had time to reach the fort the wind dropped, and, from the vessel disobeying the helm, we again drifted aground. This was worse than all; and the poor captain now swore that "the very devil bimself must bave set his spell upon the vessel."

We were again compelled to let go the anchor, in order to wait the return of the Being near to the island and the fort, breeze. I might have gone on fhore in the boat, but I could not venture to afk our angry commander to fpare any of his men for that purpose. I had often, before, seen him expend his wrath without prefuming to interrupt him, It was now increased to frenzy, and he loudly vociferated-" There is some daamm devil in the ship that's bringing us this passage, and we must beave him overboard, or we shan't get in this month." It was perilous to fpeak to him, and, if any thing I might fay fhould chance to crofs him, it was not certain but, in the overfor

25 rak

it

ord

TOT

107

An

Way

1 pri dee

ap

We

qui

And

thou

wh

y0

COL

feri

fre

fre

DL

We

filt

mag all

t logis

40° m 1

Beforarc

400.17

heiro

as with

m my

n filip

Pgo (g

of the fort

rat, but

com-

t pur-

expeal

gerin

win,

01 910

-Tako

flowings of his rage, he might fix upon me as the "Jonas," and deem it expedient to take his measures accordingly. At all events it was neceffary to keep out of the way, in order not to interrupt him or his men in working the veffel; I therefore remained below, during the high tide of his ravings and stampings, shewing my head only at the hatchway, like an unhappy object peeping out of a prifon.

We remained for a confiderable time deep fixed in mud. Luckily the meridian fun approached with a fine breeze in his fuite, and we were once more fet afloat, when we were quickly placed alongfide the battery at St. Andrew's fort, and I most gladly jumped on fhore, rejoicing in the termination of a voyage which had been haraffing and vexatious, beyond all that the most ill-tokened calculation could have anticipated. Never was poor fuffering prifoner more happy in being releafed from long confinement, than I was to efcape from my noifome abode in the Voltigeur. During four fad long days, and four ftill more wearifome nights had I been immured in the filthieft of all filthy dungeons, ill, and in a manner without food or fupport, having only the repetition of bad plantains every day for breakfast, for dinner, and for fupper.

Situ

GT CH

rite Ber

Bal

訪

of bi ye.

ing

F

Dan

iflar

ilol

00

be wit

te

ia

I was met at the water's edge by Mr. Mackie, the acting furgeon of the garrifon. who kindly conducted me to an apartment, where I could caft off my fea garments, and fubmit my perfon to the putifying process of a complete ablution. Few, perhaps, would have wished for my birth on board the wretched Voltigeur-but all might have envied me the luxury of my bath on leaving it ! I cannot tell you how delightful-how grateful it was ! The adult baptism of the most devoted bigot could not be more enchanting. It was in truth the water of holinefs. It refreshed, it animated,-nay, infpired me ! I felt new life, and certainly was a very different being ! On landing I had been fick and comfortless, with my head dizzy, my knees trembling, and my whole frame enfeebled : but, after my ablution, I felt born a-new; my ftrength returned; I was no longer fick; a general glow of health and freshness was diffused over me, and I became the creature of a new world !

LETTER XIX.

my Me

grillin,

arthe

its, and

Dicels of

Would

Wretch.

ried me

Cannot

it was!

d bigot

vas id

ed, it

life,

ferent

com-

remb.

but

: IF

ct;1

百姓,

Te

313

Situation of Fort William Frederic. Indians, tigers, monkies, and parrots inhabit the furrounding woods. A town, to be called New Amflerdam, building upon the banks of the rivers Berbi/che and Kannye. Dutch garrifon-hofpital at Berbi/che fitted up by the author. Ninety-third regiment in garrifon at Fort William Frederic. Excellent difcipline of this regiment under Lieutenant-Colonel Gammell. Author afflicted with a complaint in bis legs. A foldier drowned in bathing. Remarks occafioned by the forrowful effect of the accident upon his comrades. Examination after a cafe of yellow fever. Author intends to purfue his inquiries refpecting the difeafed appearances. Written opinions regarding the yellow fever very difcordant.

Berbische, June 3.

HORT St. Andrew is fituated on the eaftern bank of the river Berbifche, oppofite to the ifland which graces its entrance. It appears ifolated from the colony, and from the world: no houfe nor building of any kind—nothing bearing the femblance of the abode of man is within fight of it: nor is there any way of efcaping from it, either on foot, in a carriage, or on horfeback; the river being the only private path, and the only public road. At the back of the fort is a deep and wild favanna, giving habitation to enormous inakes, alligators, loud-roaring frogs, and other reptiles. This naked wafte extends to a great diftance, and is bordered by dark forefts, which reach near to the fort, and preclude every view except of the water and the flat uncultivated In thefe woods wild Indians range favanna. wide and free. Sometimes also tigers are feen prowling from their deep shades; and our ears are daily and almost hourly faluted with the loud chattering of monkies, the horrid fcreaming of parrots, and the confused noise of numerous other inhabitants.

The fort is calculated for the accommodation of between two and three hundred men. The territory attached to it is fcarcely more extensive than the buildings, and the whole garrifon is confined to a circle of lefs than half a mile; the only promenade, without the gates, being from the barrack to the holpital, and back from the holpital to the barrack, a diftance of little more than a hundred yards. A fhort path has, indeed, been opened into the favanna, which forms a very limited walk, B

the

th þa

bra

田

W 部

the

bab

T

m

by

tor

10

İN

I

th

W

di

0

t

in the time of the dry feafon, only. A few of the government negroes, who are employed at the fort, have conftructed fmall huts at the back of the hofpital, which call to my remembrance the cottagers' cabins I have feen in the Highlands of Scotland. At thefe habitations, we fometimes witnefs the joyous dance and have our ears regaled with the found of the rude African drum, the rattle, and the banjar.

記載

HDCe,

动

TR

intel

IN

能聞

d 02

with

DOIL

10-ired

rcely polit

olpi

Cici,

10

Ik,

Beyond the immediate precincts of the fort we do not find any human abode, without making a journey of, at leaft, a mile and half by water. At that diftance is now forming the town of Amsterdam, the new capital of the colony. Between the fort and the town the river Kannye opens into the great Berbische river; and between the Kannye and the fort, the border of the parent river is still covered with the wild woods : but thefe are now doomed to the axe, and foon a road will be opened upon the bank of the river Berbifche to the river Kannye, and from the opposite fhore of that river to the town. This will be a great, and defirable improvement. It will at once relieve the wildness of the fituation, and fcenery of the fort, form a convenient promenade, for horfe and foot, and remove the dull folitude of the garrifon, by eftablishing a more ready intercourfe with the capital.

The town is yet in embryo. According to a plan formed for its conftruction it is to be built upon the angle, or peninfula, between the rivers Berbifche and Kannye, extending along the bank of the former. The land on which it is to be erected is in part cleared of its wood, and divided into lots ready for building; but, at prefent, only here and there a fcattered houfe is to be feen. Beyond the prepared land, and not half a mile from the Government houfe, the wild foreft ftill overhangs the river Kannye; but thofe powerful engines the deftructive axe and all-fubduing fire are now directed againft it, and confequently it cannot long remain—a foreft.

The whole fcenery at New Amfterdam, as well as at Fort William Frederic, betrays the infant ftate of the colony. The drearinefs of the land, juft robbed of its thick woods—the nakednefs that prevails around the Government houfe—the want of roads and pathsthe

all

CC

ne

112 fick

men

gan

tole

tion

ií

to

ton

in a inf

the pla

offe

ha

up

pre

W

the wild favanna—the heavy forefts; in fhort all that meets the eye conveys the idea of a country just emerging from its original wildness, into cultivation.

2 100

and an isto it

Rither

ing .

Real-

e mil

鼓脚

ed brock

动题

boult,

TIVET

08-

BOW

annot

rdan,

rathe

did

s-lit

the.

3-

Since my arrival in this colony my hours have been bufily occupied in attending the fick, and eftablifhing regulations and arrangements for their accommodation. We have a garrifon-hofpital, built by the Dutch, which is tolerably commodious, and, with a few alterations, may probably ferve for the prefent garrifon. The Hollanders, without any regard to climate, had preferved their European cuftom of placing the fick, two or three together, in a fpecies of box, with high enclofed fides, inftead of keeping them feparated, and giving them the advantages of air and cleanlinefs, by placing them upon bedfteads.

I have directed that all these confined and offensive bed-boxes should be removed, and have given orders to have some bedsteads made upon a new construction, which I trust will prove both convenient and comfortable. They will consist merely of sour short posts, those at the top a little longer than those at the bottom, and two fide rails, fitted together with wooden pins, and fo contrived as to be conveniently taken to pieces, and packed in a portable form, in cafe we fhould at any time with to remove them. They will be made of mahogany, a wood which is fo plentiful in these colonies as to be employed for every common use. A piece of strong canvals, stretched from fide to fide, will form the bedding ; a headboard will flide into grooves in the two upper posts, and the fide-rails will move up and down in an opening cut through them, and be faftened with pins, fo as to be at any time raifed or lowered at the head, without diffurbing the patient. When these are finished, I hope to fee a very complete hospital, and the unfortunate fick will at least have the comfort of being well lodged. Each will have his mahogany bed-ftead to himfelf, and men with different maladies will not be crowded together in filthy boxes, nor fhut up from the refreshing air.

The 93d Regiment is entrusted with the protection and defence of this colony; and I find the officers' mess one of the pleasantes I have yet met with. In gratitude I ought to 1811

助

tio

Art

nel

nor

V2

00 whe

but

in 1

obl

10 af

217 adi

bu

G

ty

h

21

tell you that the whole of the officers emulate their commander in kind and friendly atten-tions towards to me. Indeed I cannot but be ftrongly fenfible of the many marks of politenefs and civility with which I am daily honored. Most of the officers are men of cultivated manners. Among them are feveral of confiderable fortune, and fome of rank-men who are not only well-difciplined foldiers, but well-bred gentlemen ; being no less versed in the polished rules of civil, than in the austere observances of a military life. The general order and decorum which mark their conduct afford the furest indication of correct discipline, and offer the most convincing proof of the high advantage derived from ferving under a ftrict, but refpected commanding-officer. Colonel Gammell, while he fuffers no remiffion of duty, is affable and pleafant towards those under his command. He treats them as companions, and feeks to engage their affection and efteem. The foldiers confider him fevere; but he is their friend, and the majority of them are not infenfible of it. We frequently overhear the conversations and remarks of those about the hospital regarding him, and they always terminate very much to his credit; for if one 10 milt

200- 07

DELEV

trom

3 町市

0670

日1

ille.

ig the

00.50

tor-

to:

112-

with

the

eh.

山

AI

calls him rigorous or fevere, another inftantly contrafts what they regard as his better qualities, faying "why to be fure he is a little clofe upon us, and keeps us to it; but then you know it is for our own advantage; and, befides, how good he is to us when we are fick! You fee he keeps thefe doctors to their duty, too. He comes to fee us himfelf every day, and makes them give us plenty of every thing that's good for us; and 'tisn't all officers do that you know! Some of 'em are more afraid of an hofpital than a cannon ball, and never care whether we die or live !"

In this way their remarks usually go to the approval of the Colonel's conduct towards them ; and like good foldiers, they acknowledge their efteem for a commander who, by imposing a strict routine of duty, gives them cause to pride themselves upon a degree of pre-eminence in point of health and discipline.

Among the many ills of climate, I am now fuffering from a teazing eruption which has thrown itfelf out upon my legs; a complai

20

hat

Iti

wha

11 2

an

Pain mist

ing

goi

ing

and

Ina

bott

He

by

Wa

ver

cid

ed

th

30

ID

plaint which I find has lately been prevalent among the troops in this colony, although we had not obferved any thing of it at Demarara. It is more fevere than the prickly heat, but fomewhat of the fame nature ; and is, perhaps, only an aggravated degree of that difeafe. It creates an uneafy fenfation, not amounting to fevere pain, but fufficient to rob me of reft.

I am forry to note to you that we had the misfortune to lose one of the foldiers the morning after my arrival at Berbifche, from his going into deep water in bathing, and not being able to fwim. Several of his comrades, and alfo fome negroes, who faw him fink, Twam inftantly to the fpot, and dived to the bottom in fearch of him, but without fuccefs. He was drowned and probably carried away by the ftream. The next morning the body was found floating upon the furface of the river very near to the fort. I mention this accident the more particularly from having marked its effect upon the minds of the foldiers of the garrifon, and having obferved that the accidental death of an individual operates with, precifely, fimilar influence upon the feelings of men actually engaged in war, as of peo-

VQL. II.

2.20

ality .

UTER

615 n adi

THE

the a

10 fee

ENt us

B; ad

Son

than 2

e die or

$ 80

1 10-

y ac-

lander

动 upon

health

Im

山山

000=

ple occupied in the peaceful round of civil life. Moft perfons witnefs, or even read the account of any one being murdered, or killed by accident, with fentiments of horror and diftrefs; while the detail of hundreds being flain by the fword fcarcely excites a paffing regret.

Similar feelings are evinced by the foldiers! More of forrow and confternation prevailed in the garrifon, from the accidental lofs of a fingle comrade, than, probably, would have been expressed, by the fame men, had thousands been killed, before them, upon the field of battle! You will be able to explain how it is that death, in the one cafe, should beget fuch terrors, while, in the other, it fcarcely excites a momentary impression. We shudder with horror, and are loaded with grief at the loss of an individual; yet the deftruction of thousands fcarcely robs the bosom of a figh !

The fecond day after my arrival at Berbifche I had the unhappy opportunity of infpecting the body of a foldier who had fallen a facrifice to yellow fever. The appearances were fimilar to those I had witneffed 21

1

A

2

DC

th

1

010 dif

es

pe

an

We

rele

10 de

fro

bet

gra

alt

be up tin

ter

in the

Com

F aci

trefs

whe

曲星

OD NG

otal la

Work

en, het

pon th

explain

thould

er, it

We

with the de-

; bolom

at Ber

r of in-dillen

ppear-

nellei

at Demarara, except that, in the prefent inftance, there were fome ftriking marks of inflammation within the thorax. I shall further avail myfelf of the painful occafions that may occur, during my ftay in this colony, in order that we may compare the cafes with fuch as may be examined at Demarara during my abfence, and after my return, in the hope that we may, thereby, be enabled to judge, with more accuracy, regarding the general appearances, and the actual changes induced by the disease. "Heavens!" Methinks I hear you exclaim, "the man fpeaks as though he expected the grim tyrant to wield his fcythe amongst them, with wide-stretched arm." Would it were not fo! but, feeling that the relentless destroyer must sometimes defeat us, I should deem it a culpable neglect not to endeavour to reap those professional advantages from his ravages, which may enable us the better to defend others from his hungry I may candidly acknowledge that grafp. although, together with my colleagues, I have been zealous to procure every work written upon the fubject, and have devoted my fpare time to reading the various authors, and contemplating all that has been faid upon the dif-

Y 2

ease called Yellow fever, I have been hitherto very undecided, and have had my opinion altogether afloat, refpecting its nature. From experience, and examination of the difeased appearances, I may hope for more accurate elucidation, and perhaps be enabled to arrive at fome general maxim, which, in vain, I have looked for in the difcordant opinions of the ingenious men who have devoted their pens to this great—this interefting, and most important fubject.

41

4)

S

at nev

ficer

grad had

Ic

Du

ofh

325

- the

opiain

Fron

leafet

State

o mina

, I have

of the ir m

of in

R.

1181

5 9

IC

LETTER XX.

A Dutch "vendue" of flaves. Attended by the cohonifts like a public fair. Quite a holyday or gala-meeting. Manner of exposing the flaves by auction. Method of examining them. Their average value. Conduct of a negro who was put up to the hammer without his wife. Author conducts his friend from African flaves to free Indians. Joins a party of Indians near the river Kannye. Indifference of these people concerning the whites. Another party pack up their furniture and utenfils, and return into the woods. The women bear the burden. Indians engage to cut wood, but cannot be relied on. They have no industry—nor any desire to emulate the colonists. A party from the woods come down the river in a canoe to Fort St. Andrew.

Berbische, June.

SINCE writing to you laft I have been prefent at the fale of a Dutch cargo of flaves, at the new town of Amfterdam. Many of the officers went from the fort to witnefs this degrading fpectacle, and although my feelings had fuffered from a fimilar fcene at Demarara, I could not refift the novelty of obferving the Dutch mode of proceeding in this fad traffic of human cattle.

On arriving at the town, we were furprized to find it quite a holyday, or a kind of The fale feemed to have excited public fair. general attention, and to have brought together all the inhabitants of the colony. The planters came down from the eftates with their wives and families all arrayed in their gayeft apparel : the belles and beaux appeared in their Sunday fuits : even the children were in full-drefs; and their flaves decked out in holyday clothes. It was quite a gala-day, and greater numbers of people were collected than we had fuppofed to have been in the colony, Short jackets, with tawdry wide-flowered petticoats, and loofe Dutch flippers formed the prevailing drefs of the females. Scarlet, crimfon, and poppy, with all the bright colours used in a northern winter, rivalled a tropical fun, and reigned confpicuous in the flaming broad-patterned petticoat. To the inhabitants it feemed a day of feafting and hilarity, but to the poor Africans it was a period of heavy grief and affliction; for they were to be fold as beafts of burden-torn from each otherand widely difperfed about the colony, to wear out their days in the hopelefs toils of flavery.

aff

es

101

100

for er

Wer

abol

11 ata

the

WI

200 turi

that mol

arn

tri

bn

tor

of

The fair being opened, and the crowd affembled, these unpitied fable beings were exposed to the hammer of public auction. A long table was placed in the middle of a large room, or logis. At one end was feated the auctioneer : at the other was placed a chair for the negroes to stand upon, in order to be exposed to the view of the purchasers; who were fitting at the fides of the table, or standing about the different parts of the room. All being in readinefs, the flaves were brought in, one at a time, and placed upon the chair before the bidders, who handled and inspected them, with as little concern as if they had been examining cattle in Smithfield market. They turned them about, felt of them, viewed their shape and their limbs, looked into their mouths, made them jump and throw out their arms, and fubjected them to all the means of trial as if dealing for a horfe, or any other brute-animal. Indeed the indelicacy fhewn towards the poor defenceless Africans, by some of these dealers in their species, was not less unmanly and difgufting than it was infulting to humanity.

We were shocked to observe women in

Y 4

間

kint St.

exer-

at to

The

H.L

the room who had come to the fair for the exprefs purpofe of purchafing flaves. Nay, even children were brought to point the lucky finger, and the boy or girl, thus chosen, was bought by papa at the request of fuperstitious mama, to give to young massa or missy !

The price of these poor degraded blacks varied from 600 to 900 guilders, according to their age and strength, or their appearance of being healthy or otherwise. The boys and girls were fold for 600 or 700 guilders—some of the men strength as 900—and the women were knocked down at about 800.

In the courfe of the fale, a tall and robuft negro, on being brought into the auctionroom, approached the table with a fine negrefs hanging upon his arm. The man was ordered to mount the chair. He obeyed, though manifeftly with reluctance. His bofom heaved, and grief was in his eye. The woman remained in the crowd. A certain price was mentioned to fet the purchafe forward, and the bidding commenced : but on the flave being defired to exhibit the activity of his limbs, and to difplay his perfon, he funk his chi

in 112

Ne

eric

her

wil

obta

igita

mpt

10 II

his

He

10

tion

up

Was

TOW

and

fee

Gi

my

and

the tha

tak

apj

ASTIN

chin upon his breaft, and hung down his head in politive refulal-then, looking at the woman, made figns expressive of great distres. Next he pointed to her, and then to the chair, evidently intimating that he defired to have her placed by his fide. She was his chosen wife, and nature was correctly intelligible. Not obtaining immediate acquiescence, he became agitated and impatient. The fale was interrupted, and as he could not be prevailed upon to move a fingle muscle by way of exhibiting his perfon, the proceedings were at a fland. He looked again at the woman,-again pointed to the chair,-held up two fingers to the auctioneer, and implored the multitude in anxious suppliant gestures. Upon his countenance was marked the combined expression of forrow, affection, and alarm. He grew more and more reftlefs, and repeated figns which feemed to fay-" Let us be fold together. Give me my heart's choice as the partner of my days, then difpose of me as you please, and I will be content to wear out my life in the heavy toils of bondage." It was nature that spake-and her language could not be miftaken ! Humanity could no longer refift the appeal, and it was univerfally agreed that they

the second

T, the

finge

ought

Mama,

191 blacks

ingto

10 3335

Fs and

-lome

nd the

00.01

obult

tion-

- B8-

犯权 月

bered,

moloc

e 110-

price

THE

Ine

f his

his

fhould make but one lot. A fecond chair was now brought, and the woman was placed at the fide of her hufband. His countenance inftantly brightened. He hung upon the neck of his wife, and embraced her with rapture—then folding her in his arms, and preffing her to his bofom, he became compofed; and looked round with a fmile of complacency, which plainly faid " proceed !—I am yours, yours, or yours ! Let this be the affociate of my toils, and I am fatisfied." The bidding was renewed ! They exhibited marks of health and firength, and, quickly, the two were fold together for 1650 guilders.

"Enough !"—you will fay. "Give me no more of flaves, nor of flavery !"—For the prefent I obey, and, leaving the dufky Africans, proceed to introduce you to the coppercolored Indians; thus, leading you to the oppofite extreme of human life, and placing you among those of our species, who spurn alike the shackles of flavery, and the shavish trammels of society. I have lately had an opportunity of feeing several parties of the wild and naked inhabitants of these woods men who range, at large, in the fullest freedom

10

civi

Nen

the

Bul

Kat

party

poati

15 10

gage

rup

her

the

_[

cal

CO

up

WI

po

th dom of nature; neither fuffering their liberty to be effaced by bondage, nor abridged by civilization. Being one day at the town of New Amsterdam with the acting furgeon of the garrifon, we took a walk down to the Bufh *, on the border of the creek or river Kannye. Nigh to the water we met with a party of Indians, and observing that they made no attempt to avoid us, we went fo near to them as to mix in the group. We found them engaged in various purfuits; and remarked that none of their occupations fuffered any interruption from our prefence. A woman and her fon, who were in the river, continued to bathe before us, and feemed greatly to enjoy the water. Some were cutting wood for firing -fome collecting the Bufh-water † with a calabash, for the purpose of drinking, or of cooking-fome, with their pot of baked clay upon the fire, were stewing crabs, together

THE A

tompis

-I an

edici. ¹ The

d mate

Ve me

ricans,

opper the op placing fourn flavith

105-

tree-

with capficum and caffada juice into pepper pot—and fome were eating the raw tops of the mountain cabbage. To the latter I held * Upon this coast the forest is termed the Bufb.

+ The rain water which lodges in the low parts of the forest.

forth my hand implying a defire to partake of their repast. They immediately gave me a part ; and feemed pleafed on obferving me eat of it. A better fallad I never tasted. It was very crifp and white-much fuperior to the best lettuce or endive ; and, in flavour, somewhat refembling the filbert. Perceiving that they were not incommoded by our fociety. we remained a confiderable time attentively watching their proceedings; but their curiofity was not commenfurate with our own, for they fcarcely looked at us, or appeared to be, in any degree, interested concerning us. With indifference they faw us approach-they regarded us with indifference whilft we remained-and with indifference they witneffed our departure.

Two days after, I faw a much larger party of Indians, who came to the Government houfe to afk for rum, as a compensation for cutting down timber : and the fame evening, on walking towards the creek with fome of the officers, we met with a still more numerous body of these inhabitants of the fores, who had been employed by the Governor to cut down wood preparatory to clearing the ind vere

ofin

10 th

and a te ci

ind

of flo

aftro

ling

arried

made

look

had heir

BITY

e ma

TIVES

noth

of ab

law f

and

look

the f hem

heir

The since still

8 mer

lem

物值了

Killer D

ing for

I Kileta

ttenine

Cunta

forter

o be il

-they fail

TPE TA-

ineffed

er parti

mment

ion for vening

me d'

DUTEfireft,

or to 出出

land near the town for cultivation. They were busied in packing up all their little store of implements and utenfils, in order to return to their native abode in the woods. Rows and arrows, apparatus for preparing caffada, the clay cooking-veffel, hammocks, calabashes, and crab-baskets constituted their whole list of stores and furniture. All these were light in structure, or made of light materials, and, being arranged in compact order, were eafily carried on their backs. The women were made to bear the burden; while the men took no share of the load. One man, who had three wives, very neatly packed upon their backs, the whole of what he had to carry away; then taking up a long ftaff, he marched on before with lordly ftep, the wives following him in filent train, one after another. We walked gently behind a party of about forty as far as the creek, and there faw fome of them embark in their canoes, and paddle up the river, while the others took a narrow path leading into the depths of the foreft; and prefently the whole body of them were out of fight, leaving not a trace of their visit behind.

They come down, occasionally, in parties, and enter into an engagement to cut wood for a certain compensation; but no dependence can be placed upon them for a fingle day, for they fometimes pack up all belonging to them, and return fuddenly and unexpectedly into the woods; from whence they come not again for feveral months, perhaps not at all. They are naturally indolent, and, being tenacious of freedom, they become impatient of the reftraint imposed by daily labour; wherefore, they haftily caft it off, and fly back to the woods to range in their native liberty, which knows no bounds, nor controul. From poffeffing a degree of expertness in the felling of timber, they might be highly useful in forwarding the cultivation of the colony, but they have no fense of industry, nor do they feem to acquire the leaft difposition to emulate the colonists ina ny of their purfuits :-- content with finding food and pepper in the woods, they have no ambition to become planters. Cotton is not neceffary to protect their naked fkins; nor are their appetites fo refined as to require either coffee or fugar.

334

面

Ayle

the

jurn1

Befo

the 515m

Hide

moft

and

Oa

mills

Tild

a bu

ſkip

two perc

plu

ing

ing.

balk

At the fort we have also had a visit from an Indian family, who came to us in the true ftyle of native accommodation-exhibiting the full equipage of the family canoe, and forming a scene of high interest and novelty. Before the canoe reached the fort, we observed the long black hair and naked fkins of the man, his two wives, and several children, who were all flowed about the veffel with the frictest attention to equipoife-trimming it most exactly. The canoe was large, and, in addition to the family, was loaded with cedar and other kinds of wood for fale or barter. On the top of the cargo appeared a ferociouslooking animal, fetting up his briftles like the quills of the porcupine. It was a fpecies of wild hog caught in the forest, and hence called a bush-bog. A fmall monkey was likewife fkipping about the canoe. At one fide fat two very fine parrots, and on the other was perched a large and most beautiful mackaw, exhibiting all the rich fplendour of his gay plumage. On the canoe arriving at the landing place, the bow and arrows, the clay cooking-veffel, calabashes, hammocks, and crabbaskets, were all brought into view, and we gazed on the whole, as forming a very com-

The second

Woll

Dende

day, je

othen

into y

not vite

lacion d

f the a-

therefore

s to th

y, which

iom poly

elling of irward-

t they

eem to ate the conten

WOODS

anters

r paked

edulo

plete and firking specimen of original equipage, and accommodation. The whole family —the household apparatus—the bow and arrows—the canoe and paddles—the hammocks —in short all the furniture and implements for cooking, for sheeping, for shooting, fishing, and travelling were here moved together in one compact body, so as to render it indifferent to them, whether they should return to the home from whence they came, or take up a new abode in any other part of the forest.

The state of the second state of the second

LI MY WARD WAY THE WARD THE WARD STATE IN

Altent

Ara of L

der

Rout condu Ma Gui ming danti evera

ad ot

nd ha

Go

hole

nt ex

they .

TOL

$37

LETTER XXI.

is the colony, but I have to isment that unies at the holpital will not allow me to

Olefami

w and mmoci

plemen

18. Hing

gether

t indiffer

Teturo

or take u

le forett.

Politenefs and hospitality of Governor Van Battenburg towards the author. The Government-bouse. Its situation and construction. Excursion up the creek orriver Kannye. Estate of Mynheer Ongre. Its produce in coffee—in cocoa. Number and value of the slaves. Mode of preparing cocoa and chocolate. Food, drink, plates, dishes, medicine, and clothing all grow in the fields. Berbische widely remote from headquarters. Uncertainty of receiving news from the army. Route by which it commonly reaches Berbische. Brave conduct of a black corps at St. Lucie. The gallant Colonel Malcolm falls at their head. Uncertain of remaining in Guiana, the author directs his letters to be sent to St. Domingo. Garrison not unmindful of the 4th of June. Enchanting echo through the heavy forests.

Berbische, June.

HAVE lately had opportunities of making feveral boat excursions, with Colonel Gammell and others of the officers, to New Amsterdam, and have had the honor of being prefented to Governor and Madame Van Battenburg, of whose hospitable and polite attentions I cannot express myself in sufficient terms of praise. They have kindly invited me to take up my abode at the government-house, during my stay in the colony, but I have to lament that my duties at the hospital will not allow me to avail myfelf of fo flattering and agreeable an accommodation.

VOL. II.

fron

plan

partie

tation

and

thec

minis

Dutch

ome

rood

to ta

and foup

takin

the e vield

cotto

eftin

10,0 ироп

50l.

and who

and

coff

The government-house is, beyond all comparison, the handsomest and most spacious edifice I have yet feen in South America. It is built near to the river, with one front commanding the water-the other the town. At the entrance is a handfome flight of steps, leading to a fpacious hall, which extends acrofs the building, throughout its whole depth. At the upper end of the hall an open double stair-cafe leads up to another large room, which alfo runs acrofs the centre of the building, having the windows of one end looking to the town, and those of the other to the river. At the fides of this room, and opening into it, are the different apartments occupying the four angles of the building.

From this construction a free current of air is preferved in the great central room, and the all the other apartments, by communicating with it, are kept pleafantly cool.

A few days ago I joined a small party from the fort, in an excursion to some of the planters' estates up the river Kannye, and was particularly gratified in viewing the rich plantation of Mynheer Ongre. We breakfasted and fet off at an early hour, in order to have the day before us, and arrived at this gentleman's abode just as he was fitting down to his Dutch breakfast of very excellent crab foup, fome fine fish, a tongue, and a variety of other good things. It is the cuftom of the Dutch to take coffee in bed, or as foon as they rife, and to make a more substantial breakfast of foup and folids about ten o'clock. After partaking of this repaft, we were conducted about the eftate, which is rich and well cultivated, yielding abundance of coffee, cocoa, and fome cotton. The annual produce of coffee is estimated at 140,000lb. weight, and of cocoa 10,000lb. Two hundred flaves are employed upon the eftate, calculated at the value of from 50l. to 100l. each. The house is handsome and spacious-the plantation extensive, and the coffe elogis upon a very large scale: the whole exhibiting the appearance of fertility and opulence. Having visited the fields of coffee, and the cocoa plantation, we next went

Z 2

1111

WELL

ablen

Tel J

(pacient tica.

at con

11. A

of Aeps

esten

le depti-

1 doeb

1, which

ilding,

to the

and:

into it

ing the

rrent of

in and itating

to the logis, where we faw the cocoa feeds exposed for drying, preparatory to their being made into chocolate; and, alfo, great quantities of coffee undergoing the last process, previous to being fent to market. It was the first extensive plantation of cocoa I had seen, and, in witneffing the mode of preparing this into chocolate, I could not but notice that what is commonly used as cocoa, in England, is only the shell or outer covering of the seed-the kernel, or true cocoa being used for making the chocolate. If, therefore, you fhould with to drink cocoa, rememember you can only have it good by boiling chocolate thin and weak, the common cocoa being no_other than the husks or fweepings, which cannot be used in preparing the chocolate.

At another eftate we were regaled with fruit, and fome pines were put into the boat, when we were going away. Here we alfo pulled from the trees fome calabafhes of uncommon fize, to take home with us to ufe by way of bowls and platters. We likewife gathered fome roots of jalap from under the hedges, and obferved the ipecacuanha growing in the fields. Thus, you find, that however

3

bu

fru

fie

Jeft

ind fur

qual

nhi

to

bil

Ce

COL

inte

und

tha

20 by ga

pri

Fr

tr

ta

N aist a

T here

antite

evious

-79

ala

is inte

what is

is only

t-ite

ting the wild to y have

Weak

in the

ed in d with

; boat,

re allo

of un-

uleby kerile

r the wing

WETE

fhut from the world, we can neither want fruit, food, nor phyfic; for the hedges, the fields, and the gardens amply fupply them all —drink, clothing, and condiment we alfo collect from the trees, the plants, and the bufhes; and, in the calabafh, bountiful nature has even furnifhed us with plates, bafons and difhes.

We are here fo removed from the headquarters of the army, that I fcarcely know which would be moft reafonable for you to expect news of its operations from Berbische, or for me to ask tidings of its proceedings from England ! No direct or regular communication is established, and the little intercourfe continued between us is highly uncertain and precarious. The intelligence that reaches us is most commonly accidental, and in its circuitous route, it is new-modelled, by fuch a variety of reporters, and becomes fo garbled and disfigured, that too frequently it preferves scarcely any features of accuracy. From the army it travels to fome ship, and is transported to Barbadoes. There, perhaps, it takes a long reft, or wanders over the island. Next it is picked up in the ftreets, in a diftorted form, by fome trading captain, or his failors, and carried to Demarara. There it ftrays again throughout the colony, and is tortured and mangled, until, its mutilated remains being thrown into fome chance boat, it is finally fent to receive the rites of fepulture at Berbifche !

We have just heard that the troops of the black corps, which we faw at Barbadoes, have behaved with great spirit and bravery at St. Lucie: but that the gallant Colonel Malcolm, having unhappily been killed at the head of them, they were repulfed, from an attack of the Vigie, at the very moment when victory was declaring in their favor. It is alfo faid that the 37th regiment has fuffered very confiderably; but the gazette will have given you a more correct account of the attack and its refult long before this letter can reach you; still it may ferve to shew how late and defective the intelligence comes to us from the great body of the army. It is further reported that General Whyte is gone down to St. Domingo, and that the detachment of the hospital department, remaining in these colonies, is foon to follow. This confirms the uncertainty of my fituation, and renders it difficult for me 10 T

friet

addi

Don

oroti

lent

arrit

1 ments

hall,

Was

feu

the

ame

Bum

and

are T

One

int

mee

extr

the

wit

and

Ten

Lett

adi

tilat

boal

ture

1 of the

is, han

7 at St

alcola,

ead of

tack of p

victory -

o find

con-

TOU

dits

YOUL

id dem the orted

, Do-

sipital

R. B.

aty

me

to receive tidings from you or any other friends in England. Perhaps it were beft to addrefs to me at the head-quarters of the St. Domingo army; then I may chance, fome day or other, to receive the letters; but if they are fent to Guiana, I may be relieved before they arrive, and they may never overtake me.

Although we had not the usual incitements of a fumptuous dinner and a splendid ball, we were not unmindful that the 4th inft. was a day of rejoicing. The troops fired a feu de joie ; and a royal falute founded through the thick woods from the fort, and from an armed fchooner which was lying in the river. Bumpers were filled to his majefty's health, and we were merry and happy as you who are revelling in all the luxuries of London. One treat was added to our feast, which, even in that all-fupplying place, you would fail to meet with, and which I know would have extremely delighted you :- viz. the report of the cannon through the deep woods around us, with the shrieks and cries of parrots, monkies, and the other wild inhabitants on hearing it : and, above all, the enchanting echo which was returned to us across the river. Never did found more delight the ear ! I had liftened each night, with rapture, to the folemn reverberations of the evening gun, and was quite prepared to watch the effect of a more heavy, firing. It was fublime, and wanted only the stillness of evening, and the timid rays of the moon to render it celeftial. Iffuing from the cannon, it hung in murmurs among the woods; and being foftened by the water, echoed in notes which thrilled the frame with fenfations of delight; indeed fo grand was the effect, that one might almost pardon the enthusiast who should figh for an action by moonlight, in order to enjoy the foul-tranfporting echo of thefe wild and endless forefts. On escaping from the fort, the found feems first to cross a part of the water, and rolls foftly through the island of trees, at the river's mouth : from thence it traverfes the remainder of the wide ftream, and on reaching the thick woods of the oppofite fhore, it fuddenly echoes, as if abruptly repulfed into the water. Afterwards it breaks through the forefts, and is heard in rumbling undulation, as if interrupted in its course, till at length its awful reverberations steal their hollow way through the diftant woods in heavy-rolling thunder.

²⁴

Ner

I

has 加

协

-

1

1. 1

ini Po

胡

1

-

0

De

of 100

172

LETTER XXII.

News reaches Berbische of the capture of the island of St. Lucie. A fentinelon guard destroyed by the " Coup de Sohel." Marked cafe of yellow fever in a grenadier, named The Savanna near fort Willam Frederic in -Llewellyn. habited by alligators. A fentinel, frightened by the approach of one of those amphibia in the night, fires and alarms the garrifon. The alligator an animal of great strength and hideous form : Is Brongly protected ogainst external injury : is peculiarly susceptible of life; His flesh used by the negroes as food. Wifit of a party to the governor's and Mr. Blair's fete given to the flaves at the government-house. Author's reflections on the scene. The dance interrupted by a party of the fons of Bacchus. Humorous remarks of the governor indicative of his correct knowledge of the English language. Politeness of the governor and Madame Van Battenburg, to the officers. Sumptuous entertainment at Mr. Blair's. Author visits the "Yaw-house." Wretched appearance of the objects afflicted with this hideous malady. A distant excurfion projected, in which the Author hopes to join.

Berbische, June.

On the 10th inft. a floop arrived from Demarara bringing us news of the furrender of St. Lucie : but flating only the fimple fact, unconfirmed by any authentic details. Still we cheerfully hail the tidings, not doubting

1 may

11 175

128 01

e hean

the the

Title

tion th

题山

12 TUET

派动 d with

the a.

ation h

nl-trail

forelts

leems

rolls

Tiver's

email-

ingth

water

ion.

而 ugh

Th

but the conquest has been honorable to our countrymen and comrades.

Since I wrote to you laft we have had the misfortune to lofe one of the foldiers by the difeafe called coup de foleil, or ictus folis. The poor man was on guard and flationed as fentinel to take his turn of duty for two hours at the gate of the fort, but before this fhort period had elapfed he was fuddenly feized, fell down, and expired at his poft. The day was exceffively hot, and the perpendicular rays of the fun fell in their fulleft ardor upon his head. Others of the men have likewife experienced the difeafe, but we have only, in this inftance, feen it fatal.

I may alfo mention to you a very marked and melancholy cafe of yellow fever which has occurred at fort William Frederic, affording a ftriking example of the nature of this afflictive malady. A grenadier named Llewellyn, a handfome and well made man, of robust figure, was brought into the hospital, complaining only of an uneasy fensation about the region of the ftomach, which although indefcribable, conveyed to him an early affurace

which

plain

alare

The state

lid

1000

DOFFEL

reffio

Hore

n hi

ack (

with lymj

the a ayne

lím fi

LETEO

he ft fond and o

of hi

tack

ave hin

eliha

to man

ad the

withe

La Vie

ODECH

o here

is there

tel, fel

Liv was ravsof

is head,

riented

Hance,

mark-

which afford-

his af-

Ile.

san, d olpitat,

rogh

fur-

ance of the fatal tendency of the difease, with which he was attacked. On afking him to explain his complaints, and the feelings which fo alarmed him, he replied-" I feel that I shall die." and placing his hand over his ftomach, faid he had " fomething there" that would foon kill him. We used all the means in our power to divert him from this defponding impreffion-but in vain ! nothing he faid could reftore him, for he felt the hand of death upon him. He evidently laboured under an attack of the diforder, termed yellow fever ; but, with the exception of this fatal fenfation, no fymptom was prefent which could have led to the apprehension of immediate danger. At mynext visit on the following morning, I found him fitting up, and apparently fomewhat relieved; but on my asking him how he was, he still replied-" Dying ! I feel that I shall foon be gone."-He continued perfectly rational and collected until the next day; when, alas ! death but too furely confirmed the accuracy of his predictions. From the moment of attack he had felt affured, that nothing could fave him ! The indefcribable feeling he complained of, feemed to induce a rapid exhaustion of the vital powers, while it formed, not only the leading feature—but almost the only fymptom of the difease.

atid

10

101

tha

cre

ett

gree

AWS

trab

mic

of 211

IV 2

tis

ing

the

and

Arc

ma

lim

ea

tion

い間

Upon examination, we found the fame rednefs of the inner coat of the ftomach, which we had obferved in all cafes of yellow fever, and in the lungs were fome ftrong marks of recent inflammation.

I mentioned in a former letter that alligators were in the lift of our neighbours at Fort William Frederic. They abound in the adjoining favanna, and in their journey down a fmall muddy ftream to the river, they often vifit the foffe furrounding the fort; and fometimes are even bold enough to afcend the works, and peep like fpies from the ramparts. One of them lately alarmed a fentinel in the night, by fuddenly approaching him as he was ftanding at his post within the fort. The foldier, terrified at fo unexpected a vifitor, in the impulse of furprise fired upon the animal, and fpread an alarm throughout the gar-The guard inftantly turned out, and all rison. the troops were roufed, and flying to arms, in the idea that the enemy was about to land-But lo! the frightened crododile retreated, and the foldiers, instead of fighting, had only to return to their beds !

is the sin for a confiderability le lan

at ally

3 at h

the is down

ey often

; 200

alcend

ram-

ninel

g him

he fort.

vilitor,

ie am-

10 921.

andal

min

ated,

We have fince had one of these frightful amphibia killed, and I may venture to fay, that a more hideous specimen of the animal creation, can fcarcely be met with. It appeared the most forbidding of nature's forms. The green eyes, the fharp teeth and monftrous jaws, the ftrong waving tail, the hard impenetrable fkin, and the fhort thick legs, and formidable claws, together with the circumstance of its crawling fo near the earth, render the alligator a real object of horror. He is ftrongly armed both for attack and defence: while his fcaly horn-like skin, ferves as a protecting coat of mail, he posseffes, as an assailant, the devouring grafp of his fhark-like teeth, and the power of striking a blow with his strong shell-like tail, which might knock a man down, or fracture his legs .- His short limbs are also of peculiar strength, and are each armed with four powerful claws.

With all this ftrength of form, and of action, he is an animal fingularly tenacious of life: indeed, by the common means of deftruction it is impoffible at once to deprive him of animation; for however cut, beaten or torn, ftill figns of vitality remain for a confiderable time. It is only with extreme difficulty that he is conquered in the firft inftance, and—even when fubdued—to kill him is ftill a tafk. Unlefs at certain parts, a mufquet ball will not penetrate his fkin, and a ftrong blow fcarcely does him any injury. If cut, or torn in pieces, and left to appearance dead, he, for a long time after, exhibits marks of vitality upon being touched.

The one we deftroyed was first shot in the head, but he was still a most dangerous and active enemy, and had nearly seized one of the negroes by the leg. Notwithstanding his being shot, he remained unfubdued until he had received many severe blows behind the neck; and for long after this he struck very powerfully with his tail. Further attempts were made to kill him, but, as late as two hours from the time he was conquered, he pressed my hand with considerable force, on taking hold of his claw; for several hours longer, he continued to seven the moment when it became extin ba

th

C2

WI

hi

in 2

I

Ia

pr

山

01

1

T

1

tin &. I had intended that you fhould fome day have seen his formidable coat of armour, and for that purpose, I had given directions to have it carefully preferved; but from waiting to know that the poor animal was actually dead, before we ftripped him of his fkin, we unluckily loft him, and I shall only be able to shew you his Having left him near the hospital claws. while we walked into the fort, the negroes took an opportunity of stealing him away; and on returning we found our alligator chopped in pieces, and flewing into foup-the flaves anticipating the mefs, as a delicious feaft. The meat was white, and not unlike the flefh of a rabbir, and were it not for the common prejudice attaching to its form, perhaps, as food, the alligator might not be found inferior to other amphibious animals. Poffibly it might be equal to our high-flavored turtle, or the more delicate frogs of France.

We have lately made a party from the fort, and fpent two most pleasant days—one at the governor's—the other with Mr. Blair, a rich planter, refiding at a short distance down the coast on the opposite shore of the river.

adia.

Ora, St.

letins

hein

Ween

封痛

DELE

aly deal

ES, 21

lace.

bein

hot in erous

one

ding

until

d the

Tery

were effei

he

-25

At the governor's a dance and fête were given in the evening to the flaves, and we were extremely delighted to fee with how much of real happiness they enjoyed themselves. They affembled in the great hall of the governmenthoufe, having a violin, with the fife and drum for their band. Both negroes and mulattoes danced with an animation and vivacity which bespake them free from care. The governor, his lady, his fifter, feveral gentlemen of the colony, and our party from the fort attended as fpectators, and were all amufed and gratified in witneffing this merry dance of flaves. While looking upon them at this joyous moment, I bent a thought to Europe, and wished that the tattered and indigent fons of liberty could feel as happy.

Madame Van Battenburg, who is fludious to promote the comfort of her fable throng, cordially participated in their mirth, and by her cheerfulnefs and vivacity added new wings to the feftive hours. Reflecting that the peafants who toil in freedom for their daily bread, have not within their reach fuch complete and cheerful relaxation as was procured to thefe contented flaves, I became fixed in contemplati fort

froi

hul

曲部( harg

burg

isto

32 rerfor

greet

TOM

hibi

mint

in pr

giee which

peop

ing t

glad pur

leec

plation of the fcene before me, until the comforts and advantages had nearly concealed from my mind the bitter ills of flavery. But bufy recollection brought to my remembrance that every flave had not Governor Van Battenburg for a mafter, nor Madame Van Battenburg, for a friend ! for fuch fhe truly is to those who ferve her in bondage.

Until now I had only feen the flaves perform the rude African dance upon the open green, and had not imagined them capable of moving with fuch order as they here exhibited in regular country dances .- Even minuets, to our furprize, were led down, in precise and stately step, and with a degree of ease and gracefulnels of movement which is feldom witneffed among the common people of England. Mirth and gaiety sparkled in every eye, and animated every countenance. It was pleasure unalloyed, and, yielding to the glowing impulse of nature, each gladdened foul drank in full draughts at the purest fountain of enjoyment. They were indeed happy-happy flaves !

In the course of the evening a circumvol. 11. A A

ME

a the bible

They

ent.

III

2218 thich

nor,

the nded

tified

Vhile

acot

that ald

HIS.

uş,

by

Igs.

2-

ad,

1

29

-

ftance occurred which had nearly interrupted the order and harmony of the fête ; but it terminated with only affording to the governor a pleafant and facetious opportunity of convincing us of his intimate knowledge of the English language. In the midst of the dance three officers of our army and navy, who were not of the party invited, and who had been devoting rather too freely to the rofy god, came reeling, abruptly, into the hall. One of them, with the bufy officiousness of inebriety, infifted upon introducing the others to Madame Van Battenburg : but he had forgotten his English !---or, in the confidence inspired by wine, was ambitious to difplay his knowledge of French; and therefore addreffed her only in the latter language, speaking it fo incorrectly that it was difficult to comprehend what he faid, or rather what he meant to fay. Alarmed at his reeling and flammering, Madame Van Battenburg begged to be protected left he should tumble against her; and true enough, at this moment, the poor captain fell fprawling at her feet, and narrowly escaped beating her down. After much exertion, and with fome affistance, he again rose up, and supported himself upon his legs. He had now to

Bak

len

der

ree

her

burg

on ioim

Mada

潮 m P

denty

ftum

them

ihree

thees

they c haces

prefer

laves

both t

depriv

7, 1

he ba

Irpri

Wher

mild!

make his apologies, which were likewife attempted in broken French-too bad to be understood. During all this his companions were reeling about the hall, but, regardless of them, he continued to perfecute Madame Van Battenburg with his bad French, and even infifted upon either her or Mademoifelle Van Battenburg joining with him in the dance, "Venez, venez, Madame," faidhe -" il faut dar fer - voulez vous viens danser avec moi ?" but finding he could not prevail with either of the ladies, he fuddenly turned from them, and happening to ftumble again upon his companions, each of them feized a fable damfel, and dragging their three ebon partners into the row, took their places in the dance. But it foon appeared that they could perform only reels, and the country dances of the blacks being interrupted by their prefence, it became necessary to lead away these flaves of the bottle, in order to prevent both the fpectators, and the dancers from being deprived of their amusement; and accordingly, with fome trouble they were led back to the barrack. Madame Van Battenburg feeling furprifed at our intoxicated captain speaking to her only in bad French, mentioned it as remarkable, that he did not utter one fyllable of

AA2

355

No. of Line

uting.

VEILO

of con

of the

1.2.2.2

in oth

al beer

id god to lad

aebien,

s to Ma

torgon

Ted her

fo inreheat

to far

ing, Mar

rotected

ed mu

tin fe

eliant

ja na

dup.

now He

English : when the governor, on hearing the observation, replied, no! my dear, it is not at all strange that Captain ---- fhould not fpeak English to night! on the contrary it is highly proper and correct: you know he is a British officer ! True! said Madame Van Battenburg, and that is the very reason why he should speak English ! No, no, no ! my dear, refumed the governor, that is expressly the reafon why he fhould not-" It would be difloyal in a British officer to clip the King's English." On another occasion this agreeable Dutchman gave a fimilar proof of his close acquaintance with our language. One day as they were fitting over the bottle, he and an officer of the navy debated respecting fome property, which the governor confidered as private, and the officer as public. The former urged that it was facred, and might not be confifcated; while the latter infifted that it was colonial, and ought to be condemned for the benefit of the captors. Each maintained his opinion with amicable warmth-neither yielding to the other. In the evening a ball was given to the party at the governor's house ; and in the mirthful dance, the officer, perhaps a little elevated by the debate, or the bottle,

6

A A 2

356 took falut

Aant

capta

何

have acqui

dire

relpi

10 COL

enter

mm

Derot

telp

peal

at }

they the

E Wit

Of fred

s him

ie ise

Bar-

前任

V det

the rea.

Hoyal

English,"

Dutch

acquain

as the n officer

operty,

te, and

d that ficated;

for the otained

3 2.11

wafe ;

erhapi

bottly

took Madame Van Battenburg in his arms and faluted her. The governor obferving it, inftantly called out with emphasis-" Very well captain ! Do you not confider that private property either ?" Perhaps few foreigners, who have not refided a long time in England, have acquired a more just idea of the spirit of our language, The governor is a pleafant wellinformed man, and a focial companion. His address is genteel; his manners cultivated. He is hospitable and friendly : his mind is highly liberal, and in his conduct he obtains general respect and esteem. His door is always open to his friends : the officers are frequently invited to his table, and he kindly allows them to confider his houfe as a home.

Madame Van Battenburgh is cheerful and entertaining. Her difpolition is lively and animated; fhe fings very fweetly, and in converfation is fprightly and affable. She generoufly emulates the governor in his friendly hofpitality, and, together, they make their abode pleafant and familiar to us all.

1300

There being no coffee-house nor tavern at New Amsterdam, and the government-A A 3 houfe being most conveniently fituated at the landing place on the bank of the river, we are happy to avail ourfelves of the liberal offer of the governor, and to make his mansion our resting place, and point of rendezvous, in our occasional visits to the town.

To fpeak of the fumptuous day we had at Mr. Blair's were to throw an air of doubt upon my former notes regarding the paucity of frefh provisions in these colonies. But let it be remembered that individuals of large eftate may find the means of procuring a most ample fupply, for their own table, although the colony may not furnish an overplus to fend to the public market : and, indeed, at Berbische fresh animal food is provided for the troops more frequently than we have yet been able to procure it at Demarara.

Mr. Blair is one of the most opulent planters in these colonies, and, not difliking the good things of life himself, he has affembled them at his place of residence in sufficient supply to enable him to treat his friends with the most sumptuous liberality. He is ger tat

112

fre

We

112

100 bail

101

be

01

OCE

of.

att

'n

山

int

pla

bet

de

Ata

the 211

AC

A LANS

Without

offeren

C 110 PC

U CUL

we had-

But

y here

uting t

12, 21

over-

1, ins pro-

than

at Da

puleo

iliking

aller.

fiffi=

Heil

generous and focial, and the riches of his table are difpenfed with all the bounty of his nature. Inftead of a plain cottage juft rifing from the wild woods of an infant fettlement, we might have fancied ourfelves feafting in one of the holpitable manfions of old England, nay, in fome chartered hall, even, of voluptuous London itfelf.

The houfe is a compact dwelling, neatly built of plain wood, offering in its exterior nothing to attract the ftranger's eye, nor to befpeak the many luxuries within. It stands on the border of the fea, open to the wide ocean. Before it, is an extensive and flat beach of firm fand, forming a pleafant ride or walk at the fide of the water. The eftate is quite in its infancy, being recently formed out of the rude foreft, and indeed only now breaking into cultivation. In great part of it the young plants of cotton are just shooting from the foil between the remaining flumps of trees lately Yet notwithstanding the infant destroyed. state of this hospitable home, it offers more of the good things of life, than I had feen at any other place fince leaving England. Having no market in the colony, each planter's abode must necessarily furnish all within itself. No aid can be had from the butcher's, or the baker's, none from the green-grocer's, or poulterer's,the pastry-cook's, or confectioner's. No.fuch perfons are here known, and hence the whole of the entertainment must be the immediate production of the eftate: every necessary, every comfort, and every luxury that is given, or enjoyed, must be found in the house or upon the plantation, yet in fuch plenty were they ferved at this prolific home, that one might have fancied a Covent-garden, or a Leadenhall market to have been near. From all we had previously feen in the colonies, it had been wild to have conjectured that fo complete a collection could have been affembled.

AA4

A large and very handfome boat was fent for our conveyance, having an awning at the ftern to protect us from the fun; and we were rowed acrofs the mouth of the river by eight of the fineft flaves of the eftate, who pulled us on with furprifing fpeed. At the landing place another party of flaves were in attendance with horfes in readinefs to conduct us to the houfe. The fun was extremely powerful, but we had a pleafant ride about a mil

of

ho

CO

in dia

peru

inon

TEL

din

Ate

CT

til

2

CO

qu

28

1

mile and a half through fields of cotton and of plantains; the negroes running at the horfes fides, according to the cuftom of the country, as fast as we chose to ride.

The state

thole

1.80+

[2]]

2:37

田田

205

the

COM-kd.

Was

-IWE

ĺm;

the late,

TER

1-

y

2

361

Hock and Seltzer water were presented immediately on our arrival, and the time until dinner was most gratefully occupied in the perusal of a packet of newspapers, just arrived from England : than which perhaps a greater treat could not have been offered us. For dinner we had excellent foup, with boiled fifh, ftewed fish, and fish in pie-alfo turtle, and crabs, most exquisitely dressed, and forming two uncommonly rich and high-feasoned dishes. We had likewise a side of lamb, a fine goofe, a large well-flavored ham, and a variety of other good things. Pies, tarts, and a well compounded trifle followed, amidst a complete courfe of fweets. The cook was quite a proficient, and did every justice to the feast, the whole dinner being well dreffed, and a's well ferved. We had afterwards pines, shaddocks, melons, water-lemons, and multitudes of other fruits. Nor were the fluids of the banquet less amply administered. Hock, Claret, Madeira, and Port wines were in liberal use. We had also Seltzer and Spa waters, likewise bottled small beer, ale, and porter, with brandy, rum, Hollands, noyeau, and other liqueurs—all in supply sufficient for a lord, mayor's feast.

After our good eating and drinking we took a walk about the plantation, and found every corner of it equally plenteous as the table and the cellar. Such a ftore of living ftock, both large and fmall, I had not feen upon any eftate fince my arrival in the Weftern world. Here were large herds of cows, oxen, fheep, and goats ; droves of hogs, horfes, and mules; flocks of geefe, turkies, ducks, Guinea fowls, and chickens. A more gratifying affemblage of domestic plenty could fcarcely be found in any country. Among the flock I fhould not omit to mention a pen of living turtles kept in readiness for the table :---whole droves of crabs were alfo running about near the door ;--- and the neighbouring fea is, at all times made tributary to the board. Several hundreds of negroes employed at work, or moving from place to place, improved the variety of the fcene; while they added effentially to the value of the home-for, like the

362 catt

曲

I

如

FARE

lio

tu

tra

Our

DUC

iem

all

gi

W

10

IH

PAF

20 cr

00 po

62

0

0

10

1

cattle, thefe are always included in calculating the flock of the effate. Together with the multitude of domestic productions at this allsupplying abode were likewife fome of the more rare and curious specimens-fuch as the small lion,-monkey-and the large powys, or wild turkey of the woods; also the trumpeter, the fly-catcher, and feveral other uncommon birds. Our walk was highly gratifying, and offered much to excite, as well as to interest our contemplations. We extended it to the fea beach, and found the fand flat and firm as a bowlinggreen, and of a dark brown colour, whence it was neither liable to be blown into the eyes, nor to offend them by its brightnefs. A cool and conftant fea-breeze adds to the many advantages of this fituation : it is always free and pure, there being nothing to impede or contaminate it between the house and the After it grew dark a rubber was proocean. posed as the amusement of the evening-but cards had no power to attract the majority of us from the dear unfinished Times and Chronicle. We flept in hammocks according to the common mode of the country, and a most excellent and convenient mode it is, for a very large party may be thus accommodated

T

The

Ot

lord

ig we

the

Suit

Wet.

COW

iotles,

ildig.

iy.

rely

ckI

ring

thole

gear

tall

reral

1, 11

tie

1-

the

in a fmall houfe, it being only neceffary to hang up as many hammocks as there are perfons. Neither beds, fheets, nor blankets are required, for the hammock includes them all, and ferves as bedftead, mattrefs, and coverlet into the bargain.

surkey of the woods; allo the tramperer, the The next morning I role at an early hour, and made a walk before breakfast, to vifit what is here termed the " yaw-houfe ;" a kind of hospital placed at a distance from all the other buildings, for the accommodation of fuch of the negroes as may be afflicted with that hideous and diftreffing malady-the yaws. Here I faw fome of the most striking pictures of human mifery that ever met my eye-fad objects of compassion, and difgust ! Notto commiserate their fufferings were impoffible, but their offenfive and wretched appearance creates a fenfe of horror on beholding them. Of all the unfightly difeafes which the human body is heir to, this is perhaps the worft. Imagine to yourfelf a group of meager fickly-looking negroes, with their bones almost piercing their unhealthy obfuscate skins, and their bodies befet with ragged noxious fores, and ulcerous excrescences, and you will have some idea of

ho

in tal

201

in piti

120 tren

fur dr

p ß

bo

CI

10 th

J

П

of the miserable inhabitants of a yaw Congregated disease, crowded sufferhouse. ing, and accumulated wretchedness are spectacles common to the eyes of medical men; and I may add that they have been long familiar to mine! Yet the effect of this scene was too impreffive ever to be effaced from the eye of my mind. Some of these diseased and truly pitiable objects were crouching upon their haunches round a smoky fire, some stood trembling on their fadly ulcerated limbs, others, fupporting themfelves by a large flick, were dragging their wretched bodies from place to place; while many, too feeble to rife, lay fhivering with pain and torture upon the bare boards of a wooden platform. TOU VERTIN

Unhappily for our species, this most odious distemper is contagious, and readily communicated from one person to another; nor has it hitherto been found to be within the power of medicine. It often exists for years, and even where it sooner yields, its removal is more the effect of time and regimen than of medical treatment.

When a negro is attacked with this cruel it his

103

Is I

etter

in an in fra

tioni

hthat

Here

hu-

ate

of-

51 fall

ody

ine

sing

1ª

ea

diforder, he is feparated from his fellowflaves, and fent to the yaw-houfe to remain until he recovers. Commonly it is fix, and often twelve months, or even more, before he is again fit to return amidft the gang. An improved diet, with cleanlinefs, pure air, and fea bathing are most conducive to his recovery; whence it may be inferred that filthinefs, and poverty of food, are among the occasional caufes of the difease. From its refemblance to an afflicting malady, but two well known in Europe, mercury has been much employed as a remedy, but, unfortunately, with very little fucces.

I may here announce to you that another excursion of a more extensive nature has been projected, for the purpose of visiting the planters' estates in the remotest parts of the colony; and of proceeding up the river even beyond the farthest fettlement of the colonists, in order to see the Indians in their native dwellings amidst the deep woods. The governor and several other gentlemen residing near the town have been confulted as to the facilities of such an expedition; but the opinions collected are discordant and unfatisfac101

WI

ril

28

is inf

fer

此 if l lits

inv:

Ter

the tin

a h whe

effe

01

to pro

ink

in

fre

No.

renia

5,题 efore

An

1. M

取到自

and

IODa

Sale

DOWD

loved

Yery

21-ure

ing

s ef

15411

the

heir

The

in 能

)[=

3C=

tory-fome conceiving that it might be effected without difficulty-fome confidering it as perilous and quixotic, and others reprefenting it as wholly impracticable : but we find that it is extremely difficult to obtain any accurate information upon the fubject, there being very few perfons in the colony who have interested themfelves regarding either the remote parts of the fettlement, or the actual flate and habits of the people whofe territory they have invaded, and who have been driven from the very foil on which they are now acquiring their riches: hence, if undertaken, it must be entirely a marooning excursion, the party making a home wherever it can be found, proceeding while it can be made pleafant, and returning when it becomes difagreeable. Under all circumstances if it takes place, I shall endeavour to be one of the party-and, need I remark to you that, I shall not be the first who will propole to return. If we go-my pocket ink-cafe shall be my travelling companion, and in noting observance, I will think toward you from the wildest depths of the forest.

LETTER XXIII.

368

toir -- forse chacelying that it might be effected without distantine---forme or officing it as pe--

Indolence and visionary difficulties often the bane of our gratifi-Author engages with a party in a marconing excation. cursion up the river Berbische. No fixed plan, but the journey regulated by the information and treatment met with en route. Difficulties and obstacles suggested by gentlemen of the colony. Ignorance of the Dutch language the greatest impediment. Stores and neceffary refources collected in the boat. Departure from New Amsterdam. Mode of completing the boat's crew a little unwarrantable. Plantation Het Pleytanker the first place of call. The party well received by Mr. Deen. Meet Mynheer Abbenfets. Proceed with him to Esfendam to pass the night. Friendly attention of MynLeer Wohler a Hanoverian Surgeon. Author and Mynkeer Wobler make a promenade round the plantations Effendam, and San Souci.

Berbische, June 28.

nd e

the f imas

difer moun

we al

form

100 1

licies

iley a

the al

in it

to the /fcu them

fion

Mr.

off

Web

fond.

oned

Over

V

How true it is, my friend, that where inclination leads, difficulties are eafily fubdued! After the many apprehensions expressed, and the various interruptions and difficulties enumerated, we have performed our contemplated expedition, without encountering a fingle impediment which was not readily overcome. This confirms to me the opinion that most of the obstacle's opposed to our minor pursuits, and even of the mighty obstructions placed in the more important path of life exist only in imagination. In far the majority of instances difcretion and prudent perfeverance might furmount them, but where exertion is required, we are too indolent to remove the opposing forms which fancy has created. Terrified, or too implicitly yielding to visionary impossibilities, torpid inaction examines not whether they are phantoms or realities, and we forego the advantages of the pursuit, from a difinclination to use the efforts that may be required in its execution.

In the prefent inftance, had we liftened to the timid counfel of those whom fancied difficulties had deterred from engaging in it themselves, we had neglected making an excurfion which has afforded us infinite gratification.

But, to our fubject. Soon after our vifit at Mr. Blair's, our party was formed, and we fet off en quartette, Captain de Courcy, Captain Webb, Lieutenant Mackie, and myfelf, on our fondly anticipated journey. We had a fouroared boat from the fort, with an awning built over the part where we fat, which not only

VOL. II.

Trate A

的准施

(J. alle

will.

ne 28.

inch.

, and

call-

plated

Ville.

tot

uits,

BB

protected us from the fun, but also, by means of a door and windows, enclosed us as it were in a cabin. Sufficient intelligence could not be collected to enable us to fix either the limits of our excursion, or the period of our return. We had, therefore, no fettled route, and our movements were to be forward or retrograde, as we found that pleafure or difcomfort attended our path. It was completely a marboning or rambling adventure. Placed at the difpofal of the blind goddefs, we referved to ourfelves only the power of retreating, in cafe fhe fhould use unkindly. Where to find food, or where take reft depended entirely upon chance. Every planter, and every eftate were alike unknown to us : but we knew that there were plantations, and places of abode, upon the borders of the river: we knew, alfo, that in all civilized countries, where ftrangers are but feldom feen, hospitality is a prevailing characteristic of the inhabitants; we, therefore, became intruders upon the good-will of the colonifts, refolving to feek a home wherefoever our convenience should point, and to regulate our journey by the information we should acquire, and the treatment we might experience. If the excursion should turn out

2

370

t

I

V

(1)

197

121

IN

B

tan

gre

We

th

ta

m ad

a

P

di

也

20

pleafant and interefting, we might purfue it to the extent of nearly two hundred miles up the river. If on the other hand we fhould find it perplexing and inconvenient we were to return after the first or fecond day—thus governing ourfelves wholly by events.

Among the obstacles faid to prefent themfelves, was that of it being a bad period of the year; and it was fuggefted that from the heavy rains of the wet feafon, the river would be fwelled, and the current fo rapid, that the negroes would not be able to row against the Aream. Upon this account it was contended that we could journey only a very fhort diftance each day, and not even that without great labour and fatigue to the flaves. Had we not received other more happy reports, this would have deterred us from the undertaking. It certainly was a circumftance that merited confideration, and we found in it an additional reason for avoiding every thing like a fettled plan. The opportunity must always present itself of learning at one estate how far diftant we were from others, and we should then have the power of judging by the tide, and by the labour required, at which to pause:

BB2

TUN

puld r

elim

tetum.

for av

TING

12.00

kredo

E, Ha

1位世

entite

T estate

wthat

abode,

w, alle

TANCE

EVILL

erefore

i di th

reform

REALE

mil

aperi

TA 01

and, at worft, fhould night chance to overtake us, when no plantation was nigh, we fhould always have the remedy of tying the boat to a tree or a bufh at the fide of the river, and letting the negroes reft until morning.

The only real difficulty that feemed to prefent itself was our ignorance of the Dutch language. It happened that I was the only one of the party who had any knowledge of it, and there was much caufe to doubt, whether I might be fufficiently converfant with it to make myself understood. However, by a little Dutch, a little French, and a little English we trufted we might make our way. It being probable that we fhould be many days on our excursion, we established a certain routine of duty, fuch as directing the flaves, prefenting the party to ftrangers, making the neceffary arrangements, &c.; and agreed that each fhould take it by turn to be "orderly" for the day, thus forming a fort of military fatigue duty, which was to fall upon each in rotation, according to a fettled mufter.

11

21 10

fer

To provide for ourselves the comforts, or even the necessaries of the journey, was not in Oredo those boatter

t, and

med th

Detch

Lociy

the line

Titler

tin.

; ir i

loglik heing

our

eof

nting

cellary

Bould

e day,

动 ing an

10, 11

lot in our power. Our whole lift of ftores confifted of a cold ham and fome bread, with a fupply of plantains for the negroes, fome wine and Hollands, a few bottles of water, and our hammocks.

The fides of the river being, for the moft part, very flat and low, and entirely covered with thick woods, we were fenfible that the views could not be fufficiently varied at all times to amufe the eye and the mind, or to prevent the fatigue which muft neceffarily arife from fitting many hours each day in the boat; we therefore took with us fome books and a pack of cards, as occafional refources to divert us from the continued famenels of the fcene.

Thus equipped, we embarked on the morning of Wednesday June 15, from the town of New Amsterdam. Unfortunately on proceeding to the boat, we found only four negroes on board, and without a fifth, to act as timoneer, we must either have suffered the inconvenience of losing the use of an oar by putting one of the four flaves to the helm, or we must have been subjected to the annoyance of being always exposed to the rain or the fun, by taking the fteering duty ourfelves. In this dilemma, I blufh to fay that a remedy was found in the expedient of half-feducing, and half-preffing into our fervice a negro who was flanding in idlenefs at the landing place. Our crew being thus completed, we ordered the most intelligent of the fort negroes to affume the post of cockfwain, and putting the others to the oars, took our departure without having decided where to make even our first place of call. Rich estates, commodious houses, and hospitable planters, were not deficient about this part of the river; and as we had adopted the principle of feeking a home, wherefoever we fhould find it most convenient, we refigned ourfelves without hefitation to the diferction of the flaves, defiring them to make a port whenever they might feel themfelves fatigued, or should find the tide impede their progrefs. It happened that they took us on shore, about two o'clock, at a plantation called "Het Pleytanker." We advanced to the house fans ceremonie, and introduced ourfelves by observing that we were engaged in an excurfion up the river, and had put in for the purpole of refting the flaves; and of learning

374

che

qua

wit

gei

for

s D

OD

COI

10 12

and giv

fo

but pla

pa

ta

of

n

h

fp

where we might conveniently take up our quarters for the night. We were received with great hospitality by M. Deen, the manager, who infifted upon our taking dinner before we proceeded further. At table we met a Dutch gentleman, named Abbenfets, who, on learning the nature of our expedition, very cordially invited us to accompany him to the plantation "Effendam," where he was pleafed to fay he should be happy to accommodate us not only for the night, but for the morrow, and as long as we could make it convenient to give him our company. We hailed this as a fortunate rencontre, not merely on account of being provided with a home for the first night, but as it augured favorably respecting the hospitality we might require at the various plantations in the course of our journey .- We partook of a very good dinner at Het Pleytanker, and, foon afterwards, availing ourfelves of the tide, accompanied M. Abbenfets to Effendam, which we found to be one of the richeft coffee plantations of the colony. The house bespeaks the value of the estate, being a fpacious building, and fuperior to any we had feen in Berbifche, except the governor's manfion. Nothing could exceed the kind liberality

ing 19

to to 1 mg

開口

the 1

the P

計

8 100

tie,

atj

R

1.6

101

Ted

oule

by

T

折

BB4

of M. Abbenfets. He entertained us with all the cordiality of a friend, and we lamented that from speaking a different language, we were deprived of the full enjoyment of his fociety. M. Abbenfets knew only his native tongue, therefore, in converfing with him, we were obliged to speak in French through the medium of a Mynheer Wohler, a Hanoverian furgeon, to whom we were prefented on our arrival at Effendam, and who, very obligingly, undertook the office of interpreter to both parties. On account of my being a medical man, and having fome little knowledge of the Dutch language, M. Wohler addreffed himfelf mostly to me in conversation : and, as a professional brother, I was likewife honored with further attentions, and invited to accompany him in a ride round the eftate; for which purpofe he ordered a very excellent horfe to be faddled and brought to the door; accordingly, leaving the other gentlemen to converse by figns with M. Abbenfets, we made the tour, not only of Effendam, but alfo of Sans Souci, the adjoining plantation under the management of M. J. Abbenfets, nephew of Mynheer Abbenfets of Effendam. Green paths, bordered with luxuriant fruit trees, traverse these estates at various parts,

376

and

2

IN

T

ec

fet

回

and

bol

W

0

11 bu

m ł

tl

A

0

377

and, together with forming pleafant rides, give a general air of neatnefs, and add to the richnefs conveyed by the fertile coffee busies which foread the fields.

THE TO

C #24

Ociety

ingue,

RINE

nedita

geon,

ist at ziok

s On

MIN

FUZZA

me In her, I

ODS.

ond

rery

hi to fas,

but

tion

10 uit

rts

On our arrival at Effendam we were ferved with tea and coffee, and at nine o'clock was fet before us a handfome fupper of foup, fowls, omlet, and many other good things. Madeira and claret were amply fupplied, alfo Hollands, bottled fmall beer and porter. At eleven we went to our hammocks, congratulating each other on the fuccefs of our first day's adventure.

Our intrusions were not barely permitted, but we were received and treated with the most unaffected hospitality, and in the kind attentions of those we visited we could discover that genuine welcome, which seeks to make the stranger feel that in giving his company an obligation is conferred—not received.

ER PACIFICATION

Author and his comrades leave Esfendam. Generous and friendly hospitality of Mynheer Abbensets. The party obtain much useful information from Mynheer Schneider respecting their journey. Mynheer Abbensets and Mynheer Schneider contribute additional supplies to the boat. A long journey to the estate Vigilantie. Heavy toil for the slaves. They stop occasionally and plunge into the river to refresh themselves. A friendly welcome by Mynheer Malsted. Author wists the negro yard at Vigilantie. Is presented by a negro to his slister. An example of the effect of slavery. A singular mode of punishment. The party leave Vigilantie — arrive at the old town of Amsterdam. Visit Mynheer — le view Fiscal, and Mynheer Scholten. Le view Fiscal converses in Latin — profess great esteem for the English — is violently inimical to the Stadtholder.

Berbische.

ne

IT?

Sc

ma

had gas

101 lin

W Eleft Effendam early the following morning, but not without receiving many new proofs of the friendly hofpitality of Mynheer Abbenfets, who kindly entreated us to lengthen our prefent vifit, and invited us to make his houfe our home, and remain longer with him on our return. In all the generofity of his character he ordered fome bottles of wine, and a ftore of provisions to be put into the boat for our use, en route; and, likewise, supplied the negroes with an additional stock of Hollands and of plantains. It was between eight and nine o'clock when we left this generous stranger. According to the Dutch custom, coffee had been ferved to us as soon as we rose from our hammocks, but we referved ourselves for a more folid breakfast at our next place of call.

- in 西加 riht

in os Kinda

- le win

all M.

idently

rollehe

OTTAL

with 胡胡

IT BIE

HEDUE

日借

代哲

Hote

This was at one of the fugar plantations of Mr. Blair, on the borders of the river, nearly opposite to Essendam. Here again warm greetings met us at the landing place. M. Schneider, who has the management of the estate, received us with a most friendly welcome; and a breakfast of fowls, eggs, and other folids was, presently, set before us. We found M. Schneider a very intelligent man, and acquired more information from him respecting our journey than from any perfon we had feen. He had already made the excursion we were engaged in, and to a far greater extent than we could poffibly have it in our power to follow him, he having proceeded to the distance of eight hundred miles up the river. But he was equipped for the purpose, and attended by a party of Indians as conductors, and a young Indian girl, who had refided among the colonifts, as interpreter.

The tide ferving for us to proceed, we were compelled to make our vifit at M. Schneider's much fhorter than we could have wished; we therefore had barely time to take our breakfast, and accompany the intelligent manager in a fhort walk about the plantation, in order to fee the fugar works, fome fine trees of the mango, and a young plantation of the At 10 o'clock we refumed our bread fruit. feats in the boat when M. Schneider kindly defired to contribute to our ftore fome bread, and fome rum. We also discovered that he had fent on board, without our knowledge, half a dozen bottles of very fine porter, of which he had observed us to partake, with great enjoyment, at our fecond breakfast. Instructed by M. Schneider, we were to make our next home at the eftate Vigilantie, where we arrived at 7 o'clock in the evening. This was a fevere day for our flaves. Indeed they were exposed to far more of labour and exertion than we should have required of them, but from their own confent to the propofal of M.

(chr)

ally

they

Th

eraci

mil

fad

gard.

10,8

H.S

put even

for fuch

coly

ily.

which

and ftop

the

der t

Haz

fuff

retu

tour

动力

Schneider ; who, affuring us that they were fully competent to the journey, afked them if they could row to Vigilantie that evening? They replied in the affirmative, and cheerfully executed the tafk, arriving in high fpirits, and fmiling when we asked them if they were not fadly tired. But we had not felt at ease regarding them, throughout the day's journey; for, except the fhort time we remained with M. Schneider, we were in the boat from halfpast eight in the morning until seven in the evening. That even negroes could support fo many hours of heavy and inceffant labour in fuch a climate was past our conjecture. The only relief they required was to reft, occafionally for a few minutes, upon their oars; at which intervals, although extremely heated, and bathed in perfpiration, they had no fooner ftopped, than they plunged from the fide of the boat into the river, and fwam about in order to cool themfelves, and drive away fatigue. Hazardous as this might feem, they did not fuffer the flightest inconvenience from it, but returned to their oars with new spirit and vigour, feeling more refreshed, and more delighted with their bathing than with their food,

a. a. M.

all be to tak

atizion

in: trai

in dil

The is

T KERLINE

e bread

hat he

e, hall

which eat en

trift.

IT DES

arrived

as after

n mile

mion

but

of M

or even their beloved grog, which we gave them in very plentiful fupply.

The borders of the river offered but little to arreft our attention or to gratify our curiofity, we therefore engaged in a rubber at whift, which we contrived to play upon a board placed, from window to window, acrofs the enclofed part of the boat. But for this refource and our books we fhould have fuffered more fatigue from our tedious and wearifome confinement, in the boat, than the negroes did from the heavier labour of pulling the oars.

We were received with great kindnefs, and entertained with much cordiality, by M. Malfted, but unluckily no perfon at Vigilantie underftood any other than the Dutch language; our converfation was therefore very limited, being carried on only by figns and broken words. The tafk of interpreter fell to the lot of your friend, and you would have been highly diverted could you have feen me occupied throughout the evening in flammering forth a few words of bad Dutch to ferve all purpofes and explain for all parties. 10

35

VIL

DUS

100

m

SEL

one

beg wh

wh

Ja

el

int

m

of

t

V

h

0

1

1

Defirous to know the mode of life, and to observe the habitations of the flaves, as well as of their masters, I did not neglect to make vifits to the different negro yards at our various places of call. Pursuant to this custom, foon after my arrival at Vigilantie, I took with me one of the house negroes, as conductor, and went to view the huts of the flaves. In one of them my ebon guide, with great form, begged to introduce me to a very fine negrefs, who he faid was his fifter. I dare not tell you what foft overtures were made by this young lady, on my having the honor of being prefented to her. The tender belles of your London lobbies could not have ogled in graces more intelligible. To convey hints of kind accommodation, feemed indeed equally the object of brother and fifter. I mention this fact only to fhew to you in what light proftitution is viewed by flaves-the brother would feel honored in placing the pillow for his fifter on a Backra man's bed !

In my walk to the negro yard I met a flave who appeared under a peculiar mode of punishment, being compelled to wear an iron-

ut lin

CUTIO

E M

Upin ;

, acre

Ere

帮助

the B

Jage

i, and

Male un-

Buage;

imited

nokea

he lot

forth

polei

collar with three long fpikes of iron projecting from it, in fharpened points, to the diftance of eight or ten inches from his perfon. What crime had led to this ftrange method of punifhment I did not learn. The poor man not only fuffered the annoyance of moving about, loaded with this heavy collar, but he was effectually prevented from lying down, and from approaching near to any perfon without the danger of injuring him with the fharp points of his iron yoke.

The houfe at Vigilantie was very inferior to that at Effendam, but we found in it good fare, and an honeft welcome. Fowls, milk, rice, eggs and the like, were fet before us for fupper and we had afterwards fome very fine Hollands; but as my bad Dutch gave no charms to converfation, we retired at an early hour to our hammocks.

The following day was far lefs fatiguing to us ;—although equally bufy it was broken into more varied fucceffion. We went into the boat between three and four o'clock in the morning, in order to avail ourfelves of the early

Am

arri

M afte

Ho

the

of

and

the ač

Sci

dur

and

but lo

21 ne di

t

fo

and the

A HALL

Raus

f purst

Dolla

Wit-

(Anto

10 thout is

LETO

論 good

nik,

for fine

10 early

quing

rokes

: [10]

he

the early tide, fo as to reach the old town of Amfterdam before breakfaft.—We accordingly arrived at feven, in time to take coffee with Mynheer — le vieu fifcal, with whom we afterwards fhared a more folid breakfaft à la Hollandoife. Our vifit was divided between the fifcal, and the doctor, (M. Scholten,) both of whom received us with great urbanity, and invited us to prolong our ftay at the old town.

The fiscal is GI years of age, and although his youthful days are past, he is still active and alert. He walked with us to M. Scholten's, and the different parts of the town, during the morning, and was very attentive and facetious, meaning to be good companybut fadly fatigued us with an inceffant flow of fenile garrulity. He knew but little French, and although more fluent in Latin, it was neither claffical, nor always intelligible. At dinner he took his glass rather freely, as we afterwards learned was his too common cuftom. He now became officious and troublefome in his attentions, and at length grew unpleafant and querulous. He professed a high VOL. II. CC efteem for the English, and his civilities to us had feemed in unifon with his professions. He drank bumpers to " Geo. III. and old England," but on the health of the Stadtholder being given, as we had intended in complimentary return, the mafk at once fell off, and expofed him in the full character of a modern leveller. He raved and fwore, called himfelf a patriot, and declared that he was the firm friend of Holland-adding, "I hope again to fee Batavia a great nation, for England has not yet conquered all the world !" But still, in loud raving, and with strange inconfistency, the poor old man would drown himfelf in bumpers to George III. !- It availed nothing telling him that His Majefty and the Stadtholder were friends: he would get drunk, and fober himfelf again, drinking to the king of England-but nothing, he perfifted, fhould ever compel him to fwallow a drop to the health of the prince of Orange. His nephew, who was prefent, was very much diffreffed, and, begging us to accept apologies from him, entreated that we would pardon the conduct of his uncle, which he attributed to the kingly bumpers he had taken. We could only regard his effusions as the

h

1 î

í

T

M

1

Va

10

0 harmlefs ravings of imbecility, which but ferved to verify the common adage :--before dinner his fentiments were difguifed : wine tore away the veil, and in deep drinking, the intemperate old man again became a child, was unguarded, and fpake the truth !

oldE

er beig

Dentary Dentary Dentary dentary dentary a patriot,

「国語

白城 wy, b bumpet ling him

were imfell

d-bi inel bi orinced

ini, Wal

o accept

e wool

副能

Inten.

s thi

Mynheer Scholten chirurgien-major to the Dutch troops, Madame Scholten witty and facetious. Author referves a specimen of humour to relate to his friend on his return to England. Old town of Amsterdam. A party of Indians. A party of manumitted Negroes. Profession of surgeon-barber not extinct in the Dutch colonies. Two of the author's comrades shaved by a chirurgo-tonsor, who supports a Latin conversation upon medical and other subjects during "the operation." The party meet Mynheer Fenner at Mynheer Scholten's. Accompany him to the estate Johanna. On arriving are presented to Madame Scholten and five other white ladies.—Good resemblance of an European garden, appearance of a gang of slaves ginning cotton by candle light.

Berbifche,

MYNHEER SCHOLTEN, although not fo advanced in life as the fifcal, has been many years in the colony, bufily employed in the practice of medicine, and acting as chirurgien-major to the troops. He has one of the best houses in the old town, and all about it wears a degree of order, befpeaking much of ease and independ-Madame Scholten appeared to be a faence. cetious pleafant woman. We took tea with her after leaving the angry vieu fifcal. She converfed in good French, and feemed inclined to wit and humour. I have ftored for you fome notes upon this vifit, and upon a Dutch lady's prescription for a gentleman on observing him bend his eye towards a fine mulatto girl, which may fome day afford you amusement. M. Scholten is about to remove from the old town down to New Amfterdam, fo that we have a profpect of feeing this family added to the fociety near the fort, which, in this thinly inhabited fettlement, will be a great acquifition.

i

te

Old Amfterdam, as a town, has little more to recommend it, than New Amfterdam, which is only now growing into exiftence: and the latter, with regard to commerce, has every advantage of fituation; — while the former, although many years eftablished, has no fuperiority to claim from regular streets, handfome houses, churches or other public inter a Dend.

a far

with

1

CILE

ored

200 im

DOTE

dem,

h.

ich,

8 2

識

ter-

th.

erce

a th

S ets,

blic

edifices. We were indeed conducted to one large building, but it was more commodious for its purpofe, as a ftrong built ftore-houfe, than it was ornamental or fplendid. It was erected at great expence by the Dutch government, as a general depôt of ftores,—only a few years before it was determined to abandon the old town ; and by this event it is rendered, in a great degree, ufelefs.

In our walk about the ftreets we met with a house inhabited only by Indians-also one poffessed by a party of manumitted negro women. Curiofity led us into both-the latter appeared the cleanest and best ordered abode. In the former, the family were lying or fitting about in liftlefs indifference heedless of passing events and occurrences. We purchased from them some bows and arrows, and other specimens of Indian workmanship. Among the group we remarked a half-naked female, whole face and form were very beautiful; and whole fine long jet-black hair exhibited the interesting peculiarity of gently waving from the lank unyielding straightness fo univerfally observed in the fable treffes of the natives of this coaft.

CC3

On preparing our persons for dinner at the vieu fiscal's, we had an opportunity of remarking that the old professional affociation of furgeon and barber fo long practifed in England was not grown obfolete among the Dutch. One of our party, in the indolence of the moment, withing to avoid the trouble of unbarbing his own chin, fent into the town for a perfon to fhave him. Quickly appeared the hofpital-furgeon, equipped with a fet of chirurgical inftruments and tonforic apparatus. He bowed most respectfully, and not ungracefully, on entering the room, demanding in Latin, which of us it was, who required to undergo the operation. Struck with his address and the formidable appearance of his cafe of instruments, we imagined that the flave who had been fent to fetch the barber had committed fome mistake : but, on asking the queftion, our hero of the brush instantly replied-" Non, domini ! Sum chirurgo-tonfor !" then, displaying his razor and bason, affured us that he was more attached to the operative, than to the other branches of his profession. Without further hefitation, therefore, two brave officers fubmitted to be taken by the nofe, and underwent the operation, with much

3 3

eal

of

th

U

ed

der

di

fei

the

dir

WOI

we

da

ma

by]

Am

to af

Fer

efta

CO

m o'c fou

the

eafe and pleafantnefs, from the dextrous hand of Mynheer the chirurgo-tonfor; who, during the whole procefs, converfed fluently in Latin, upon medical and various other fubjects. His education had been liberal, and he was not devoid of information, either literary, or medical: yet, from cuftom, he did not feem to feel any fenfe of humiliation in flooping to the menial office of fcraping another man's chin !—Such is the force of habit ! What would our Englifh knights of the fcalpel fay were they called upon, in thefe enlightened days, to fhave even the most dignified of his majefty's fubjects ?

he

WD

of 0

-

Ela,

-

elly 1

US g

助う

100 2

ch

It was within our plan as recommended by M. Malfted, after paffing the day at Old Amfterdam, to proceed with the evening tide to the eftate Johanna. We therefore held it a fortunate circumftance that we met with M. Fenner, at M. Scholten's, who was from that eftate, and who very kindly defired to be our conductor to his home, an offer which we most gladly accepted. We dined at three o'clock at the old fifcal's, drank tea a little after four at M. Scholten's; and by five were in the boat on our way to Johanna,—where we arrived between fix and feven. Upon entering the houfe we were prefented to a party of fix white females, Mrs. Fenner and five of her friends. Such an affemblage of backra ladies we had not met fince our arrival in South America: but, unhappily, only the Dutch language was known to them, which prevented us from the full enjoyment of their fo-Johanna also afforded other marks of ciety. European refemblance, which are not common in the colonies, fuch as an excellent garden laid out and cultivated very much à l'Anglaise; and in the fields a numerous herd of cows and oxen. In the garden we faw afparagus, artichokes, turnips, cucumbers, carrots, French beans, cabbages, and other European vegetables growing in all the health and vigour of a more temperate climate. The various tropical productions were likewise abundant. Some of the walks were bordered with the fragrant lime, others were shaded with the grateful water-lemon, or the grenadillo; and a general neatnefs, with an unufual freedom from weeds prevailed throughout. On inquiry we learned that this well-managed and productive garden was cultivated wholly by two industrious flaves, each having only one arm, and hence 392

cc4

C

1 di

2

f.

CC

00

T

1

12 2:4: 5

patrito

of her

ladias

South -

Int

時間

15 6-

To of nom iciliid still;

f com

ingus,

ench

ibles

of a pical

Some

igrant

iteful

eneral

arcal

njen

ious

1281

Mr. Fenner wittily obferved that the labour of one negro effected it all. This was an uncommon example of industry in flaves, for fo luxuriant are the weeds and fo rapid the vegetation in this climate, that it is always difficult to maintain a garden in, even, tolerable neatness of appearance: but, here, two fingle arms fubdued the obtrustive weeds, and kept the garden in far better order than many others we had seen, upon which the time and labour of three or four robust flaves were constantly expended.

In the course of the evening we were conducted to the logis to see the flaves engaged at their employment of ginning cotton. The building was very extensive, and we were led by way of a gloomy flaircase to the upper flory, where the blacks were all employed in one deep room which ran through the whole length of the logis, and which from the scene fuddenly breaking upon us, created flrong ideas of the regions of old Pluto. The flairs opened at one end of the long building, and the eye at once looked down an immeafurable depth of glimmering darkness, through which was obscurely seen a multitude of naked black beings; either at reft or fkipping about from place to place, without our being able to diffinguish what they were doing or how employed. As we approached nearer to them, we found them to be a gang of negroes, old and young, robuft and feeble, male and female, all bufily and variously occupied in preparing cotton, by the aid of one faint light, fuspended in the centre of what feemed an interminable darknefs. Some were fitting on the floor; fome at the ginning wheels; fome were crouched upon their haunches; others flanding, and many moving about, each according to the varied employment of ginning, of beating and pulling, of fetching and carrying, or of packing the cotton. Still we faw none diffinctly, not even those immediately near to us; and the unufual noife, the various movements of the negroes, the general confusion of the scene, and the fathomlefs darknefs of the place, fo powerfully called to mind the difinal regions of queen Proferpine and her grim lord, that we could not divest ourselves of the impression : amidst some faint rays of light, impenetrable obscu(1)

bre

with 他.

plen

teep i

10.01

Fenn

varie

day,

DFOV!

thej

A zete

in the second

r bein

Dinga

Dearer

14 18-1

ie, max

Cupied

laint

amed

ting

WEEKS?

DEches,

about,

ent of bing

Still

im-

noife

s, the

he fa-

fully queen

could mill

1611:

rity, also beings black and hideous were before us, and we could not but affociate reality with the picture.

At fupper-time the ufual hofpitality of the colony was difplayed, and a generous plenty crowned the board. A party of thirteen took their feats at table; where a lively feftivity prevailed, and it was not until a late hour that the ladies left us and we retired to our hammocks. During the evening Mr. Fenner very obligingly planned an improved variety in our mode of travelling for the next day, by pointing out to us a new road, and providing us with all the requifite means for the journey.

addressing to ble to all the standard the Thuesdaman might liefe feamen of mount stillerer federari with ours eachy in the analisis

The party adopt a new mode of travelling fuggested by Mynheer Fenner. A Dutch mountain. Alarm excited by the author and his comrades respecting the Bush Negroes in the woods. A West India ride across the forest and wild savannas. European scene on approaching the estate Arends. Fragrant path leading to the house. The party meet a polite reeeption from Mynheer Paùels : dine at Arends : proceed in the evening to Myhneer Heynemann's accompanied by Mynheer Paùels and Mynheer Fenner. Visit a Dutch military post at an angle of the river near Arends. Mynheer Heynemann's household.

5 . O.I. 13

Berbische.

umb

is to

The

by Th

round

order

proce

favant

1 plea

in rel

ing ja

OUT T

with nels

deep

. kowio

then '

Lavan

UDC)

As

the

that

UNU

am

peć

ef.

WE rofe at feven o'clock. Coffee was brought to us on quitting our hammocks, and at nine was fet before us a more fubftantial repaft. Soon afterwards we made our congé to the ladies, and took our departure from Johanna. We croffed the river in a boat belonging to M. Fenner, the negroes having been fent on with ours early in the morning. To our furprife, on reaching the oppofite bank, we had to afcend a hill, which to a Dutchman might have feemed a mountain ; and on arriving at the fummit of this elevated fhore we found flaves and horfes, equal in isdral

Mest

anth

3 miles

P. P.

· print

the Walt

Betalla

E Was

3, and

lantial

congr

re from boar bot

biving

iotning

oppofit

ch loa

min;

ual in number to our party, in readiness to conduct us to Arends, the home of Mynheer Paùels. The diftance was much shorter by land than by water : our negroes, therefore, were fent round with the boat, by way of the river, in order to meet us in the evening; while we proceeded, on horfeback, across the woods, and favannas. This change not only afforded us a pleafant variety in our mode of travelling, but relieved us from a tedious and uninteresting journey in the boat. The first part of our ride was across a wide plain bordered with heavy forefts, and exhibiting all the rudeness of primitive nature : next we traversed the deep woods, by way of a narrow path, following each other, fingly, in true Indian file: then we escaped, again, into an open and wild favanna, more varied and interesting than any uncultivated fpot we had feen in the colony. As we were trotting behind each other through the still shades of the forest, we perceived that the notes of our conversation became unufually foft, and rumbled in gentle murmurs amongst the trees. Struck with this unexpected charm of our voices we were induced to found the huntfman's call, and the halloo ! of the chace, in order to observe the fweetnefs of the echo. But we quickly difcovered that, however mufical and delighting in the domeftic copfes of England, thefe were calls of danger in the deep and wild woods of Guiana! Our friendly conductor, Mr. Fenner, inftantly took alarm, and begging us to defift, defired that we would trot on, and be ftill, left we fhould bring down the Bufh-negroes to our path; who, if they fhould find themfelves able to overpower us, would certainly take off our fcalps, and perhaps not leave us our heads !—Need I fay that we obeyed, and rode on in filence?

The accommodations of this day's journey were quite Weft Indian, each had a flave running at his horfe's fide, or holding at his tail; and each flave was loaded either with a trunk of clothes upon his head, or a bottle of Madeira wine, of rum, or of water in his hand. Imagine to yourfelf the picture of a party of Europeans riding through the wild woods and favannas of South America, with a body of African flaves running at their fides, carrying bottles in their hands, and trunks on their heads, and you will have a correct idea of our travelling group. The negroes kept pace jou

US

rea

2111

Joh

10 0

IOT

21

18

of lar

cot

hoi

ing

t

pi

W ho

60

1

T

pace with us throughout the whole of the journey, and were not only at hand to give us drink on the road, but were likewife in readiness to supply us with dry clothes on our arrival.

15120

Went

toody

tenne

be Wi

Algite

them

13 IDIO

「福台」

可加

tiour.

Have

at his

with !

meleo

rinti

te of 1

re will

with 立脑 ton.

a idea

i ken

At the diftance of about nine miles from Johanna, the effate Arends fuddenly opened to our view, and the scene before the eye became unufually varied and European. It, in fome degree, reminded us of old Englanda circumstance which gave it additional interest, and led us to contemplate it with a kind of filial respect. Looking down from high land we faw, below us, a rich plantation of coffee, cotton, and cocoa, together with the house and home of M. Paùels. On descending from the rude plain to this finely cultured eftate, our road was continued along a fragrant path bordered with rows of oranges and pines, which lead across the plantation up to the house.

Our reception at Arends was friendly and cordial. We found M. Paùels to be a man of liberal education, and of refined manners. The house and environs, indeed the whole order of the home, no less than his personal addrefs, indicated an improved and cultivated mind. Our visit at Arends was shorter than we could have wished. We took dinner with M. Paùels, and passed a few hours fo pleafantly as to regret that they could not be tenfold multiplied. But, as we were anxious to reach the utmost extent of our journey, and as the afternoon tide ferved for us to proceed, it was deemed expedient not to delay; and the more fo, as quitting Arends would not deprive us of the fociety of M. Paùels, that gentleman and M. Fenner having promifed to accompany us throughout the next stage of our journey. Accordingly in the evening, M. Paùels, with his own boat and flaves, undertook to conduct the party to M. Heynemann's, the remotest European settlement of the colony. We embarked from Arends on a fmall river or creek,-which, at a fhort distance from M. Paùels', falls into the great river Berbifche. On the point of land, at the angle formed by the two ftreams, is a fmall battery, and an old established military post, which is still kept up by a Dutch guard, or at leaft the femblance of it, formed of a few antiquated invalids. We called to request of them to tell the negroes

t

V

1

P

1

Ci

01

In

pr

be at ge

en

ftil

H

of tol

gu

he

CO

ma

TH

al

1

in mi.

Dily

fold

ach

the 910

113

DY

tr,

is,

to 18

V.

19

M

A

f

8 ŝi 🗍

who were about to pals with our boat, that we were gone from Arends; and to direct them to follow us to M. Heynemann's. The guard confifted of about thirty of the old Dutch foldiers: nearly the whole of whom were in a state of intoxication, and not a man at his post. You will believe that it was not a station of high importance. Indeed, on account of its distance from the coast, it seemed only calculated to overawe the negroes, and the Indians of the vicinity, or to afford a fort of provision for a few of the foldiers who had been worn out in the fervice. While on fhore at this point of land, we faw an old Dutch gentleman, a refident at the battery, who had enjoyed seventy-fix years of life, and was still humorous and sprightly as in his youth. He expressed himself delighted to see a party of British officers, and defired we might be told, that although he could not talk our language, he could eat and drink with us very heartily, if we would favor him with our company, and ftay to partake of his meal.

The journey from the fort to M. Heynemann's afforded nothing of interest or variety. The scenery was a dull fameness of river and VOL. 11. DD foreft: wood and water overfpread by heaven's wide canopy, were all that met the eye. We were two hours and a half in the boat, and arrived at M. Heynemann's just as it was growing dark: thus completing the journey, from the fugar plantation of Mr. Blair, in three days; although we had been told at the town that we could not perform it in lefs than ten. Moreover we had effected it with the greatest ease, notwithstanding our having been affured, by feveral perfons, that fuch a journey could not be executed, especially in the wet feason, without infinite difficulty and fatigue, even if at all. We felt it fingularly fortunate that M. Fenner was of our party to M. Heynemann's, the latter gentleman not fpeaking any language but his native Dutch, and it being from him that we expected to acquire a great fund of information; as well regarding the cuftoms and manners of the Indians, as refpecting the country and its natural productions. He had been chosen king, or captain of a band of Indians, and having refided for many years among them, was better acquainted with their habits and purfuits than any other perfon in the colony. To him they brought frequent prefents of what they efteemEd

ma

ter

hil

-

and

of

flar.

med

inha

mot

the ior

tion

1001

OUI

forthe and marching .

they and

le by st

Hinid

Haeri

US in IS

Wath o tatas

the

Theen

LINEY

生能

加 ortunati

Hey.

aking

being great

ing the 15 15

radue.

led for any

they

teen

ed rare or curious, and it had been intimated to us that he had accumulated an extensive collection of specimens in natural history-alfo of Indian implements and apparatus. We found a number of Indian men and women, living in the houfe with this king of the diffrict. He had also a gang of negro flaves; fo that the household confisted of a medley of white, copper-coloured, and black inhabitants, who were affembled in this remote corner, from three different quarters of the globe, the group being composed of Eutopeans, Africans, and native Americans.

The day had been fpent in bufy occupation, we therefore went to our hammocks very foon after fupper; in order to reft and recruit ourselves for the next day's fatigues.

DD2

Author obtains an early conversation with M. Heynemann. Examines his collection. Messes. Heynemann, Paúels, and Fenner's plan, for the party, the remainder of the excursion. Interesting day at Mr. Heynemann's. Indians called Bucks —the women Buckeen. Common bow and arrow of the Indians. Their accuracy in using them. Fine attitude in pulling the bow. The poisoned arrow and its tube. Author and two of his comrades proceed to Savonette. One of the party suddenly afflicted with a malady which detains him at M. Heynemann's. Visit to an Indian but at two o'clock in the morning. Indian method of sleeping. Surprize of Vandyke, an old Dutch foldier. His remark concerning the indisposition of an Indian wife. Night accommodation at Savonette.

Berbische.

UNWILLING to wafte more of my time in fleep than was abfolutely neceffary, I rofe at an earlier hour than my comrades, and had the opportunity of infpecting the whole of M. Heynemann's collection before breakfaft; alfo of hearing his obfervations and remarks refpecting the Indians, with whom he had long been in habits of intimate affociation. At breakfaft Meffrs. Fenner, Paúels, and Heynemann planned our journeying for the two or three fucceeding days, informing us that we might have an opportunity of feeing numbers of Indians in their native dwellings, in the environs of an old effate, called Savonette, about twenty miles higher up the river ; and, remarking that according to the plan of our expedition, we fhould be unable to proceed further with any profpect of comfort or gratification. We could not oppofe even a doubt to the opinions of thefe gentlemen; therefore, embracing their propofal, we agreed to purfue our journey to Savonette with the evening tide, and after vifiting an Indian village, and the other curiofities of the fpot, to return to M. Heynemann's.

mahr

: Oth

御いし

可加

in in

Ar-

a of they a

haf

CHI I

The s iche.

e in

e at

had ile of

faft;

1arks

long

TPIL-

In

iree

ight

The morning was pleafantly fpent in examining the collection of Indian curiofities, and of fpecimens in natural hiftory; but more efpecially in hearing M. Heynemann relate his adventures among the Indians; whom he termed Bucks and Buckeen, thefe being the names commonly given to them in the colonies. We were alfo amufed by feeing M. Heynemann and one of the Indians fhoot with the common bow and arrow of the woods, and blow the poifoned arrow at a mark from its tube. The accuracy of the Bucks, in shooting with the long arrow, and in blowing the fhort poifoned one, was deferibed to us as being minute to a wonder. The common arrow used in their wars, or for the purpole of killing game, is nearly fix feet long, made of a peculiarly ftraight and fine reed, without a knot or inequality in its whole length, and armed at the point with a piece of sharpened bone, having a barb at one fide. At the shaft it is furnished at each fide with a piece of cut feather, in order to fleady it in its flight. Sometimes a thin piece of hard wood, fharpen-, ed at the point, and barbed with many notches, is fastened to the reed, and forms the end of the arrow :- but those who have mixed with the colonists, for the most part arm the arrow with a sharp point of steel. The arrows used for ftriking fish are forked, having three fteel points, with a barb near the end of each, the middle point being confiderably longer than the others. The bow is usually two or three inches longer than the arrow, and when ftrung, is not, at its greatest curvature, bent more than an inch and half from the cord. Various kinds of wood are used for the bows, the most beautiful of which is called letter-wood, a name which it has obtained from its peculi3 arly marked appearance, being richly mottled, as if flained by art, and fomewhat refembling the fkin of a fnake. The ftring is made of the filk-grafs, and is remarkably ftrong. An Indian will hit a chicken with tolerable certainty, at nearly a hundred yards diftance. He is very particular refpecting his arrow, and examines it with great care, in order to afcertain that it be perfectly ftraight, before he attempts to ufe it. The attitude of a naked Indian in pulling his bow, is highly graceful, and exhibits the human figure to great advantage. I have fometimes obferved in it fo ftriking a difplay of a well-made mufcular

Ime 3

pot

nde

四代

和

all a

đ

and the second

The second

the second

nd of

W

ed

thin

mg,

12

lie

form, that I have fancied I could have felt a regret had the nakedness been concealed under which it was presented.

The arrow which they are in the habit of poifoning is made of a light hard wood. It is about ten or twelve inches long, and of the thicknefs of an oat ftraw. It is blunt at one end, and cut to a fharp point at the other, the pointed end being dipped in the poifon. The manner of ufing it is by blowing it from a cylindrical tube, about feven feet in length. A bit of cotton is lightly put in at DD4 one end of the tube, the arrow is dropped in at the other end, and falls to the cotton; the lips are then applied, and the arrow is forced forward by a fudden puff, or coup of the breath, and is thus shot to the distance of eight or ten yards with furprizing accuracy. So expert are some of the Bucks in the use of this tube, that at twelve or fourteen feet, they will almost to a certainty frike the arrow upon the edge of a penknife stuck on the back of a chair. The tube is made of a species of reed, and they are very careful in preferving it. Indeed from the difficulty of finding the reed perfectly ftraight, a good tube becomes highly valuable to them, and its value is further enhanced by a fuperstition which prevails among them regarding the cutting of the reed. It commonly grows in wet places, or wide stagnant marshes; and superstition has stationed an evil spirit to defend it, whence the Indians have the apprehenfion that fome ill must befall him who ventures in to cut the reed. This weaknefs has probably originated from fome of them having been injured by alligators or ferpents -evil-beings which commonly inhabit fuchlike places.

DOI

mal

of

of 前 mol

it

sthou

1 deg

inpl

polit

info

leve

lesi

that the p effect

prov

with quan

Engl

in I

Tapi

Der,

We asked many questions respecting the poison used upon the arrows, but M. Heynemann did not feem to have poffeffed himfelf of the fecret. He defcribed it as a compound of the juices of three different plants; but he did not feem to have correctly afcertained the mode of preparing it; nor do we learn that it has ever been prepared by any European; although fome travellers have defcribed it with a degree of precifion, which might feem to imply a full and correct knowledge of its composition. It is a vegetable extract, and we are informed that it is undoubtedly prepared from feveral plants, fometimes more, and fometimes less in number, but whether in either cafe, all that are used are necessary to the efficacy of the poifon is a dubious queftion. Its fatal effects are certain and almost instantaneous, provided the minutest particle of it mixes with the blood.-You already know that a quantity of this poifon has been carried to England, and that experiments made with it in London, have proved the certainty and rapidity with which it deftroys animal life.

M. Heynemann gave us a plentiful dinner, and fweetened its flavour with an unafath,

ten

開

Den 1

nof

E.C.

5

1

制

ay -

ine-

by .

P.

P

;

0

16- TV

10

18

曲二

fected welcome. He expressed himself much gratified that we had made fo long a journey to wifit him, and confirmed his professions by his friendly conduct, and his bounty in entertaining us. In the afternoon we loft our kind conductors, M. Paúels, and M. Fenner, who left us in order to return to their respective homes, but not until they had earneftly enjoined us to repeat our vifits at Arends, and at Johanna, on our return. Being thus deprived of our friendly interpreters, M. Heynemann fought to remedy the evil by calling to our aid an old non-commissioned officer, who had acquired a knowledge of our language, from having been in the English fervice during the American war. Attended by this old foldier, we fet off at fix o'clock in the evening for Savonette, the late home of M. Heynemann, where he had long refided amidft whole tribes of Indians, and received honors as their captain chief. Under his direction, many of or them had been taught to labour, and although without much of industry, the plantation Savonette had been cultivated principally by the Studious to promote our comfort, the Bucks. generous Heynemann had put into our boat fome food, drink, candles, and other necefLies bein

forme

plea

US 10

ingt

plead

山

故和加 mas

toc

this to th

being trable

long

fills

mor

tion.

near

the

OUS

fion

and

OT

faries for the journey. One of our party being feized with a fit of affection for a bandfome Indian fpecimen which he had feen, pleaded ficknefs, and declined proceeding with us to Savonette : but the major domo happening to difcover the nature of his complaint, pleaded in his turn the neceffity of attending the fick, and remained behind likewife, in order to adminifler the kind offices of bofpitality.

The effect of the tide, fo far from the fea, was very inconfiderable, and fcarcely fufficed to counteract the current of the river, hence this stage of our journey became a heavy labour to the flaves. The day foon closed in, and, being enveloped on each fide by the impenetrable gloom of the forefts, we flowly ftole along the limpid furface, amidst all the folemn stillness of night. It was two o'clock in the morning when we reached the Indian plantation, (if fo I may term) Savonette, having been nearly eight hours in the boat, and much of the time in the dark. This was a fadly tedious fitting, but we were in fome degree relieved from the fatigue of it, by lighting a candle, and amufing ourfelves, part of the time, with our cards and books.

and a constant

1011215

Fionias

China

1 kin

Cimbe.

Pitta

却确 and at tived

anina

如如 vacht

e, înc[

ing the

dier,

g for g

nann, r

tribes

captain

ay of

hought

Sate

op the

the boat

lecel

We regretted the latenefs of our arrival the lefs, on account of its affording us an opportunity of feeing fome of the Indians as they were fleeping in their hammocks, and obferving their manner of difpofing themfelves to reft for the night.

On quitting the boat, we afcended what, in this country, might be called a hill, and proceeded to the house formerly occupied by M. Heynemann, which is fituated upon a more found and dry foil than is common on the borders of this river. Near to the water was an Indian hut, built like the open fheds of England, the roof only being covered in, and the fides left entirely open. Defirous of witneffing their mode of fleeping in their native dwellings, we made no calculations of peril, on the fcore of unexpectedly difturbing thefe rude inhabitants of the woods in the night; but without hefitation, entered the houfe, and advanced with our light close up to their ham-In the middle of the hut was burnmocks. ing a fmall fire of wood, immediately over which were fuspended three hammocks, made of the bark of a tree, and open like net-work. Two were placed abreaft very near to the fire,

ind

00

m

fe

Wt

ma

far

曲 油

low

ope

fr

UL

mi

¢U

W

0

0

f

and the third directly above the others. In one of the lower was lying a naked Indian man : over the fides of the other were hanging feveral legs and arms, and two heads, which we difcovered to belong to a boy and a woman, who were lying naked together in the fame hammock: in the upper one was another man with his long legs hanging out, foliciting his share of influence from the fire below. But, from the fides of the hut being left open to the breeze, it was manifest that the object of the fire, was rather to protect them from infects, than to add to the heat of this almost equatorial climate. We rambled about until 3 o'clock, availing ourfelves of this moment of unexpected visitation, to gratify our curiofity with all the variety in our reach. We looked into every hut we met with, and obferved the above to be the common mode of taking reft for the night. It was matter of furprife to us to find how little these people of the woods were incommoded by our fudden and nocturnal appearance among them. They expressed no concern at our prefence, nor evinced the flightest apprehension or curiofity regarding us. Not fo with Vandyke, a hardy old Dutch foldier, whom M. Heyne-

1 main

ansite

354,35

blen.

125 10

TER

Ins

what,

d pro-

M

5101 di be er wit

1, and

wit-

ative

il, on erude

; bot

ed ad-

hamburg-

V ORE

mide

rork.

fire,

mann had flationed at Savonette, as a kind of manager, and deputy post-holder, in order to take charge of the eftate, and maintain a friendly intercourfe with the naked inhabitants of the woods. This man, like the Bucks themfelves, was living almost in a state of nature. The natives of the foreft were his only companions, and from fome of his habits, it might have feemed that, in their fociety, he had forgotten the duties of civilization : Yet, in his general conduct, he was attentive and respectful, and appeared to poffess the fost feelings of humanity. No European lived nearer to him than at M. Heynemann's, and the few who refided there he feldom faw ; nothing therefore could exceed his furprize, on waking in the dead of the night, and finding a party of officers, armed, and in scarlet uniform, standing at his bedfide. You will imagine that it was with difficulty he gave credit to his fenses, or believed that he was actually awake. Although I carefully remarked the expression of his countenance, his incoherent replies, and all his agitated movements, you will better conceive the effect of fuch a visit upon his mind than it is poffible for my pen to defcribe it. Vandyke's bed, like the couch of the Indians, 414

T

fr

t

3

1

W

1

0

T

11

be

1

1

77

CTUT A

titte

ants i

STR.

1500

Digit

for

his

Mal,

û.

0 1

Why

the filing

Was

E. 01

ough

his

3

C01-

fiel

it

15,

was a fimple hammock; and only differed from theirs, in being made of cotton inftead of the bark of a tree. In another hammock clofe at his fide, was lying a naked Indian woman, whom he had felected from the woods as his wife. She appeared to be ill, and we were led to afk fome queftions regarding the means of procuring her medical relief, when Vandyke, with an air of nonchalance, inftantly replied, "Och ! als zy ziek is, moet ik eene andere hebben," which may be thus tranflated, " when fhe grows fick, I turn her into the woods and take another."

Vandyke was too much aftonifhed at our unexpected appearance, as well as too much a foldier, to remain quietly in his hammock, while he faw a party of officers unprovided ; he therefore very quickly rofe, and, conducting us to the beft room he had, fet before us fuch fare, as his fcanty means enabled him to collect, and kindly bade us welcome; then pointed out to us fome hooks, whereon to fufpend our hammocks for the remainder of the night. Our chamber very much refembled an old barn. The repaft prefented by Vandyke was Caffada bread, with Hollands and water: but the hospitality of M. Heynemann had prevented us from being thrown upon the humble fare of Savonette—compared to which our boat was a luxurious larder.

The convenience of hammocks was never greater, nor more ftriking than upon this occafion. In fuch an apartment beds or mattreffes had been objects of terror to us, but fufpended in our hammocks, we lay in comfort, bidding defiance to lizards, vermin, thick cobwebs, dirt and all other annoyances.

The tabaltin sta dones has some stilled by

Antia

100

TT. W

Fatte

da

ditta

enfo mer eXi eXi

Calj ba. expri fone

pour mer in t prefe litar bis

Ar

Eag

that

VC

Anticipated gratification robs the author of reft. Senfations on looking out at the door of Savonette early in the morning. Visit to an Indian willage in the woods. Scenery on entering the forest. Reflections on approaching the village. Vandyke enfures the party a civil reception. No ceremony observed. Author and his comrades minutely examine all around them. Bucks absent. Buckeen employed preparing cassada. Curiosity not reciprocal. The party procure specimens of animals, implements and utenfils. The laba. An example of natural affection in the wild woods. A further example of the fame. Food used by the Indians. Manner of preparing it. Indolence of the inhabitants of the woods. Caffada their " Aaff of life." Pepper-pot of crabs, and laba. The Armadillo. Structure of the Indian buts. Author expresses a hope of shewing the model of one to his friend some day in England. Temple of incantation. Superstition of the Indians respecting difease. Hot or wapour bath. Scenery round the forest village. An immense tree of the Tonquin bean. Concerning other trees in the woods of Guiana. A Kiwihi, and other specimens prefented by Vandyke : Water-lemons, - by the Indians. Military honors. Echo through the deep forest. Author and his comrades return to Mynheer Heynemann's, and to Arends.

417

Sales -

TIPAN

Was 194 dsor

, but

1

Berbische.

EAGER anticipation tracing in my mind all that we were to fee, hear, and acquire at Sa-VOL. 11. E E vonette, I had fcarcely clofed my eyes before it was time again to open them. The period allowed to us, by the arrangements of Meffrs. Heynemann, Fenner and Paúels, was very limited; fearing, therefore, to lofe the fmalleft portion of the allotted hours, I was again up and abroad before my companions. Stepping out at the door I gazed around me, and wifhing for a thousand eyes and ears, looked on every object, and liftened to every found. It was 7 o'clock .- Vandyke had rifen with the fun, and now came to offer himfelf to our command. Our non-commissioned interpreter was also ready, and obedient to our will. As foon therefore as my comrades left their hammocks, we took our breakfafts of coffee and caffada bread ; and, without further delay, fet forth into the woods, in fearch of the Indian town ;- to visit which was the great object of our journey to Savonette. We were quite a military body, having, in our party, captain, fubaltern, non-commiffioned officer and private : aye ! you will fay, and attended by the doctor too !

Entering the foreft, the first thing that attracted our notice was a cluster of wild pines, gro

Wa

eal

US

旅

Eng

cre

and

grati

RP

The

COU

W

fro

boc

abo

and

it

the gar

late

an

ev

200

of 山

Hin IS

riois and

Metas

rery an

allef

·

Keppin

HE

itu

f thei

feean ay, I

that of the second growing ten or twelve feet high. Our path. was good. Although pleafantly fhad d at each fide, it was not fo narrow as to confine us to the ufual Indian file. It more refembled the open ridings which embellish the woods of England. The scene was new. Every object created a lively intereft. Expectation was ardent; and curiofity on the point of being gratified. I cannot tell you the fenfations we experienced during this walk of nearly a mile. The gnomes and fylphs of ethereal regions could not have journied with lefs fatigue. All was mind. The bufy foul feemed releafed from its fluggish clay; and the heavy clog of body was no longer an incumbrance. We were about to contemplate what we might never behold again-a novelty peculiarly exquisite, and of more than common intereft, for it attached to our species ! All that concerns the habits and comfort of man, I always regard with high veneration. In whatever relates to our nature. I feel a glowing fympathy; and I affectionate the whole human race in every state and station. In what we differ and in what refemble each other, are questions of more than ordinary curiofity-questions that strike upon my mind with uncommon influence. Whatever tends to ftrengthen the connection between man and man ; to improve our being, and increase the general happinefs of my fellow creatures, I regard with an attachment bordering upon enthusiasm. I feel that in the great fcale of creation we all are men and brothers. The little varieties in the habits of fome, and the different shades of colour in others, in no degree alienate the affection I bear them, as individuals of the fame focial race to which I belong. Situation and circumstance may have held us feparate, and have led to different cuftoms and purfuits : but in nature, we are still the fame ; whether we tread the globe in one quarter or another; whether rude or refined ; whether pampered with luxury in the towered cities of Europe ; or fed with more fimple fare in the wild forefts of America!

With my mind thus occupied, I was among the foremost of the train, on our way to the Indian town. Feeling anxious to avoid every possible cause of offence, we begged of Vandyke to instruct us in such rules of conduct, as it might be proper to observe towards the naked tribe; but he did not confider any PI

釦

Y

N

1

П

of hu

1 al

all

CU

be

00 pri

T

¢1

Lang

10 juin

lizoo

WEB

1. 151

Duga

Tajat

志有い

THE .

Smill.

5:4

te m

the ;

pered

ope;

forefti

[WH

u naj

0 2 TU

1008-wardi

er ast

precautions neceffary : being himfelf familiar with these natives of the woods, he left us to our own diferetion, and affured us a civil, if not a polite reception. On our arrival he at once led us into the fimple structures, used for houses. No ceremony was observed : neither rapping at the door, nor ringing at the bell was required. " Parlez au Suiffe" offered no impediment nor delay. Vandyke advanced, and the party was at once amidst the family. You will believe that our curiofity was active. Not a houfe, a hut, nor a hammock escaped us. The multiplied vision of all-prying Arguscould not have accomplished more. Not an article of furniture, not an implement, nor utenfil; not a step of ground; nor a movement, nor look of any inhabitant was_difregarded. We hunted through every corner and place, taking up fome things in our hands, eying others, and affailing Vandyke with queftions concerning The Bucks were gone into the forest to all. cut wood, the Buckeen and their children being left at home. Most of the women were occupied in one ftep or other of the process of preparing the poisonous caffada into food. We were anxious to see them in their different employments, and, therefore, haftened from hut to hut in the idea of coming upon them. before their occupations were interrupted by the curiofity which we thought it probable might be excited from the unexpected arrival of a party of clothed ftrangers among them. But on this head we need have had no anxiety. Not an individual fuffered any interruption from our prefence. The curiofity, by which we were actuated, was in no degree reciprocal; for fcarcely did any one take the trouble even to look towards us ! We paffed through their huts, and around their perfons, in a manner unnoticed; and they continued at work, or unemployed, precifely as we found them ! Whether on their legs, whether feated or lying in their hammocks, fo they remained, no obfervable change being induced by our vifit.

Added to the gratification of our curiofity it was in part our object to collect fpecimens of natural production, or of Indian workmanfhip. We accordingly procured a varied affemblage, in which was a fmall and very beautiful little animal called the Lion monkey; alfo a Laba, whofe flefh is efteemed the moft delicious food of the country. In appearance this animal fomewhat refembles the hare, but is

of

d

1 -1

6º

Ir

fea

pre

he

11

1. 211

TRA

br

110

in the

me

Fa

10 lit.

riof.

Mined

TELT

self

at nce

bul

its meat approaches nearer to a mixed flavour of the hare, and of very delicate pork. It is dreffed without cafing; the fkin being confidered the moft favorite part of the difh. This is very thick, and in cooking becomes gelatinous, like the calves head, or turtle. The Indians feald off the hair or fur, then cut the animal in pieces, and flew it in caffada juice, feafoning it very high with capficum. Thus prepared, it is truly delicious, and if it could be had in London, might form a difh not unworthy the notice of a manfion-houfe purveyor.

Many fine bows and arrows were among the collection we procured at this foreft village. In one of the huts my eye was caught by a fmall bow and arrow, which appeared to be extremely delicate, of exquifite workmanfhip, and by far the fineft fpecimen of the kind we had met with. I immediately formed a wifh to fhew them to my friends in England; and, taking them into my hand, refolved to make the purchafe, whatever value might be fixed upon them. But I was difappointed by an unexpected circumftance, which very much interefted my feelings, and which I fhall ever remember with pleafure. Holding the bow and arrow to the naked woman of the houfe, I was about to offer money, my pocket handkerchief, or my neckcloth in exchange for them; when a little copper-skinned urchin, almost covered with long black hair, broke out in fuch pitcous bewailings, that (although to have had the bow and arrow, I would have given almost any article of my apparel) I was at once diverted from everythought of poffeffing them. I felt that no terms could induce me to take them, if at the expence of the tears, and broken-hearted lamentations of the young archer to whom they belonged. Still I own that I was cruel enough to prolong the little rogue's cries and fears, by an experiment upon the feelings of the mother. I wished to afcertain the fentiments of an inhabitant of the rude forest upon fuch an occasion; and to observe what would be the conduct exhibited under the circumstances of a fon's diftrefs; I, therefore, feemingly, perfevered in my attempts to prevail on the woman to let me have the bow and arrow :- but fhe was true to nature; and her child's happiness was the first object of her parent breast ! No offerno persuasion could tempt her to barter her son's pea

pr

CO

20

调

tio

D

hal

her

施 un

be pe

fin

Ist

inte

lit

the 201 aff

ha

ch

司

to peace. If her dear boy's comfort was to be the price, nothing was adequate-nothing could compenfate! The little diffreffed rogue hung about my knee-ran to his mother-held up an imploring hand-and uttered fad cries of affliction. I, for a time, refifted the impulse of my feelings - difplayed to the woman my handkerchief, and my pocket-book-offered her money-tried to foothe her fon, and feigned every means of perfuasion : but all in vain! She remained inflexible! Her child was unhappy, and with his comfort there could be no compromife. It was enough ! The experiment was made; and I was delighted to find that in the wild woods the facred laws of nature were not fubordinate to all-fubduing intereft.

11e

如

0四

THE.

R

ed

of thi-

if.

In 唐

TH

16

is

I had no defire further to tantalize the little weeping urchin, or his affectionate mother, therefore gave him the bow and arrow, and made him happy — compenfating the affliction I had caufed him by the pocket handkerchief which I had offered as the purchafe of his arms. His grief inftantly vanifhed: but he flew to his mother, and, clinging to her, did not again venture from her fide, whilft we remained in the hut. We honored the woman for her conduct, and were delighted to witnefs fo ftriking an example of the natural affections, operating in all their genuine purity, unfophifticated by the fordid motives which but too often govern the more cultivated beings of what is termed civilized life.

Further examples occurred to us evincing the powerful operation of the affections among thefe uncivilized people. One of the women pointed out to our observation the grave of her fon; a youth who had deftroyed himfelf becaufe the mother of a young buckeen, of whom he was enamoured, could not be prevailed upon to let him take her daughter for his wife. Thus the wily Cupid would feem to wield his bow with equal prowefs amidft the fimple beings of the forest, as among the more pampered fwains of crowded fociety. The laws of nature are universal, and she is ever uniform and confistent. In her passions fhe knows no diffinction between the rude woods and polished cities. Courtly refinement may counterfeit, clothe, and conceal-but, if fairly exposed, the most accomplished of mankind will be found to be governed by the fame natural feelings as the uncultivated favage. The fon of our afflicted buckeen was young, and his attachment as pure as it was ardent and difinterested. Without the adored object of his affections life was insupportable, and he refolved not to furvive the difappointment : deprived of his heart's choice, existence lost all its charms, and he yielded himself a victim to despair ! These rude people honored the fentiment. In fad grief his parents deplored their loss, and the inhabitants of every hut lamented the fate of the youthful lover. An additional instance of natural affection and attachment occurred in the folemn obfervance paid to his remains, which as an ever dear and facred deposit, were entombed within the chamber where his afflicted parents dwelt !

9

Ter

ETT

Like all other tribes who are ignorant of the comforts and conveniencies of civilization, the Indians of Guiana procure their food from the rivers, the fea, and the forefts. They have no animals domefticated, nor any grain nor roots, except the caffada, brought into cultivation; and hence they depend very much

TE L

11+ rdid

WE

ing of

ing.

-

Ve (

ı, oi

ore-

for mss

nidît

ciety.

heis

Fions

TUUÉ

file-

-

upon the fortune of the chafe for fubfistence. A small species of deer, called wirrebocerra, the laba, and the armadillo are among the animals they most effeem. Fish and crabs are alfo much used, particularly the latter, which they find in great abundance in the muddy margins of the rivers ; especially at the parts where they open into the fea. When fortunate in the chafe, they indulge their natural indolence by lying in their hammocks most of the time until their provisions are expended; and when the fupply obtained by the bow and arrow is lefs plentiful, or when their hunt in the woods happens to prove unfuccefsful, they find a refource in crabs and caffada, which may be confidered their ftaple articles of confumption. Indeed the caffada may be called their staff of life, for it offers a fupply when they fail in the chafe, and becomes to them what plantains are to the negroes of thefe colonies, or potatoes to Irish peafants. It being the only vegetable they cultivate, it is ufual to fee it planted in a rough and irregular manner near to and about their huts. Very commonly they prepare their food in the form of pepper-pot-their favorite difhes being crabs, or laba, stewed with cassada ju

P

of

p ep

111

in af

P

1

1

juice, and feasoned extremely hot with red pepper.

tich

Office and the second

Wal

tof

山

Tud

hus

쪫 lich

011-

led nga

hem

It

Itis

Ter

90 ada

I can give testimony to both of these being very rich and good; perhaps in point of flavour the pepper-pot of crabs claims the preference; but either might be a feast for an epicure. In one of the huts we faw part of an armadillo, which had been broiled or roasted in its shell. It was well flavored, and in appearance and taste not very unlike young pig. Water is their common drink, but they fometimes use a fermented liquor called piworree, which they make from cassada. This is intoxicating, and has fome refemblance to beer.

The huts are usually conftructed like that which we faw near the landing place at Savonette. I hope to be able to fhew you a model of them on my return to England having the promife of one, made by the Bucks, with furniture complete. At the village fome of the huts were closed in at the ends; others were left entirely open. The roofs were neatly thatched with the leaf of the coco-nut or the mountain-cabbage. Near to the cabins that were inhabited, we obferved a detached building enclofed on all fides, forming a fingle room, into which light and air were only admitted at the door-way. Upon inquiry we learned that this was devoted to the use of the fick-not as an hospital, but as a temple of incantation, for the purpole of expelling dif-Their fuperstition attributes fickness to eafe. witchcraft, or the vifitation of fome evil spirit like the Obeah of the Africans-and having faith in fpells, they make little decorated instruments, of tender rushes about a foot long, which the phyficians, or priefts called Pyeis, employ, together with other magical implements, as wands to drive out these demons of ill, which they term Yozeaboos. The Pyei is thought to possess a peculiar influence over the Yowahoo-and by means of diffimulation, and superstitious forms, the fick and his friends are made to believe that he holds an intercourfe with him, previous to removing the effect of his malign visitation from his patients. The building would feem better calculated for their more natural remedy, the hot or vapour bath, which they contrive by throwing water upon a large heated ftone, and enveloping the fick person in the steam.

pa

00

W

b

10

V

W

Around the village the wood had been partially cleared away, and the fcenery of this interefting fpot was much improved by feveral cows coming out of the thick part of the foreft to browfe about the open fpace. They were the produce of a herd originally brought by M. Heynemann to Savonette.

After having gratified our curiofity by a long vifit, and a minute infpection of every thing worthy of notice at the Indian town, we were led, through a close and narrow path, devoid of any turning, either to the right hand, or the left, into the profoundeft shades of the forest. The way was difficult, and we were compelled to follow each other in fingle file, throughout the whole length of our walk; which, from the clofeness of the wood, the narrownefs of the path, and the confequent defection of the breeze, was diftreffingly hot and confined. The object from which we were to expect compensation was a tree! we had ftrong apprehensions that the fight of it might not be an adequate reward for fo fatiguing a walk, but we had thrown ourselves upon the judgment of Vandyke, defiring him to conduct us to all that might be gratifying to ftrangers, we therefore marched on, in tacit obedience, relying upon his guidance ; and our perfeverance was amply recompenfed by viewing the great chief of the foreft -an enormous tree of the Tonquin bean, which appears in lofty and majestic trunk, extending its high-exalted foliage above the hofts of afpiring rivals that furround it. The body forms an immenfe perpendicular pillar rifing to the height of, perhaps, 70 or 80 feet before it throws out a fhoot or a bud, then fpreading its wide-expanded branches in proud canopy, fo elevated as to protect from the reach, and even to conceal from the eye, the nuts which contain its fweet-scented beans. Viewing this huge tree with regard to its ftraight and perpendicular trunk, its immenfe bulk, and, above all, its prodigious height, it may be confidered as one of the fineft specimens of vegetable production growing on the face of the globe. In beauty and grandeur it is equalled only by the flately mountain-cabbage, whofe majestic trunk, and fine palmated foliage, ftand unrivalled in the vegetable world.

The trees grow to a fize in these forests not readily to be imagined by persons who has cli

20

Ċ0

he

It

Po

To

fore

it bi gro

En

pc

T

uli

nar

21

tr

W

th

Π

01

COS

cl.h

On TE

eftoo

ch d

100

TIS

Hat

ing id

in the

Q...

00

the

led ofe

5Gy

19

10

have feen only those of the more temperate climate of Europe. They are tall and flately, and contain a great proportion of timber, in consequence of running up to an immense height before they throw off their branches. It is often difficult, and not unfrequently impoffible to reach their fruit, or foliage. The Tonquin bean tree, when growing out of the forest, feldom attains to this stateliness of form : it branches off at a shorter distance from the ground, and in its growth more refembles the English ash; the bark is fomewhat like the poplar, and the leaves like those of the pear. The one we faw had been drawn up to an unusual height, by growing in a crowd, and was indebted to health and years for its extraordinary bulk. The nuts containing the fragrant beans are abundantly plentiful in the forest, and may be picked up in bushels under the trees, at a certain feafon of the year. While we were gazing at this vegetable giant, Vandyke cut on its bark the initials of our names, and the date of our vifit; and this neceffary ceremony having been duly performed, we trod our way back, by the narrow path, to the refidence of our friendly guide, and there most gladly made a refting place. But Vandyke VOL. II.

was allowed no respite, for we still beset him with hofts of queftions : and when he had fatisfied our inquiries, and we learned that Savonette offered no further novelty, we refumed our places in the boat, and returned to the abode of the hospitable Heynemann. Vandyke prefented us with a young Kiwihi, an animal which bears fome refemblance to a pig, and is about the fize of a large cat, having a very long tail, marked with alternate rings of black and white hair. He alfo gave us feveral specimens of Indian implements, most of which I hope fome day to fhew you in England. Some of the Indians followed us to the water-fide, and put into our boat large bafkets filled with fine water-lemons, which they had gathered from the woods.

pr

On our quitting the fhore Vandyke honored our departure with the firing of cannon. He was a foldier, and in additionto other civilities, felt a pride in fhewing to officers who vifited him every mark of military refpect. We were the more pleafed with the compliment, as it afforded us an unexpected, and most welcome opportunity of hearing the enchanting echo through the woods. We were in time to take a late dinner with Mynheer Heynemann, and in the evening, according to the plan laid down for us, we proceeded to Arends. M. Paúels was from home, but we found the beft arrangements of the family ordered for our accommodation. We were fumptuoufly entertained by a young gentleman, the friend of M. Paúels; and at night were conducted to very excellent bedchambers, fitted up more in the ftyle of European accommodation than any we had feen in the colony.

435

eleth

he he

d the

TE TE

ned to

2 12-

前四八

2 10 2

ting"

2 ton

民族

und.

in Eng.

hikets

T had te bo

30000 her ci=

is who relpett

ed and is the

In this remote part of the weeks." and in late

Porelies and in our actual alle and was particuly ty pleasing an itic month

Feelings of fatisfaction evinced by Mynheer Heynemann: His attention to the author. Connecting link between the Indians and the colonifts. Policy of the Dutch government refpecting the Indians. Opportunities poffeffed by Mynheer Heynemann of obferving the character and habits of the people of the woods :-peculiarly qualified for the appointment of poft holder :-elected a chief among the Indians. Propofal to affemble a body of them in military array. On the remarks and obfervations of Mynheer Heynemann. Indian tribes in Guiana. The Charibs most warlike. Prominent features distinguishing the Indians from Europeans from Africans. Clothing of the Indians. Kaway used by the Buckeen. Conduct of a mother and daughter on prefenting the apparel of a young Buckeen to the author.

Berbische.

th

lit

fto

W10

fed

col

that aw

Was

Tar

me

and men

houis

per

me,

Ico

on fi

fule

that poff

toua

THE generous Heynemann appeared much gratified by the fatisfaction we expressed ourfelves to have experienced in our visit at Savonette, and in our acknowledgments of the civil attentions of his deputy, Vandyke. He was particularly pleased at the interest which, he was pleased to fay, I seemed to take "regarding every object, and every circumstance in this remote part of the world," and fo at-

With awob bill pala only in hail tached himfelf to the means of gratifying me, that I was compelled peremptorily to arreft the liberal hand with which he would have beftowed multiplied marks of his friendship-to the injury, and almost the extinction of his own collection. At first I had freely expreffed my admiration of fuch things as were calculated to call it forth, but I foon difcovered, that to admire was to tax his generofity; for if he only heard me breathe approval, or but faw, by my eye, that a specimen pleased me, it was inftantly mine. He gave me famples of various gums, nuts, and woods, employed in medicine by the Indians, alfo cryftals, bows and arrows, Indian paddles, mufical inftruments, instruments of war, implements of household furniture, used by the Bucks, and a variety of other curiofities: indeed, could I have perfuaded myfelf to have taken all he offered me, I might have fitted up a fmall museum; but I could not reconcile the idea of trefpaffing upon fuch liberality, and therefore politively refused many specimens of which I observed that he had no duplicates, and which I felt it poffible he might afterwards lament. He was equally liberal in all his attentions, and feemasti

7801

in hi

Michae

前位

124

17. 12

ALL ALL

IT felt

iche.

much

山田市

H.Ste

of the

He

which

a #19*

ince ;

lo ate

Bargiy

FF3

ed defirous to explain to me whatever I wifhed to afk. You will believe that I had lefs referve in my queftions, than in the acceptance of his generous offerings, and that I was happy to call forth the obfervations and remarks derived from his long and familiar intercourfe with the Indians. At his prefent abode and at Savonette he had refided, during many years, in the appointment of poft-holder, having conftant intercourfe with the Indians, and forming the connecting link between them and the colonifts.

It was the policy of the Dutch government to expend a certain fum annually in the purchafe of blue cloth, beads, ribbons, hatchets, and other implements, and ornaments to give to the Indians; and it was made the duty of the perfon placed at the most remote effate of the colony, to affociate with the Indians, and to cultivate their friendship, in order to prevent acts of hoftility on their part, and to fecure to the colonist the peaceable possession of the territory they had appropriated. Hence, from fituation and appointment, as well as from natural di disposition, abundant opportunities had offered to M. Heynemann of intermixing freely with the Indians, and observing their most retired, as well as their more exterior habits. Poffeffed of enterprifing talents, and a certain hardihood of mind and frame, together with affable and conciliatory manners, he was peculiarly qualified for the truft which had been fo long confided to him. He mixed with the Indians, affumed their habits, infinuated himfelf into their good opinion, and became fo entirely one of themfelves, that at Savonette they elected him their chief or king; and he could, at any time, affemble them in a body of feveral hundreds, in military array, and appear as captain at their head.

ti

This was a novelty which he offered to exhibit to us, if we would confent to prolong our vifit, or would repeat it, giving him only a few days notice of our coming. I regretted extremely that it could not be in my power to accept either of these proposals. It was a high compliment offered to us, and what I should have particularly enjoyed; but I had only a short time to remain at Berbische, and dared not look to another long absence.

Lefe

eptanc

s hap.

marks

Time a

TEAT

The

30

121

0位11

IT II

NAS.

ma-

Was

it the

Hori.

their

haf.

colo-

titory

file

FF4

M. Heynemann is a man of great zeal, activity and exertion. With confiderable penetration, he possesses much of perseverance, but from the want of a liberal education his observations, though valuable, are loofe and undigested-devoid of arrangement and scientific correctnefs; and evidently not the refult of any fystematic train of inquiry. Governed by chance, and with no fpecific object in view, his purfuits and remarks are not fo conducted as to promote, effentially, the advancement of natural science; but, perhaps, a man of high literary acquirements would be lefs fitted for the post which M. Heynemann has fo long filled with credit to himfelf, and advantage to the colony. I should have been much gra-tified could we have prolonged our vifit, and with regret bade adieu to this generous chief of the naked tribes.

Although, from my fhort flay among them, you cannot expect an elaborate difquifition upon the fubject of the Indians, you will perhaps demand a paffing word on fuch prominent points, concerning them, as more immediately ftrike the eye. I may therefore tell you that the Indians who inhabit this part ot

0

tr

D

de

10

the pr

France

n his

and

Telat

and

TIT

and the

and .

見位

long

11-

Dd.

ief

m

T

TOU

ich

102

TA.

art

of the South American coast are of four tribes or nations, the Arrouwacs, the Accawaus, the Warrous, and the Charibbees. The Charibbees or Charibs, as they are more frequently called, are the talleft men, and of the moft warlike afpect. Those we have seen of the other tribes are rather fhort, but in general well formed ;-although their figure denotes more of fubstance than of gracefulness. They are of a bright bay colour, their hair jet black, long, and straight. In common they are rather perfonable, and their features are more indicative of mildness than ferocity; for, although in fome of them the lines of the Tartar face may be traced, the character more generally denoted by the countenance is that of gentlenefs and tranquillity. The eyes are very black, they are fmall, diftant from each other, and deep in the orbits. The cheek-bones fland a little wide, but they are not ftrongly prominent, the forehead tends to fquareness of form, and the eye-brows are heavy. The nofe, though not ftrongly aquiline, when viewed in profile fomewhat approaches that fhape ;- the mouth is of middle fize; the lips of moderate thicknefs; the teeth rather fmall, white and regular; the chin round; the angles of the lower jaw fomewhat wide: from all which you will perceive that the face is rather broad than round, although the contour approaches more to the circular than the long or oval. We did not obferve among them any refemblance of the flat nofe, the wide mouth, thick lips, or large teeth of the negroes.

442

100

fig

fti

fir

CU

for

of bar

the 21

is

IN

Their necks are thick, and in general not fufficiently long to be graceful. The cheft is high and full; the shoulders square, going off at nearly right angles from the neck. The limbs are flefhy and robuft. Upon the whole, they may be faid to be of the figure generally denominated fquare-made, and confequently their form denotes more of strength, than of gracefulness or agility. Still there is a difference between their figure and that of the ftrong-marked muscular subjects of colder and more mountainous regions. Among the Indians of Guiana, the rough lines denoting ftrength are concealed in confequence of the interflices between the muscles being fo filled with fat as to give a general fmoothnefs to the furface; and from the fame caufe, the fine action of the different muscles becomes. lefs obvious, when they are in motion, or under any exertion. Hence, although the figure of an Indian be fquare, full, and robuft, ftill it does not convey precifely that idea of ftrength which attaches to the rough and mufcular frames of the North; and yet is their form even more unlike that of the negroes.

SILLOP

TH

ance

US,

lenal -

PR .

It

alter

File

曲

OF

-19

he

der

· 100

201-

201 g lo

Inets

虚

DES

10

It has happened to me to have frequent opportunities of feeing parties of Indians, and of Africans flanding naked together, and I have always remarked a striking difference in their figure. The negroes have longer necks, and a finer fall of the shoulder. Their chest is not fo full and open. The limbs are not fo ftout, but thinner, and longer in proportion to the body.-The form of the Indians appears close and compact, while that of the negroes is more loofe and flender, and more indicative of the heat and languor of climate. The projecting curvature of the tibia, fo common to the Africans, does not prevail among the Indians. The difference of countenance is ftill more remarkable than the difference of form ; but, as the negro face is familiar to you, I need not enter into a more minute detail of the difcordant features.

The Indians wear no clothing, except a band tied round the waift and brought between the legs to fasten before; fuch as I have mentioned to be in use among the negroes of these colonies. This is worn both by the men and women. Some, who have visited the colonists, have it made of blue cloth; but those who have not had the fame opportunities of procuring cloth, make it of the bark, of a tree. Sometimes, instead of this band, the women use a smail apron about three or four inches square, which being tied round the waste, and left to hang loofe before, ferves by way of a fig-leaf. Thefe aprons they call kways. Among those who have affociated with the colonists, the kway is fometimes made of small beads of different colours, ingenioufly put on threads of cotton, or of the filk-grafs, fo as to give the apron the appearance of being woven in a variety of figures. This is used as high drefs, and is much valued. It happened that I, one day, met a young buckeen, thus ornamented, walking with her mother, and, being defirous to add a fample of the kway to my collection of fpecimens, I made figns to the parent, meaning to afk if she could procure me one; when, without the flightest hesitation, the took off that which was before my eyes, and prefented it to me: the young lady very modeftly, but without blufhes, fupplying its place with the pocket handkerchief which I gave her in exchange.

444

ACCE OF

1 hos

E 118-

h by C ted .

; bit

Uni-

ALL

1 es by

ited

de

fly

they ofed

en-

nd

710

in.

Fê.

100

Form and general appearance of the Indians. Cuftom of pulling the hair from different parts of their bodies. Remarks concerning the indolent habits of the people of the woods. Labour not a natural impulse. Indians fond of spirituous liquors. A degree of method obtains in their intoxication. Polygamy practifed among them. Despotic towards their wives. The women toil at home, and bear the burden when they move abroad. The Buckeen sombre and referved in prefence of the men-are fond of drinking rum. Some observations respecting obesity—also concerning gout.

Berbische.

FROM the inactivity of the Indians they are generally feen to be enbonpoint, and this, as I remarked before, gives them a certain fmoothnefs of form, and of furface; but their fkins have not that velvet foftnefs fo common to the negroes. Their bodies are peculiarly free from hair. Poffeffing an idea, that it is more becoming not to have any hairs, except upon the head, they are in the habit of pulling them out from the chin, the breaft, the armpits, and other parts. The general finoothnefs, thus given to the furface, has led fome travellers, who have been ignorant of the caufe, into the error of confidering this to be their natural appearance; and hence have arifen the ftrange opinions that they differed from Europeans, and were in this refpect a peculiar race of the human fpecies. The inftrument ufed for pulling out the hairs is a fmall piece of wood partially fplit. Thofe who intermix with the colonifts often employ a bit of wire, twifted into a fpiral form, like that which is ufed for making the elaftic hatbands.

10

OÌ

be e fa

01

扣

帮 ÿ

V

節

From the heat of the climate, and the facility of procuring food, the Indians of Guiana are naturally indolent. In every quarter of the globe the great incentive to induftry is either neceffity, intereft, or ambition, Labour, fimply as fuch, is no where a natural impulfe. It is the effect of our real, or imaginary wants. Among the natives of thefe woods, it fprings from neceffity alone, and ceafes with the immediate occafion which calls it forth. They have no intereft in the accumulation of property; and therefore are not pite, and a Iveller.

e, inti

1 Da-

Lita the fi

a Europe

I Tatero

t Blad

西南 unit (

X TAL

tich i i the

s of

TISAS

toin

biliot,

natural

r'ima•

their 200 all's

icu-

e Doi

led to labour in order to obtain wealth. They live under the most perfect equality, and hence are not impelled to industry by that fpirit of emulation, which, in fociety, leads to great and unwearied exertion. Content with their fimple means, they evince no defire to emulate the habits, or the occupations of the colonists : but, on the contrary, feem to regard their toils and cuftoms with a fense of pity or contempt. I have, occafionally, feen parties of them looking on, when our foldiers have been affembled, and going through the various evolutions of their exercise: and they univerfally regarded them with a quiet indifference, or the only fentiment indicated by their features was a kind of contemptuous pity, which was fometimes expressed by a fignificant look, that feemed to fay-" Aye, foolifh people ! you take vaft pains with these things :- but we do them much better, with infinitely lefs trouble."

They are very fond of drinking rum, and eagerly fwallow it to intoxication. But they obferve a kind of method in their drunkennefs; for when they come down to the towns in bodies of confiderable numbers, it is obferved that half of the party will freely devote to Bacchus, while the other half carefully refrain, in order to watch the helplefs; and thefe, when reftored by all-healing Morpheus, are obferved to take their turn of watching, and to guard their late protectors through a fimilar vifit to the deities of turbulence and repofe. They have no pleafure in long fipping, but fwallow large draughts of rum, or drink it quickly, glafs after glafs, till they are unable to move.

The Indians are very arbitrary and defpotic towards their women. Polygamy is practifed among them. Each man takes as many wives as he can conveniently maintain. They are very jealous, and commonly appoint the fenior of their wives as a fpy or guardian over the conduct of the others; but as a fpice of intrigue has found its way even into the wild woods, means have been found to convert the old Duenna into the beft channel of obtaining kind favors from the junior branches of the barem. OV

21

IC

R

Ve

20

All the domestic labour is done by the females, and in their journeyings, from place to place, the women are made to toil under ite pri

HADST

Who a lerreitt

guard Bo

head

These

n m

法 od

12 70

Deim

kautik

dif. Di

oaly

Or

but 1979 focal yth

place

nder

STR.

the burden of whatever they may have to transport. Thus in removing from any place of abode to take up a new home, the different articles of furniture, and all the little variety of implements and utenfils are loaded upon the backs of the women, who follow in filent train, bending under a heavy load, while their imperious lord marches on before unincumbered.

From the rigid government exercifed over them, by the men, the women appear to be fombre and referved. They commonly fit with their backs towards ftrangers, and remain in profound filence when their hufbands are prefent. In their abfence they fhew lefs reftraint, and feem more difpofed to cheetfulnefs and vivacity. Like the men they are very fond of rum, and drink it glafs after glafs, as though it were only water.

I have observed that notwithstanding the great heat of climate, the Indians of South America are not of the same meager appearance as the negroes. From their habits of indolence a portion of sat is deposited under the fkin, which gives them a foft fulnefs of form unlike the rough-lined fparenefs of the negroes, or the flrong-lined vigour of the inhabitants of colder regions : but we did not fee, among the people of the woods, a fingle inftance of the heavy, protruding obefity fo frequent among the luxurious fons of civilized fociety. Figures, it is true, may be found among them as lean as hard-toiling flaves but perhaps no Indian was ever feen palpitating under that oppreffive protuberance of fat, which the bons vivans of Europe, and particularly the beef-eating fubjects of England fo frequently carry before them.

VOL. II. GG

This circumftance may tend to fhew that great obefity is only the effect of indolence, or good living, or of both acting together; and that by a due obfervance of exercife and abftemioufnefs it might, in all cafes, be prevented. Perhaps no Weft India planter ever loft the labour of a flave from his being overloaded with fat: nor did Alexander or Hannibal, after a long and fevere campaign, ever fee their armies thinned in confequence of their foldiers being oppreffed with obefity. Indeed the common labourers of Europe do not often find their toil interrupted by carrying about them a weighty mass of idulgence and luxury.

The fame may be remarked in a great degree with respect to that diffreffing malady The Indian is not detained from the gout. the chafe, the foldier from the march, nor the flave nor the peafant from his toil in the field, by the gnawings of this painful diforder. It is almost wholly confined to the rich and luxurious, and is at once the offspring and punishment of indolence and voluptuousnes; nor would it long remain among the opprobria of medicine, were it poffible to enforce the regimen prefcribed by phyficians:-althoughit muft continue to prevail fo long as forbearance, from habits of indulgence, shall be deemed a greater punishment than the painful tortures of the disease.

But what hath all this to do with our journey upon the Berbifche river ?—methinks I hear you exclaim ! Not much truly—yet I would hope it is not a digreffion beyond the bounds of our preliminaries.

14 m

服

the

tid

fing

The state

Lie

南

日前山

pin

anti

w that

ence;

; and

od ab

GG2

The party are conducted from Arends to Johanna by Mynheer Fenner. Journey across the Savanna and forest. Chase of a mule. Visit to an Indian Village. A wretched object of disease. A plantation of reeds for making arrows. Trees of wild cinnamon. The party dine at Johanna :-Sleep at Helvetia. Cordially welcomed by Mynheer Freinde. Honored with peculiar marks of attention by Mynheer Freinde. Honored with peculiar marks of attention by Mynheer Fenner. A comfortless night. Unhappy feelings concerning an ebon nymph. Visit to Mynheer Scholten at the old town. Apologies of M. le vieu Fiscal. His excesses attributed to "levelling bumpers." A purchase from a handsome Indian woman. River current. Visit to the plantation Daargradt --a colonial estate-perhaps " prize property." Alarm of an old Hollander on seeing a party of British officers. A wretched night in consequence of musquitoes.

Berbifche. To return with you to our tour, let me tell you that M. Fenner very kindly met us at Arends in the morning, with a fine mule, and a whole troop of flaves and horfes to conduct us again to his home at Johanna. According to the ufual cuftom, coffee was brought to us at 7 o'clock on leaving our hammocks, and without waiting for a more fubftantial breakfaft, we made the round of the plantation, and walked to fee fome Tonquin bean trees, which were growing upon the eftate; then mounted our ponies, and put ourfelves on the march, attended part of the way by M. Mittelholfter, with whom we had been guests for the night.

et a

TOTH

the state

Th.

(in and the second

1

1

let

11 d

đ

20

基

in the

00, le

el.

The party formed a motley group, confifting of Dutch planters, British officers, and naked Africans marching across an immense waste furrounded with wild woods, under a fcorching and vertical fun, with M. Fenner our friendly conductor, feated upon a prancing mule, leading the way as commander at the head of the squadron. His grotesque figure and appearance would have highly diverted you; for, worthy man, he was not barely a Hollander on horfeback-but a gros-culottes dreffed in a white coat and broad brimmed hat, capering upon a little flender mule, and in danger of falling off at every ftep : indeed it was evident to the whole corps, that if they should venture to move quicker than the Dutch pas grave, their leader would foon fall in the rear : - nor had we gone far before the prediction was verified; and our decanted conductor took a foft feat on the parterre ; leaving Mademoiselle mulet to kick her heels in air across the wide favanna. Finding that our chief had fallen without being wounded, the whole troop was quickly engaged in a chafe acrossthe wide plain, to overtake their captain's charger. At this moment a rapid thought winged its way to England, and I wifhed I could have placed a picture before you, reprefenting your friend occupied, amidft a group of horfe and foot, planters, officers, and flaves—Englifb, Africans, and Dutcb, fcampering over a wild favanna, enclofed by the deep forefts of Guiana, in purfuit of a South American mule. We fortunately furrounded the animal before the had made her way into the woods, and, after a wide gallop about the plain, the was brought back into the ranks.

It now became a queftion, who fhould mount the mule; for Mynheer Fenner, though not hurt, had grown pallid and nervous, and was in truth, fo bad a horfeman, that there was not the leaft probability of his remaining many minutes upon her back, if he fhould again attempt to ride her: and to leave our captain, our guide, and our hoft behind us, to walk to Johanna, could not be endured. In this dilemma it fell to my lot to undertake the management of the frifky mule, throughout the remainder of the journey; — and, whether her capering fit was fubdued by the chafe about the favanna, or whether fhe preferred an English to a Dutch rider, it were of no confequence to determine: — she carried me pleasantly and quietly, and we arrived at Johanna without further accident or difaster.

455

Omen O

gland, e be.

pied,

1 fin

Juid,

ed by ofa

ile.

: Die

203

Itte

K

4

G

25

(r

14 10

121

11

F

le

On our way we were conducted to an Indian village, built at the edge of the favanna, just within the border of the forest. Very few of the people were in their houfes. They were engaged in the chafe in fearch of provisions, or had concealed themfelves in the woods, upon feeing us approach. In one of the huts we found an old woman wretchedly difeafed, left quite alone, and lying naked in a hammock. She feemed to be only a breathing fkeleton: her countenance was deeply Hippocratic: eruptions and foul ulcers disfigured herbody, and rendered her whole perfon a perfect object of horror: fhe was unable to move-almost to fpeak or to breathe, and exhibited altogether a most striking example of human misery.

In the neighbourhood of the huts we faw fome of the fine reeds growing, which are used by the Indians for making their arrows. They appeared to have been planted about the village for the convenience of furnifhing a ready fupply.

456

As we rode through the woods, fome large trees were pointed out to us as being a fpecies of wild cinnamon. The bark had fomewhat the flavour of that fpice, and on being broken refembled it in odour, but it was very rough and coarfe.

We reached the Johanna eftate three hours before the negroes, who had been fent round by way of the river with our boat, the journey by water having been above four hours longer than we had made it by land, notwithftanding our delay in the favanna.

Having gone to the extent of our expedition, and it only remaining to us to return down the river amidft the fame unvaried fcenery we had paffed, we became anxious to reach New Amfterdam and the fort, with as little delay as poffible, and, therefore, took an early dinner with M. Fenner in company with his party of Dutch ladies, and M. Paùels from Arends; and in the afternoon fet off for Fort-Naffau, intending to hang our hamOFF large

pecies

Inter

brokes

tough

time

o fer

i, the four ud,

nā,

28-) 作

ried

with

took 剛 dels

off

130

mocks at Mynheer Scholten's until the mor-But in this we were difappointed from row. the failure of the tide; confequently, finding at the dusk of evening, that we were not likely to reach the old town, we purfued our marooning fystem, and put into the first port we could make. This happened to be at the plantation Helvetia, where we were received with great kindnefs and civility by Mynheer Coffee was presented on our ar-Freinde. rival-foon afterwards the fupper-board was plentifully fpread; and, although unexpected intruders, we found excellent accommodations for the night.

We did not enjoy the fociety of Mynheer Freinde fo much as we could have withed, in confequence of our limited knowledge of his native language—yet, by means of the many good things he gave us, he made himfelf extremely well underftood. The eftate is large, and is the property of Mynheer Freinde jointly with three other gentlemen, one of whom refides in London—the two others at Amfterdam.

I might have remarked to you that at the Johanna plantation, we were this day indulged with the luxury of having two young negroes, and an Indian girl, placed behind us waving lime boughs around our heads, the whole time of dinner, in order to keep us cool, and prevent us from being annoyed by infects, while we were eating; and, in addition to this general protection, I was farther indebted to the flattering partiality of Mynheer Fenner, for the diftinguished honor of having a feparate flave stationed at my elbow with an Indian fan, with express orders to keep me cool, and guard me from the musquitoes.

At Helvetia we were not troubled with infects; but in defiance of the convenience of our accommodations, fome unealy fymptoms, difplayed on the part of the major domo regarding an ebon nymph who had ferved our coffee in the afternoon, and an unhappy fpirit of annoying his fufpicions exhibited by one of our comrades, prevented us from fleeping, and caufed us all to pafs a diffurbed and reftlefs night.

We left Helvetia with the early tide, in order to breakfaft at the old town; and accordingly arrived at nine o'clock at Mynheer Scholten's. During breakfaft we were vifited by the old fifcal, who, looking extremely humble and ab

h

b?

ha

CTI

10 100 10

an 21 fo

id

100

of

CU

of 20 11 fh

m

(ii

PI

abaſhed, begged us to believe that he felt it highly incumbent upon him to offer multitudes of apologies, for his rude behaviour on the day we had dined at his houfe, adding that he had been extremely afflicted, from the moment he had been told of it; and, in explanation, afcribing all his loud noife and political violence to the levelling bumpers he had taken of claret and Madeira. We likewife met, at breakfaft, another of the oldeft inhabitants of the colony, an uncle of Mynheer Scholten, whofe aged and venerable figure commanded great refpect for his perfon, while it impreffed a favorable idea of the falubrity of the climate.

by

with

e oi

18,

e.

TI

pirit

eQł

100 the state

.11

10-ol-

the

ad

After fatisfying the calls of appetite, we took a walk into the town, and in the courfe of our promenade had an opportunity of procuring a very beautiful lion monkey from one of the handfomeft Indian women we had feen, and who, by figns and geftures, gave us to underftand, that means might be devifed, fhould it be very anxioufly defired, to make the miftrefs the companion of the little animal, at our quarters at the fort.

Before noon we were again in the boat purfuing our journey down the river. Having the current in our favor, we were carried rapidly on, and were enabled to make longer tides than when journeying the oppofite way. In proceeding up the river, the flaves had found it neceffary to avoid the centre, and to keep the boat as near as poffible to the fhore; but in returning, they gladly fought the middle of the channel, in order to avail themfelves of the current. As the evening ftole on, the return of tide overpowered the frefh water flream, and, by putting a ftop to our progrefs, compelled us to feek quarters at an earlier hour than we wifhed. The plantation Daargradt being neareft, we dropped our anchor there, and, without ceremony, took up our home for the night.

Daargradt is one of the colonial effates, and is fubject to a queftion of fequeftration; it being yet in doubt whether this plantation, together with fome others fimilarly circumftanced, may not be condemned as public property, for the benefit of the captors. The effate is extensive, and cultivated by a numerous gang of flaves, who are attached as the ftock of the plantation, and confequently make a part of the property. My mind anticipates the idea which fuggefts itfelf to you upon this fubject; but you will not expect that I fhould pi

fe

W

T

W

P

offer comments upon the prospect of sharing prize-money from such a source.

ere catile

ke lorg

fite vi

ives ha

Sadro

to light of

Reider

and I

in the 當前

man

ther how adtheim

od, with

e aight.

Atates

tion; it

circum-

public

The

a numit

d 25 m

Irmake

icipaté

oon the

I thous

The ufual difficulty refpecting language would have occurred to us, from the manager not knowing either Englifh or French; but, fortunately, a gentleman I had met at Mynheer Ongre's, happened to be at Daargradt, who, with great kindnefs, undertook the troublefome tafk of interpreter; and procured for us the beft accommodations of the houfe, as well for the evening, as throughout the night.

An old Hollander, who was living in a fort of quiet retirement upon the effate, was feized with fad feelings of alarm at our arrival. Seeing a party of English officers step out of the boat, so very unexpectedly, he could not divest his mind of the sentiment of danger which attaches to the approach of an enemy. He had long been an active supporter of the high democratic party in the seven United Provinces; and, on account of the state of politics, had fled from his country in the year 1787, when the Duke of Brunswick marched a Pruffian army into Holland to restore the rights and privileges of the Stadtholder. A confcious feeling renewed all the poor old man's terrors, and begat the impreffion that we came as foes to difturb him in his peaceful retirement. He felt that he was still adverse to the Stadtholderian interest, and, perhaps, was not aware that age had stamped an imbecility upon his political opinions, as well as caufed his hoary locks to excite only fentiments of compaffion. The timidity of fecond childhood was upon him. His years were many, and it might be faid of him, as of the vieu fifcal, that the high torrent of guilt had ceafed to flow in his veins. We affured him of his fafety, and endeavored to affuage his fears, by obferving that whatever might have been formerly, or still further, might now be his opinions, he had nothing to fear. With difficulty we did prevail upon him to take his feat at the fupper table, but he could not command enough of felf-poffeffion to eat: he was agitated, looked uneafy and alarmed, fixed his eye on the fcarlet uniform, and exhibited general marks of reftlefsnefs, and apprehenfion !- The fupper-cloth was fcarcely removed, when he retired-and we faw him no more. Soon after the old Batavian left us, we went to our hammocks; but paffed a fad reftless night, owing to our being affailed by hofts of mulquitoes, whole venomous bitings wholly deprived us of fleep.

The party leave Daargradt with the morning tide, intending to proceed to Mynheer Robolo/ki's. Call at Essendam. Kindly detained by M. Abbensets. Make a visit of acknowledgment to Mynheer Schneider. Cards introduced after dinner at Essendam. Evening promenade to Sans Souci. Wretched annoyance of musquitoes. Afflieted appearance of the party. Departure from Essendam. Conelusion of the expedition. General remarks. Novelty and hospitality. Civility an inadequate term. Mode of travelling highly commodious. Sameness of scenery relieved. Pellucid water of the river. Novel appearance of the forest, the boat, &c. A floating island. Difficulties ideal. Insets not troubless in the woods. A peculiar mark of politeness.

1,

t

e

-

Berbifche:

W E rofe early, in order to make the round of the plantation and the negro yard previous to our departure, and before ten o'clock we took our feats in the boat, availing ourfelves of the early tide, with the intention of hanging our hammocks at Mynheer Robolofki's in the evening—and of proceeding on the morrow to New Amflerdam. M. Robolofki had made a vifit to the Britifh officers at the fort, and had very preffingly invited us to his plantation; which we underftood to be fituated on 'the oppofite bank of the river, between Mynheer Abbenfet's and the town, and very romicalizative for becoming the laft place, rell upon our excurtion. A links pall nooh conveniently for becoming the last place of rest upon our excursion. A little past noon we arrived at Effendam, intending to make only an en paffant call upon Mynheer Abbenfets; who received us with all the kindness and cordiality of a friend ; nor would he hear of our going further, but infifted that we should pass the remainder of the day with him; and, the more effectually to reconcile the delay, he affured us that the tide would not carry us fo far as M. Roboloski's by night. Finding this to be the cafe, we yielded to his kind folicitations : and the more readily from our knowing that the town and the fort were still within the morrow's journey; and from it having been proved to us by the teft of experience, that neither shore of the river could fupply us with more defirable quarters. Having agreed to pass the night at Essendam, we refted for a fhort time, and then made a little excursion across the river to offer thanks to M. Schneider, for the information he had given us respecting our journey; and to see the fugar works at Mr. Blair's eftate. As foon as we returned, a well-ferved dinner with plenty of good wines were fet before us; and the generous Abbenfets warmly bade us welcome. It is not the cuftom in these colonies, as in England, to confume the whole of the afternoon over the bottle. Wine is taken liberally at dinner-time, and the party withdraw from the table very foon after. At M. Abbenfet's, cards were introduced almost as foon as we had dined, and we played whist until obliquity tempered the fcorching rays of the fun, when we engaged in a pleafant promenade about the plantation, and proceeded as far as Sans Souci, the adjoining estate, to call on Mynheer Abbenfet's nephew.

464

Soon after we returned from our walk, the fupper-board was fpread, and to crown the evening, fome very fine old Hollands, and the focial pipe were introduced. You will perhaps be furprized to learn, that I was the only one who could not enjoy this part of the repaft : moft of the officers have acquired the habit of fmoking, and fome of them have become fuch adepts in this, I cannot but add, dirty and inelegant cuftom—however focial—that they can already drink gin, and whif a pipe or fagar almoft as well as any femper-fmoking Dutchman of the colony ! You will probably envy them the accomplifhment as little as I do ! We went to our hammocks very foon after

VOL. II.

ION-

milit

Ab

ind.

he

L'Tte

谢 ach.

4

S.

hon

With

tom

t of

Ter

19.

am,

de a inks

had

59]

loon

mil

ad

-154

in

fupper, hoping, by a long fleep, to relieve the heavy fatigue of two diffurbed and reftlefs nights; but we were fadly difappointed ! the tormenting mulquitoes again belieged us, and the third night proved no lefs fleeplefs than the two preceding. The heat and itching from former bitings-the pain of new and acute punctures-and the still more wearifome buzzing of the infects in our ears combined in fuch utter annoyance, as not only to deprive us of fleep, but of all rest and ease. Even the quiet of lying still was unattainable. The irritation, caufed by the pain and exceffive itching, rendered us quite feverifh, and with the wearinefs and languor arifing from want of fleep, made us really ill. At length, grown impatient of fuffering, and finding it impoffible to reft in our hammocks, we got up, walked about the room, washed with cold water, rubbed ourfelves with orange juice, and with limes, then opened the windows, shook our hammocks, beat about the room with cloths and handkerchiefs, and tried all the various means of driving out the infects, and obtaining relief: but in vain, all our efforts failed of fuccefs. Immitigable torment purfued us, and we were compelled to drag out a most wearifome and comfortless night.

refile

! the

s, and

tothe

omfor.

t pune.

ting of 11世紀

nez,

uer d itation,

g, lede

mil

mide

u of

d in ot the l quis, then

DOURS

hand.

eans of

THE

fenels.

e WEI

ne ani

Early in the morning we left our room oppreffed with feverifh feelings, and a fenfe of general ftupor :—and almost blind ! Our eye-lids were fwoln and heavy—our whole faces tumefied and inflamed. It were difficult to convey to you a just idea of our afflicted appearance. Perhaps if you call to your imagination the visage of a fot, after he has devoted two or three whole nights to the bottle; then, before he has had time to fleep off his intoxication, fubject him to an attack of "St. Anthony," you may conceive a tolerable representation of the matin-countenances of your friend, and his fleeples musquito-bitten comrades.

We breakfafted with M. Abbenfets, and at nine o'clock embarked for New Amfterdam. The negroes took no reft between Effendam and the town. They cheerfully pulled the oars for five hours without intermiffion, in order to reach the landing place before the turn of the tide; and all the relief they fought, throughout the whole of this time, was that of occafionally taking up a handful of water from the river, and pouring it upon their oars, to prevent them from becoming hot and dry, and thereby bliftering their hands. At two o'clock on the 23d of June we finished our journey, and were again fafely on shore at the government landing-place at New Amsterdam.

H H 2

You will feel that the excursion was, altogether, one of high interest and gratification: but I have proceeded in such minute, and (I fear you will fay) tedious detail, that very little remains to be offered by way of general remark.

The novelty which prefented itfelf to our observation was not more striking than the unbounded hospitality, which universally met us at every place of call. Although unexpected intruders, we were every where received with a cordial urbanity, which is very inadequately expressed by the common term civility. It feemed to be the ftudy of all, who should most ferve, and oblige us. Not fatisfied with administering to us the best accommodations of the house, whilft we remained with them, a generous regard for our comfort extended their liberality yet further, and they either openly, or privately, contributed to our convenience, by adding to our travelling fupply. Porter, wine, and fpirits, food and

fr

Ge

10

61

01

fruit, and plantains for the negroes, all found their way into the boat.

Tran

11 25

53 tit in

110 112

first?

it bi

山山

19-113

16-ery O

em

Not

i.

1210-

:00

21

to

ling I

Our mode of travelling was in itself highly commodious, and afforded many facilities. The party fat together as comfortably as in a fmall room on fhore : we advanced at cafe, and were fcarcely fenfible of any motion : by the awning we were protected from the fun; and from the open windows at the fides, we had always a stream of cool air. Enough of room was afforded for provifions, wine, clothes, and all other stores of the journey; also convenient stowage for whatever specimens we might collect. Together with these accommodations a secure harbour was found for the boat at every plantation, and our flaves either fed themfelves from the provisions of the veffel, or foraged among the negroes of the eftates; fo that we had no care concerning either fervants or cattle, carriage or roads.

The variety in point of fcenery you will have perceived was not very great, but the inanimate fameness of wood and water was pleafantly relieved by the occasional openings of the different plantations. In some parts of the river, the water was fingularly still and clear, and with its fylvan borders exhibited a novelty of peculiar feature. Its fmooth and lucid furface formed a perfect mirror, fo completely reflecting every thing around, that it feemed difficult to discover how we were fupported-by what means fufpended, as it were, in the centre of space. At the fides of the river no line of termination could be diftinguished. It was not seen where the water ceafed, or where the land commenced; but the trees, on each border, being within the edge of the water, were fo diffinctly reflected as to convey the femblance of a foreft, growing upwards and downwards from the fame roots. The boat was reflected in a fimilar manner; as was likewife the unclouded canopy of the fkies. The watery medium made no impreffion upon the eye-but the open azure expanfe was feen the fame, whether we looked upwards or downwards. We seemed fuspended in the centre of a hollow globe, having the fame concave arch above and below, with an inverted and an upright forest on either hand. At one fpot we met a fmall island, floating down the fill river, with a variety of plants and thrubs growing upon it; and from the water being invisible, the perfect reflection of bild :

1

ATT -

山山ら or, fa

l, the e mere

大臣

ind.

he 111.

h naer;

pres.

2 23.

this little plantation gave it the appearance of a fmall clump of young trees calmly moving in the midft of fpace, with each plant growing perpendicularly upwards and downwards, in precife refemblance. If we held out a hand, or an oar over the fide of the boat, the fame was feen below, without difcovering the limpid medium between them. In fhort, we feemed only to move, like our globe itfelf, in ethereal fpace.

The difficulties which many of the gentlemen of the colony had urged, as neceffarily attendant upon the expedition, proved to be Scarcely did any obstacle oppose itideal. felf to our convenience-none to our progress: nor until the last three nights had any thing occurred to interrupt the full enjoyment of the excursion. Indeed the torment of these nights ferved only as a variety, which placed in a ftronger light the many facilities we had met with; for, amidit the woods, and at the eftates far up the river, we had almost wholly escaped the annoyance of infects. Musquitoes did not seem to inhabit the depths of the forest. In these parts we had also found the air cooler, and the land lefs heated than where it was cleared of wood, and more open.

I must not neglect to inform you of a cuftom which we observed to be very prevalent, it being an act of politeness which, to Europeans, seemed no less fingular than novel. As a mark of attention the gentlemen of the different plantations usually accompanied us to our fleeping room, at the time of our going to bed, when, on taking their leave for the night, they concluded the compliments of the day in the following terms, viz. "S'il y a d'autre chose, Messieurs, dont vous avez befoin, il n'en faut que demander au Garçoncela n' est pas mon affaire *." This was true West Indian complaifance. It was a branch of hospitality that was not familiar to us, being an accommodation not usually found in the list of European civilities. If your ignorance of tropical habits, and the common cuftoms of flavery should prevent you from comprehending the extent of it, ask me, when I return to England, and I will explain it to you more fully.

Adieu.

* If there is any thing elfe you wish for, you need only ask the boy: that does not concern me !

END OF THE SECOND VOLUME.

Strahan and Prefton, Frinters-Street, London.

